Last August three measures dealing with the licensing of bankers, the right of unlicensed bankers to appeal to the courts, and the right of any person to challenge a provincial statute in the courts, were disallowed.

Act Blocked Foreclosures.

The Home Owners' Security Act, disallowed yesterday, prohibited the start or continuation of all proceedings for the foreclosure or sale of a farm home, which includes the quarter section on which the house is located, and prohibited foreclosure in the case of all urban homes unless the creditor paid the debtor $2,000. It covered mortgages negotiated up to March, 1938.

The Securities Tax Act imposed a tax of two per cent. of the principal sum of all mortgages and was payable on June 1, 1938, with a penalty of five per cent. of the tax for every month of default.

A statement giving elaborate particulars of all mortgages was required to be furnished on or before June 1, 1938, with a fine up to $10 a day for default in furnishing this statement.

This tax was to be imposed on all persons holding Alberta mortgages, regardless of their domicile or residence and regardless of the real value of the securities or of the land to which the security related or of the income being derived therefrom, the Justice Minister stated.

Certain exemptions were made in favor of residents of Alberta, depending upon the extent to which they were affected by the Provincial income tax.

Creditors chiefly affected would be Dominion Corporations, such as insurance, trust and loan companies doing business throughout the Dominion.

Justice Minister Lapointe declared the Acts were "unjust in that they confiscate the property of one group of persons for another group and authorize and encourage repudiation by debtors regardless of their ability to pay their debts.

Quebec Padlock Law Is Under Review

OTTAWA, June 16 (CP) — The Quebec padlock law aimed at Communistic activity in the province is being reviewed by the law branch of the justice department along with seven Alberta measures dealing with debt adjustment, tax recovery, bank taxation and the limitations act.

Deadline for decision concerning disallowance of the padlock law is July 8, which is one year from the time the justice department received a certified copy of the act.

There was no information available here as to when the decision would be made on either the padlock law or the Alberta acts. Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced last night that the Alberta home owners security act and the Alberta securities tax had been disallowed.

Trouble At Childs

TORONTO, June 16.—(CP).— A Child's restaurant here closed its doors suddenly at 10 a.m. to-day as a result of labor trouble and the Toronto office of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance said strikes would be called at noon today in two other Child's establishments, both on Yonge street.

Archie Johnstone, union organizer, said the restaurant chain had discharged eight employees for joining the union and, despite three days' negotiations, refused to re-employ them.

U.S. Prepares Definite Plan For World Disarmament

Chamberlain States Britain In Favor Then Floats 400 Million War Loan

LONDON, June 16 (CP).—Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today that the United States government had intimated it was preparing to make definite proposals to secure world disarmament.

Asked by Arthur Henderson, Labor, if Great Britain were willing to "join with the United States government in making definite proposals with a view to securing a halt in the arms race," Mr. Chamberlain replied tersely:—make an attempt."

"The United States government have suggested they are going to

The Prime Minister refused to elaborate on this brief statement.

The discussion was opened when Mr. Henderson, son of the late Arthur Henderson who was president of the world disarmament conference, asked the prime minister whether the British government agreed with a recent speech by Secretary Cordell Hull favoring disarmament.

Britain in Favor

Mr. Chamberlain replied:

"Yes," sir. His Majesty's government are in full agreement with the sentiments expressed by Mr. Cordell Hull in his recent speech and they are always ready to co-operate with other nations on the subject.

Mr. Chamberlain is known to favor the "qualitative" type of disarmament, such as abolition of the most deadly kinds of weapons—perhaps bombing planes.

This, he believes, is the type of disarmament most likely to escape evasion.

Great Britain herself is in the midst of a gigantic re-armament program and recently has taken no leading attempts at disarmament in view of unsettled world conditions.

Only to-day she floated an £80,000,000 ($400,000,000) loan to help finance the re-armament program, cost of which originally was set at £1,500,000,000 ($7,500,000,000) but now it is expected to exceed that by 50 per cent.

Many influential Britons believe disarmament can come only after a general appeasement has been reached with dictator-ruled nations and that this appeasement is not likely to come until Great Britain is fully re-armed.

Police Pay For Shot

TORONTO, June 16 (CP).—Members of the Toronto Police Force are contributing $2 each to pay off a $5,500 judgment against Constable William Mitchell, who shot a citizen by mistake a while ago, it was learned today. Some of the constables felt the Police Commission should have assumed the damages.

Heiress Gives Up Million To Wed Clerk

ROCHESTER, New York, June 16 — (C.P.) — A pretty New York debutante, daughter of millionaire parents, calmly gave up her inheritance of "close to $1,000,000" today to marry the man of her choice, a $21 a week clerk in a county home.

The ceremony was performed in the home of the groom's mother and brother here today as the bride's parents made frenzied last-minute efforts to halt the wedding.

The bride is Rosemary Webster, 21, daughter of Dr. David H. Webster, prominent New York and Connecticut physician, and Mrs. Webster, a cousin of the late Major General Elwell Stephen Otis.

The groom is Paul Gilson, 23, of Canton, N.Y., son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Gilson. He is a clerk in the St. Lawrence County Welfare Home.

Miss Webster, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. David H. Webster of Stamford, Conn., had been sought since she disappeared from the campus of St. Lawrence University, where she was to have received a degree at commencement exercises Monday. Dr. Webster is surgeon director of the Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital.

Meanwhile, Rochester police revealed they had received a call from Mrs. Webster, in Stamford, asking them to attempt to stop the marriage.

Mrs. Webster, in a telephone conversation with reporters said "He is a poor ignorant boy and she is a New York society debutante. Oh, how I wish I could stop this."

Mr. Webster said the girl would inherit "more than $1,000,000" if she did not go through with the wedding.

Ontario Saves Counties $54,000 A Year

(By a Staff Reporter.)

COBOURG, June 16. — Old-age pensions cost Ontario more than $12,000,000 in the last fiscal year, and since November 1, 1929, the total disbursement in the province has been in excess of $72,000,000, Percy Stinson of Millbrook, secretary of the Old-Age Pensions and Mothers' Allowances Boards for Northumberland and Durham, informed the Counties Council in a comprehensive and interesting report on Wednesday.

Mr. Stinson's review dealt particularly with the number and amounts of pensions and allowances, and the personnel of the separate boards for the constituent counties, and also surveyed the totals for the entire province.

In March, 1937, Ontario had 55,950 old-age pensioners, an increase of 1,910 after deducting deaths and cancellations. "It does not appear that we have yet reached the peak of pensioners. During the fiscal year there were 9,019 new applications of which 8,166 were granted. In 1929 it was estimated that the peak would be in the neighborhood of 23,000. There has also been a steady flow of requests for increases in pensions, the reasons being the increase in the age of the pensioner, his small savings being entirely used up."

The total payments of pensions in the United Counties for the last fiscal year amounted to $241,345.83, of which 10 per cent., $24,134.58 was paid out of the Counties' treasury. There are thirty-seven counties in Ontario, and the pensions payment for Northumberland-Durham stands fourth, exceeded by York, Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, and Simcoe.

Mothers' Allowances.

"The statistics on mothers' allowances show a steady increase in the number of applications, although the increase was not so great this year as in the previous year," Mr. Stinson reported. "In the previous year mothers with one child were included for the first time. The Commission dealt with 2,408 applications this year, of which 1,007 were granted and 1,401 refused. One of the chief functions of the Commission in dealing with the numerous problems which naturally arise among so many families."

"Perhaps the most notable event of the year as it affects these counties was the action of the Government in assuming full cost of Mothers' Allowances. Without taking into consideration the expected increase each year, and based on the amounts collected under the present fiscal year the municipalities will save the following amounts: Cities, $1,255,360; counties, $834,128; towns, $28,000; total, $2,118,140. The amount saved by the municipalities will increase each year as the number of beneficiaries under the Act increases."

$13,775,000 Deficit Closest To Balance In 8 Years; Business Slump Reversed

Dunning Brands Debt-Free Money, No Interest Ideas "Hoary Fallacy"; Good Crop Signs Boon To Recovery

OTTAWA, June 16 (CP).—A deficit of $13,775,000 for the government's fiscal year ending March 31, 1938, was reported to the House of Commons today by Finance Minister Dunning in his annual budget statement.

It was featured by a reiteration of the minister's faith in sound money policies, a review of Canada's trade and finances and an optimistic appraisal of economic trends for the future.

Total revenues were the highest in Canada's history, $516,692,000 and expenditures, $30,467,000. That meant an increase in the net debt of $13,775,000, the nearest Canada has come to a balanced budget in recent years. The deficit in 1936-37 was $77,851,000 and in 1935-36, $159,989,000.

"While naturally I am disappointed to have to report any deficit," the finance minister stated, "I believe there is cause for gratification over this close approach to a balanced budget after eight years of very large deficits.

"It will be recalled that for 1936-37 the realized deficit was $77,851,000 and that when I delivered the budget speech last year I did not venture to forecast a deficit for 1937-38 of less than $35,000,000.

"That we have done so much better than that forecast is all the more gratifying when we consider the abnormal item of $5,000,000 added to the annuities reserve and the substantial unanticipated increase in our expenditures resulting from the crop failure in Western Canada."

A Hoary Fallacy.

It was on the general subject of monetary reform that Mr. Dunning struck the highlight of his speech. He called it a "hoary fallacy" to suppose governments should pay no interest or could issue debt-free money. As Minister of Finance, nothing would make his task easier than to issue credit against the wealth of the nation, but to him it was an inflationary proposal that would not lead to a sound and healthy prosperity.

Mr. Dunning hoped the depression in the United States was scraping the bottom and that remedial policies would be successful. In Great Britain and European countries, the armament race should exert a short-term acceleration of business, "although none of us look forward with confidence to the more distant results of a program which involves so heavy a concentration to the resources of the leading nations upon preparation for war."

The Finance Minister then continued: "Any improvement in conditions abroad will strongly reinforce the influence of the favorable forces which are at work within our country. Our internal economy is sound, our price structure is in reasonable balance, ample credit accommodation is available for further expansion, and our people need not be affected by fear and uncertainty.

Crops Lend Hope.

Two Raids Net 39 Gamblers In Costly Setup

TORONTO, June 16. — (CP)— Manny Feder, alleged overlord of a Toronto gambling ring, was on $3,000 bail today after a double raid on the Brown Derby, a suburban resort, and Feder's luxurious suite in the Royal York Hotel. Thirteen other persons, along with Feder, are charged with keeping a common gaming house and 25 others are charged with being "found in."

Combined squads of city and provincial police swooped down from a remote assembly place 30 miles north of the city early last night. A squad directed personally by C. L. Snyder, K.C., chief crown counsel for Ontario, battered in steel and oak doors at the Brown Derby and arrested 39 persons.

Simultaneously city police under Inspector Scott took over Feder's hotel room and nabbed the jaunty gambler as he entered whistling. Feder is alleged to have rushed at the inspector with a telephone he tore from the wall. He faces an additional charge of obstructing police.

Key Opens Revealing Vault

On his way to the station Feder is alleged to have thrown away a key which police recovered. With it they entered a vault in Feder's apartment at the hotel and seized equipment and cash. Among the device found there are said to be sets of "top and bottom" dice, which never roll seven up. The officers were reported to have found $7,000 in the vault.

Customers and operators at the Brown Derby were removed to headquarters in two police vans. Most of the persons in the establishment were found huddled in corners as the officers broke down the entrances with crow bars. Half a dozen were said to have been found in a secret passage leading to a sewer and others were caught as they emerged from a tunnel outside the building near the Humber River west of Toronto.

Thousands of dollars worth of equipment and $2,000 in cash were seized at the Derby and taken to the Attorney-General's offices in the legislature buildings. One officer reported he found $1,400 in cash at the mouth of the secret tunnel leading to a parking lot.

Major Fracas, War or Revolt Seen For America May '41

LONDON, June 16. — (CP). — Some major upheaval, possibly war or a revolution, will envelop America on May 11, 1941.

The prediction comes from two expert astrologers who have accepted a challenge from Dr. Spencer Jones, astronomer royal, to predict well in advance the significance of a series of important plentary conjunctions on that day.

Dr. Jones ridiculed the claim that disposition of the planets at the moment a person is born has a direct influence on his personality and that by studying their positions at any time after birth, guidance for the future can be obtained.

"Astrology is rubbish," he said.

On May 11, 1941, Dr. Jones said the heavens would offer the following phenomenon: Mercury will be in conjunction with Venus, Saturn and Uranus; Venus will be in conjunction with Jupiter and Uranus. There will be a full moon. Saturn will be in conjunction with Venus and Mercury and Jupiter will be in conjunction with Uranus a few days previously. Mercury, Venus, Jupiter, Saturn and Uranus will all be close to the sun.

Nella Webb declared interpretation of these signs would depend upon the country about which the prediction was being made.

"But I would say that they mean some kind of war or revolution in America, religious or labor in origin," she said:

Mountie Of "Mad Trapper" Fame "Captures" Londoners Also

London, June 16 (CP-Cable). LANCE CORPORAL Norman George McDowell of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, stationed at the door of Canada House today for the first time, was surrounded by a large crowd blocking the entrance, seeking autographs, and taking photographs.

London's reception to the mountie, who spent seven of the last years above the Arctic Circle, was unrestrainedly enthusiastic.

The Evening News ran two pictures of Corporal McDowell and his wife and streamered its story: "A mountie exchanges lonely Yukon beat for Canada House job."

The Star used a story and one picture and said of the man who helped hunt the "mad trapper" of Rat River: "Lance Corporal and Mrs. McDowell now are house hunting. They are scared of tubes (the underground railways) and go everywhere on the buses."

Jap Airmen Abandon Bombs For Bags To Plug Dikes

SHANGHAI, June 16 (A.P.). — The Yellow River flood fed by a steady downpour of rain unrolled a ribbon of death and disaster 10 to 20 miles wide and 90 miles long across the flat plains of Honan Province to-day. Chinese and Japanese armies locked in combat on the Peiping-Hankow front fled before the torrent which Japanese now estimate will take a toll of 50,000 lives.

Advices from Hankow, the provisional Chinese capital, said the relentless flood had penetrated beyond Fukow, 70 miles south of Kaifeng on the Lunghai Railway and 90 miles south of the Yellow River.

Sweeping over thousands of acres of farmland, driving peasants and armies before it, flood was declared by Japanese despatches to have affected 2,000 villages with an aggregate population of 500,000.

Japanese bombing planes, temporarily diverted from their death-dealing activities, dropped thousands of empty bags, ordinarily used for trenches and machine-gun nests, into the flood area for use by Japan's army engineers in repairing breached dikes.

While the main course of the flood was south-eastward, another peril was reported north of the river where Japanese said Chinese trops fleeing westward from Chengchow had cut new holes in the dikes of the Tsin River.

Tsinyang, about 50 miles northwest of Chengchow and on the opposite side of the Yellow River, was menaced, they said. The outskirts of Tsinyang were under water and the Japanese garrison was struggling to barricade the centre of the town.

Sending Out the Invitations.

YES—that is a common enough custom, and a good one—sending out the invitations. It is one way of telling people you desire to have them present; a sure way of letting them know they are welcome.

That is what people in Peterborough have been doing in recent days when they have been forwarding copies of The Examiner's Vacation number to their friends in other places.

This paper knows exactly how many copies of this edition were printed and knows in a genera way how they have been purchased, but in order to make certain they were being mailed away we asked Mr. Lacheur to kindly keep a check on the number going through the post office.

His report is that to date there have been over 3,000 copies going through the post office here and in other post offices in the district the same process has been going on. There have been bags of them sent to United States and a fairly large number have been going in the mails to Britain.

You have friends to whom this paper ought to be sent and right now when holiday plans are being made would be the right time to attend to it. It is still possible to secure copies at The Examiner Office.

Packers Feel Stevens' Whip Lash

Says Toronto Rules Stock Prices, Farmers Kidded

OTTAWA, June 16—(CP)—Lashing out at price regulation by private interests in the livestock industry, Hon. H. H. Stevens (Recon. Kootenay East) told the House of Commons that in Winnipeg and Toronto "there has grown up over the years an element of control which deprives the farmer of his right as an individual producer to a fair marketing system."

Speaking yesterday during consideration of Department of Agriculture estimates, Mr. Stevens said: "Toronto is the market that controls livestock in Canada. Why if a farmer in northern Saskatchewan or even in the dried out area of British Columbia at Prince George, or in the back districts of Ontario brings in two or three head of cattle to the local market he is paid what the Toronto price is at 10 o'clock in the morning.

"He has no bargaining power. He must take that price or take his cattle home."

Referring specifically to the hog market, Mr. Stevens, former minister of Trade and Commerce and responsible for the price spreads inquiry of 1935, charged that Canada Packers Limited has a stranglehold over the Commission Houses "whom they blackball if they do not dance to their piping."

He said that the price of Canadian bacon was fixed by Canada Packers on the basis of the price of bacon in England.

Making Monkeys of Farmers

Mr. Stevens said that Stanley McLean, president, "is kidding the farmers of this country, making monkeys of them, and I say further he is making monkeys out of the officers of the agricultural and livestock branch end (of the agriculture departments) and has been doing so for 10 or 15 years."

He said that Agriculture Department files showed that there was hardly a day there were not letters on "every little detail" going down to Canada Packers.

"That is to Charlie Todd. Do not differentiate between Charlie Todd and Canada Packers. He is the nominal head of the Packers' Association. He is in reality the mouthpiece of Stanley McLean and the worst enemy of the Canadian farmer."

Agriculture Minister Gardiner interjected and said he wished to point out that Mr. Todd was secretary of an organization formed by packing concerns of the Dominion and because he is an official is the only

McCall Sentenced To Electric Chair

Cautioning the crowded courtroom to keep quiet, Circuit Judge H. P. Atkinson called the minister's son to the bench.

"You plead guilty to the offence as charged of kidnapping and holding James Bailey Cash, Jr., for ransom. What have you to say for yourself?" he demanded.

McCall merely shook his head.

"I find you guilty as charged in the indictment," the Judge continued, "the same being a capital offence under the laws of Florida, and I sentence you to be held until such time as you shall be delivered to the superintendent of the state prison at Raiford, there to be held safely until a death sentence shall be carried out."

Insurgent Trap Ends Stand Of Lost Division

HENDAYE, June 16 (AP)—Spanish Insurgents sprang a carefully set trap on the government's last-ditch defenders in the Pyrenees Mountain passes today, forcing the government's "lost" 43rd Division to flee across the frontier into France.

The fighting in the far north, however, was only one phase of widespread Insurgent offensives. General Franco was said to have ordered commanders in all areas to launch compaigns to bring the civil war to a quick close.

In the south, a major battle developed on the Cordoba front. Insurgents reported they had advanced about 10 miles in two days in the mountainous sector northwest of Pennaroya, where the government has built strong lines.

The Insurgent strategy, apparently, was to catch extremes of the government's territory between simultaneous fires.

More than 2,000 wounded militiamen of the "lost" division, clothed only in rags, straggled into France during the night and early morning darkness while heroic comrades covered their flight down the Pyrenees' steep slopes.

The flight ended the resistance of the division, which had halted Franco's entire northern campaign for two months although it was cut off from all aid and was isolated on barren ridges of the mountains.

The division originally numbered about 4,000 men but it had been reduced considerably during the months it held its Maladetta (evil) Mountain fastnesses against a plentifully supplied Insurgent army of between 12,000 and 15,000 men.

Building Program Real Challenge

OTTAWA, June 16—(CP)—Complete confidence in the success of the housing and municipal assistance programs now before parliament in the form of legislation was expressed by Finance Minister Dunning in his budget speech today.

"I said the other day the program was a challenge to the building industry," said Mr. Dunning. "I repeat that challenge with all the emphasis I can command. I wish to add that I am confident the challenge will be accepted.

The construction industry had suffered most in the depression and lagged in recovery. No better way of increasing employment could be found than to stimulate this industry. Even with increases brought about by the 1935 Housing Act and the home improvement act the volume of construction in 1937 was less than half the total for 1930 and in the first five months of 1938 it fell 25 per cent below the level for the corresponding period of 1937.

Dunning Budget Highlights

Expenditures totalled $530,467,000 and revenues, $516,692,000.

Revenues reached the highest point in history, exceeding the previous high year, 1928-29 by $55,835,000.

Net debt of Canada on March 31 was $3,097,727,000.

Since February the downward trend in business activity in Canada has been reversed.

Total export trade was $1,148,000,000, an increase of $27,000,000 over 1936-37.

Total import trade was $799,000,000, an increase of $127,000,000.

For the first time since 1929 employment increased more rapidly than industrial production.

Further increases in employment are expected from stimulation of the construction industry by new housing and municipal assistance legislation.

Normal equilibrium between farm prices and other prices has been restored.

Unofficial estimates place Canadas total national income for 1937 at $4,830,000,000, an increase of 13 per cent over 1936.

But for unforeseen increases of $20,000,000 in relief expenditures due to the western drought, and $7,000,000 in the Canadian National Railways deficit the budget would have disclosed a surplus.

New Dominion bond issues totalling $295,460,000 were floated.

sky for a long time." But the Hydro chairman added that if a waterways treaty between Canada and the United States were signed today, it would be nearl ysix years before any power would be available under it.

Dr. Hogg hoped that "some day" the St. Lawrence will be developed. "I've been hoping so since 1914," he said. "I'm speaking only of power; the navigation phases might involve a different decision."

Questioned about Hydro's contracting for 120,000 horsepower from the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company in 1930 in the midst of depression after contracts had just been entered into with the Gatineau Power Company, Dr. Hogg said his opinion was not about taking on the extra power. "I wasn't predicting power needs at that time," he said. "My job was building plants."

Records of the 18 years prior to 1929 indicated an annual increase in power consumption of about 10 per cent., Dr. Hogg said. He said he thought a seven-per cent. increase was the least Hydro "could do with". Actually, he added, the increase since 1929 has been approximately two per cent a year.

Dealing with the Long Lac and Ogoki water-diversion projects in northwestern Ontario, work on which has been suspended pending negotiation of an International Treaty, Dr. Hogg said he had suggested Ontario should stipulate the water diverted into Lake Superior should remain the property of Canada. If this were not agreed to, the United States could claim joint use, if not joint ownership, of the water.

Dr. Hogg said he was not sure just where the Long Lac diversion proposal had originated. The government, he added, was interested in the project as a log-driving proposition to Lake Superior and contributed $400,000 to the work. The Niagara system's share of the total cost would be about $900,000.

(Payments due May 1 and June 1 on Austrian bond issues already have been defaulted. Great Britain, France and other guarantee nations and the bank for international settlements have protested to Berlin.)

U. S. Centre of Disturbances

The economics minister, speaking at a celebration of the 400th anniversary of Schuetting House headquarters of Bremen's Chamber of Commerce, branded the United States as "virtually the centre of disturbances" in world economics.

He extolled Germany as the opposite of the United States in the matter of economic stability.

Funk urged that national credits take the place of international credits in dealings of nations with each other.

The economics minister held that delay in Anglo-American discussions seeking a new trade pact was due to the world economic crisis. He then asserted the chief reason for confusion in world markets lay in the system of preparations payments and international political debts.

Referring to the debts of other nations to the United States he said that "no sensible person believes these debts ever will be paid."

Referring to the Dawes and Young loans—made to Germany in 1924 and 1930, respectively—Funk expressed the opinion that a political debt does not become a commercial one if private capitalists on the creditor side take the place of states. (The loans were part of attempted solutions of Germany's reparations problem.)

He declared it was absolutely necessary that interest rates of seven and 5½ per cent on these loans "be reduced to a normal level."

Police Must Impound Drunk Drivers' Cars

TORONTO, June 16.—(CP)—The Attorney-General's office said today no difficulty was anticipated in operation of the amendment to the highway traffic act by which automobiles of drunk drivers would be impounded for three months.

Traffic Inspector Edward Dunn of the Toronto police said he did not know whether the magistrate must order impoundment of the car, and that no Toronto cars had been impounded although the act went into effect June 7.

"I expect the magistrates will order the cars impounded at the time of the conviction, but even if the magistrate does not, the statute makes it mandatory for the police to impound the cars," said Ira S. Humphries, deputy attorney-general.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, June 16 (CP)—Disappointing demand and light sales drove Winnipeg wheat futures lower today for the second straight session. Gains of two cents had been posted earlier on unfavorable United States winter wheat crop reports. At the final bell prices were 2 to ¼ cent lower, July $1.07, October 86½-⅝, November 85⅞ and December 83¾-⅞ cents.

July wheat tumbled 3½ cents from its high. As profit-taking on early June advances continued this option met difficulty when the deferred futures rallied. Trading, however, was of small volume.

A Veteran Member

Inspector James F. Reid of the Peterborough police on Wednesday commenced his 27th year as a member of the local department. It was on June 15, 1912, that he first began his duties here after previous police experience in Brantford, Ont., and in Scotland. There have been many changes both in Peterborough and in the department since the Inspector first walked a beat here. Incidentally he celebrated his anniversary by arresting a youth on a drunken-driving charge Wednesday night.

Damage Action Is Dismissed

Judge Sheldon Smoke this week dismissed an action by Harry Pressick of Cordova Mines against Timothy Byrnes, Marmora merchant, arising out of an automobile collision.

The action was for damages caused by a motor accident that took place when Mr. Byrnes' car was driven by Patrick O'Connor, who was his chauffeur for the purpose of delivering goods from his store. The case was interesting from the standpoint that it was claimed Patrick O'Connor was a chauffeur with limited hours and authority, and was required to turn the car in each evening at six o'clock. On the evening of the accident he took the car out and caused damages to Mr. Pressick and to his son, Donald Harry Pressick, it was claimed.

Judge Smoke, after hearing the case of the plaintiffs, gave judgment dismissing the action with costs to be paid by Mr. Pressick to Mr. Byrnes, and assessed the damages against Patrick O'Connor to the extent of $150 with costs payable by Patrick O'Connor to the plaintiffs. W. F. Huycke, K.C., appeared for the plaintiffs; Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., appeared for Timothy Byrnes, and Patrick O'Connor appeared in person.

Waldie Family Re-union Held At Trent River

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TRENT RIVER, June 16. — Ideal weather conditions favored the fifth annual re-union of the Waldie family held on the spacious lawn of John Sedgwick's cottage, with an attendance of 32, a number of members of the family being unable to attend. Long tables were arranged on the lawn along the Trent shores, where a sumptuous dinner and supper consisting of an abundance of tempting things good to eat was served. During the afternoon a motor boat water trip was enjoyed by the younger folk, while some of the older folk spent the afternoon around the brightly lit fireplace inside the cottage in social intercourse. This event marks th first time held here, as previously Rice Lake was the place of meeting. Those in attendance were: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Waldie, daughter Christine, son Tom, and daughter Mrs. O. Brown, with her daughter Verna and son Floyd of Grafton, Mr. Macklin, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Waldie, son George, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Sherwin, son Earl and daughter Dobbie of Fenella, Mr. and Mrs. Will Waldie of Roseneath, Mr. and Mrs. John Sedgwick and daughter Frances, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Too Many Managers

The people who are most interested in Hydro Electric in Ontario are those who are very directly responsible for the obligations assumed when it was started. each participating municipality is part-owner, and yet these owners have not the satisfaction of knowing that their business is being well managed for them.

Evidence which is being submitted at the probe in Toronto does not indicate the existence of a smooth-running organization. T. Stewart Lyon, a former editor of the Toronto Globe, and now a deposed Hydro commissioner, says Premier Hepburn is running the whole thing. It is also stated that those who are in places of responsibility are hardly on speaking terms one with the other and yet they are operating a business in which the people of ths province have millions of dollars at stake.

Hydro has not had a strong hand on it since the days of Sir Adam Beck, the man whose child Hydro was. Sir Adam in his day may have been somewhat of an autocrat, but his hand was firm. He knew exactly what should be done and he refused to do anything else. He took the advice of competent engineers and acted on it. This province cannot hope to produce another Adam Beck, and if it did we doubt whether the members of our legislature would be inclined to leave him alone and allow him to work.

One Point Is Plain

S. J. Hungerford, appearing before the Senate Committee on railway matters at Ottawa, made it plain he does not approve of the amalgamation of the two railroads of Canada. Mr. Hungerford is more interested in the Canadian National than anything else, and that of course is natural.

Col. Biggar inquired what would happen if the government said it could not supply any more money for the payment of deficits, and Mr. Hungerford's plain answer was that the government would then have to take possession of the road.

Again Col. Biggar asked what a good many other people would like to ask: "What could you get for the C.N.R. if you went into the market?" The answer was that Mr. Hungerford could not conceive of any person wanting to buy the road with its present obligations.

Again it was suggested that the business of the president of the C.N.R. was to operate a national public work which would give as much employment as possible. The answer was that there were sections of the road which had to be operated regardless of their financial gains or losses. The Gaspe line for instance does not pay and never will. On a business basis it ought to be wiped out, but Mr. Hungerford admitted it had to be carried on.

The asking of questions and the giving of answers has been going on for a good many days, but actually we fail to see where anything is going to come of it. Mr. Hungerford was close to the central point of the whole situation when he said that no person would want to buy the C.N.R. if it were necessary to take over all the obligations of the road along with the property.

Whether the people of the country at large have seen the light on that central point we do not know. No matter what changes are made, amalgamation, unification or willing co-operation or forced co-operation in management between the two roads—the obligations of the C.N.R. remain the property of the Canadian people. If we owned the road we could probably make a little money out of it, but the trouble is we also own the obligations on which we have to pay interest at the rate of about a million dollars a week.

Gone With The Wind

A good deal of legislative effort goes for naught. The Canadian Senate worked on a bill to enlarge the scope for securing divorce. The various points in the measure were argued at length. Desertion was given its place as an added cause for seeking divorce, and to that was added cruelty in its various forms.

Finally the amended divorce bill passed the Senate by four votes to spare and in due course was reported to the House of Commons. How long the Senators spent on the thing is not stated but the time would be fairly generous.

In the House of Commons Mr. Woodsworth, leader of the C.C.F., made a kindly gesture of benediction toward the child, after which Rev. Mr. McIvor of Fort William moved that the six-months' hoist be given to the bill. A vote of 102 to 53 agreed the hoist should be applied and it was all over in a few minutes.

So what becomes of the long and rather expensive hours which members of the Senate devoted to their bill? Gone with the wind is as good an answer as any.

Toronto's New Appeal

We read in a Toronto paper that one reason why that city gets so many conventions is that "it has a foreign atmosphere appeal for delegates from United States."

That "foreign atmosphere appeal" is, we admit, rather good. It is an outcropping of the spirit of the age, somewhat of a reflected form of plethora of appeals which seem to surround us to the point of saturation. There is the appeal of the makers of garters to men that they must never allow their socks to sag; the appeal that they must never permit the shadow of a whisker to mar the even surface of the stern jaw; the appeal of the ladies not to lose their husbands by being guilty of having a set of dish-pan hands.

There is the appeal of the writer for tourist trade; the appeal of the great wild spots; the appeal of the fishing waters; the appeal of the camp fire and the appeal of the bathing beach.

And now Toronto has gone in for the "foreign atmosphere appeal" as one which draws United States tourists. It is so good it is hard to decide whether to smile or laugh out loud.

The Short Sentence

We came across an article on writing a few days ago, and in the main the gist of the thing was to praise the beauty of the simple word and the rather short sentence. "The long sentence," it was stated, "is confusing and as a rule can be classed as an abuse and something to be rigidly avoided."

With that belief this paper has no argument, but the long sentence has had its active advocates in other days. In Green's History of the English People it is recorded that prior to the time William Claxton introduced printing into England in 1476 he had been engaged in writing by hand for several notable people. When he wrote the preface to his first printed work, "Tales of Troy" William Claxton delivered himself as follows all in one sentence:

"For as much as in the writing of the same my pen is worn, my hand weary and not steafast, mine eyes dimmed with over much looking on the white paper, and my courage not so prone and ready to labor as it hath been, and that age creepeth on me daily and feebleth all the body, and also because I have promised to divers gentlemen and to my friends to address to them as hastily as I might the said book, therefore I have practiced and learned at my great charge and, dispense to ordain this said book in print after the manner and form as ye may see, and is not written with pen and ink as other books be, to the end that every man may have them at once, for all the books of this story here emprynted as ye see were begun in one day and also finished in one day."

The critic who expounds the virtue of the short sentence will probably claim Mr. Claxton could have removed several clauses from this one sentence of 157 words without having sacrificed his meaning or shortened his intent.

The 1938 Method

New York can always be counted on for another story. The latest one has to do with the landing of the Normandie from Europe and Helen Borsos, 19, who landed at the same time. She had been to Europe.

Helen we learn had graduated from high school but could not find a job. She was equipped to be some person's stenographer but the way was not open.

One day while out on a search for work instead of getting anything to eat she bought a glass of beer and does not remember exactly what took place after that. Her first recollection was that she was in the chapel of the stately liner Normandie on the way to Europe.

When she returned to New York the press photographers were on hand and so were the reporters. There was quite a committee waiting for Helen. Then there arrived a New York business man to inquire the reason for the commotion. A newspaperman told him the story, after which the business man met Helen and said to her: "You start work in my store on Monday morning." So there you have it. That is the way things are done in 1938.

Years ago in school we were taught the way to become famous was to find a hole in the dyke and stick the finger in there and thus save the country from being flooded. Another good way was to be walking along the railway track and find a broken rail just as the fast express was thundering down the line. The next thing was to flag the train, have it stop just a few feet from the broken rail. The passengers would then come out and take a collection; the conductor would take your name and address and shortly after you would have a good post with the railway company.

Helen Borsos has brought the thing up to the 1938 standard. Be out of work, buy a glass of beer and then know nothing until on board a palatial liner. Then come home and hear a business man say "You go to work in my store Monday morning." Yes, New York can always be counted on for a story on a dull day.

As It Was On The Tenth

There are some things which people who live in cities know a good deal about, and again there are other matters on which they are not well informed. One resident of this good city laughed heartily today when it was suggested to him that a sow might eat her litter of pigs. There had been a farmer in his office and he had mentioned he had lost seven little pigs, and had come to the conclusion that the mother had eaten them. The city man thought the gentleman from the broad acres was having a little joke at his expense and was afterward passing it around.

Such a thing used to happen now and then along the Tenth Concession; it hapened on Lot 4 at one time. When we related that to the city man he laughed some more. When such a thing took place there was always a good deal of discussion, and the time when the mother took seven out of a litter of nine the discussion went on for days between grandfather and the hired man. The hired man was always reading things out of a book and explaining just why the little pigs, then about three days old, had been eaten by their mother. There was something wrong with the diet that made the old pig cranky; she was mad and craved for something she wasn't getting.

It was about the only time grandfather and the hired man ever agreed on anything, but grandfather had a rather pointed way of admitting his agreement, for he merely said he had known all about that for fifty years. He held that a pig was an outdoor animal and did best when out in the bush some place rooting around to find what it needed from the soil. His claim was that a snout had not been put on a pig for an ornament; it was fixed that way for rooting ing in the ground.

Grandfather was not much on books, but he used to take the box wagon now and then and drive down past the Broken Front road to a sort of bog where there was peat. He said there was something in that which a pig needed and when it came on winter he always kept a little heap of that stuff in the corner of the pen. And when there was a litter or little pigs grandfather always knew what to do if they were not coming too well. He'd watch for a bit of brown scurf on the back and then he'd go to his bench in the drive shed and start mixing and tinkering and he might add lime water to the feed or he'd prepare to add a little mineral. Never did he lose any in the first five weeks, and he figured if he didn't lose a pig before it became a weanling then he wasn't going to lose them after.

But it's a fact, or at least it was on the Tenth Concession that a mother pig can get pretty mean if she's not feeling right, and probably they feel just the same today. They said then it was diet, and they saw the same today. The fact that a farmer a few days ago had seven of his little porkers eaten before they were a week old indicates things today must be about the same as they were on the Tenth. No doubt they know more today than they used to, but they have not yet succeeded in producing a feeling of contentment, joy and pride of family in all the mother pigs.

There used to be a less serious problem of what to do with the speckled hen when she started eating her eggs. We say the speckled hen because they were all speckled on the Tenth. There were a number of things tried and the hired man being rather scientific tried drilling a hole and making a little pocket where the egg would slide down so the speckled hen could not get it. The idea may have been the forerunner of the trap nest, but grandfather never thought much of it. He said the best thing to do with a hen that got such a habit was to take her over to the chopping block in the woodyard. And of course that did cure the hen because the axe was generally standing within reach.

NOTE AND COMMENT

When we read that an overheated refrigerator has caused a fire in Quebec we really began to realize how wonderful science is.

Moscow was off the telephone circuit for a short time but it is not likely many Peterborough folk suffered inconvenience because of that condition.

The Ontario government has declared war on ragweed and that will give the King administration and the United States a little respite.

There is considerable talk at the Hydro probe about newspapers headlines but there is no reason to feel that any of the politicians are indifferent to that kind of thing.

"The Indian; Whither Bound?" reads an editorial head in a Toronto newspaper. We are not sure of the answer for the next day or two but next week we would be safe in saying he's headed for the nearest lunge bed.

IDEA

(By A. R. K.)

¶ My Neighbor A, a goodly friend, asked if I had an hour to lend, he's down the street two blocks; when I called on him I was chilled, because he'd started in to build, a fancy window box.

¶ I really could not understand, why he'd ask me to lend a hand, so he could get it through; for making things with saw and plane, so they will look dressed up and sane, is something I can't do.

¶ When Neighbor A took up the plane, I saw that he was much the same, was slow as any snail; when he cut boards like they should be, then it was easy like to see, he couldn't drive a nail.

¶ And so I worked with Neighbor A., kept at it there a while each day, six times I hit my thumb; the boards we cut were fairly long, we drove big spikes to make it strong, and it was nearly done.

¶ The folk who passed expressed surprise, they marvelled at its weight and size, they thought it very big; they knew that when we got it through the thing we likely had in view, was fattening up a pig.

¶ The thing is big we'll both admit, there's not a window it will fit, the workmanship is rank; but Neighbor A's a goodly soul, he says that now we'll dig a hole—and have a swimming tank.

"Impertinent" Cannot Be Used

(From Parliamentary Debates)

Mr. DUNNING: What are you reading from?

Mr. BENNETT: From my own notes. I am reading from my own handwriting of my notes taken from information I have, and if the hon. gentleman would like to see it I will gladly show it to him. There it is.

Mr. DUNNING: But the other sheet, which you put down.

Mr. BENNETT: That is a typewritten note under my dictation.

Mr. BRADETTE: Who gave you that information?

Mr. BENNETT: If the hon gentleman knew that, he would probably know more than he should know, but he would not know quite as much as he thinks he does.

Mr. BRADETTE: I would like to know who gave that information from which the leader of the opposition read just a moment ago.

Mr. BENNETT: I am making that statement—

Mr. BRADETTE: Is he trying to be a detective lately?

Mr. BENNETT: There is one member of this house who is always interrupting, and usually his observations indicate his profound ignorance. Sometimes they are impertinent; on this occasion they happen to be the latter. He boasted the other day that he never made personal observations, but now he asks if I have turned detective, and he thinks that is clever.

Mr. BRADETTE: I think I am in order. I asked who gave the information for the statement he read a moment ago. Surely I am in order. That is not showing ignorance.

Mr. MACKENZIE (Vancouver): On a point of order, on page 98 of Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules and Forms the word "impertinent" is listed among unparliamentary terms. I would ask the right hon. gentleman to withdraw the expression.

Mr. BENNETT: It depends upon how the word is used. It has been held to be unparliamentary, but if it is used to express the exact meaning it is not unparliamentary. It depends on whether it is used in that sense or not.

Mr. BRADETTE: On a point of order, I have never yet been called ignorant and I ask that the word be withdrawn.

The CHAIRMAN: Order. On the point of order raised by the Minister of National Defence—if the right hon. gentleman will sit down for a moment—

Mr. BENNETT: I had not noticed that the chairman was standing.

The CHAIRMAN: The word "impertinent" is unparliamentary and is listed on page 98 —

Mr. BENNETT: I am familiar with it.

The CHAIRMAN:—and I would ask the right hon. leader of the opposition to withdraw it.

Mr. BENNETT: I will say "not pertinent" and withdraw "impertinent."

Mr. BRADETTE: Following your ruling, Mr. Chairman, I would like the word "ignorant" to be withdrawn also, I do not think it behooves the leader of the opposition to make such a statement against members of this house, unless he is included in it.

Mr. BENNETT: That is a nice way in which to raise a point of order. To continue—

The CHAIRMAN: On the point of order raised by the hon. member for Cochrane; the word "ignorant" is unparliamentary. It is listed on page 97.

Mr. BENNETT: "The hon. member is lacking in learning;" the word "ignorant" is withdrawn. I am thoroughly familiar with the fact that the words "impertinent" and "ignorant" have been held in other parliaments unparliamentary, but I am well aware of the fact that they have been used in this parliament frequently and I would like to think that Your Honour has at last concluded that the rules of order shall be enforced.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Order.

Mr. DUNNING: That is a reflection on the chair.

Mr. BENNETT: It is not a reflection on the chair. I desire to compliment the chairman.

The CHAIRMAN: Order. I would point out to the right hon. leader of the opposition that the first point of ruling I had to make in this chamber in 1936 was to ask the leader of the opposition to withdraw the word "impertinent" which he had applied to the hon. member for Moose Jaw.

Mr. BENNETT: I quite recall the circumstances. But it is an amazing thing how frequently it has been used since. That is all I have to say.

KING'S GIFT TO BOSTON

(Manchester Guardian)

AN OAK sapling from Windsor Park, a gift of the iKng, will be planted next month on Boston Common, in Massachusetts. It is being carried to the United States by representatives of all ranks of the Honorable Artillery Company, who will take part in the three-hundredth anniversary celebrations in Boston of their regimental offspring, the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts, which was founded in 1638 by a London member of the H.A.C. who sailed to New England with the Pilgrim Fathers.

Last Summer a delegation from the American regiment came to London to honor the four-hundredth birthday of the H. A. C.

The King is a member of both regiments, Captain General of the H.A.C. and honorary member of the Massachusetts company, and his gift of an oak sapling will be accompanied by a bronze tablet bearing the Royal Arms and a suitable inscription.

RIGHTS OF A MAYOR

(New York Sun)

PERSONS either petulant or with a quo warranto complex write in to inquire by what right Mayor La Guardia will make the city's building at the World's Fair of 1939 his headquarters this Summer. Three reasons appear:

1. The Mayor is a member of the executive committee of the fair.
2. Grover Whalen has invited him.
3. A Mayor elected by a plurality of 454,425 ought to have free run of a building costing only $1,099,096.

• Too Soft to Lick the Depression

(Detroit Free Press)

IT WOULD BE hard to describe the National deterioration of the last five years more ominously than former Comptroller General John R. McCarl does in this sentence:

"We have been moving steadily away from self-government and toward a super-state, growing weaker and weaker in self-analysis and self-discipline, in self-reliance and self-respect, each day more dependent upon government."

We as Americans have only ourselves to blame because this is true. We haven't even the doubtful consolation of knowing that our trouble has come upon us as the result of some great and irresistible misfortune. For it hasn't.

The depression of 1929 was bad. But our stalwart fathers would have laughed at the idea of knuckling to it and finding in it excuses for failure.

They would have tightened their belts and stood up to the depression and licked it.

But most of us were too soft, too much enamored of our ease and comfort, and too selfish to do anything of that sort, and by meeting our troubles squarely end them.

Instead, we run howling in droves to Washington, and when an honest administration talked facts and undertook to use reason in handling the crisis, we turned it out in favor of one that was pleasantly expert at manufacturing phrases, concocting promises and making vacuity look like substance.

By the millions we turned away from sense and reason to listen to crooners and flatterers, to visionary schemers and communistic theorists, to professional trouble makers, tricksters, confidence men and liars.

We became Esaus. Multitudes of us madly applauded designing men who sneered at our free institutions, our traditions of personal liberty and our Constitution and told us this was all outdated.

We were willing to sell almost anything for a fake "security."

We even swallowed the insane teaching that a person or a nation can make itself solvent and prosperous by throwing away its wealth.

We acted like a pack of inexperienced, emotionally unstable children, unable to tell right from wrong.

In a blind eagerness to be taken care of, instead of taking care of ourselves, we made ourselves believe that for once the easy way would not turn out to be the hard way.

But it has, it was bound to; and now at the end of the ride, we find ourselves dropped into a deep, steep pit with slippery sides.

The New Deal Administration having led us to this, and having exhausted its imagination, has no rescue rope to throw.

It has nothing to offer except the old promises, the old lures, and the old tricky and impossible schemes wrapped up in slightly different phrases and tinsel.

At the conclusion of five worse than wasted years we at last begin to realize that those who get help are those who help themselves, not those who lean and yearn.

We are beginning to understand that if we are to get out of our troubles and once again become a prosperous, self-respecting and self-governing people we must shake off Rooseveltain delusions and see what we can do for ourselves by exerting the remnants of moral strength, self reliance judgment, brains and manhood remaining to us after prolonged enervation and a sickening final plunge.

The almost certain alternative to such an awakening will be final subjection to totalitarian superstate which Mr. McCarl sees looming on the National horizon.

It should be clear enough that Mr. LaGuardia can do as he likes within the 1,216½ acres devoted to the fair, either this year, next year, the following year or the year when they are tearing down the exposition.

The Mayor has only to say the word and he can be the crowning figure of the Trylon, the theme of the Theme Center, the conductor of a hundred swing bands, the axile of the Perisphere, a wild swan on Mirror Lake, the dynamo in the Ford exhibit, Rameses in the Egyptian building or a firework exploding over the Lagoon.

DEEPLY REGRETTED.

(Ottawa Journal)

ACCORDING to the American Associated Press, Japan's high command says that loss of civilian lives in air raids on Canton are "deeply regretted," but add that the raids will continue with "even greater vigor" until the Chinese realize the "futility" of their resistance to Japan.

Splendid! Let China surrender, give up her independence and territory to Japan, and Japan wil stop bombing defenceless Chinese children and women. What about fighting the thing out —if fight they must— with the Chinese armies? That, at worst, was what war meant in the old days.

Not that the Japanese are worse than some others. Mussolini dropped bombs on defenceless Ethiopians and used poion gas to boot, while some of the things Franco's armies are doing cry to high Heaven.

TAX REDUCTION FIRST.

(Financial Post, Toronto)

THE INHERENT merit in Ottawa's vast $80,000,000 loaning scheme unfolded in the past few days would be more readily appreciated if it had been preceded by a budget speech announcing substantial tax reductions for the sorely pressed Canadian taxpayer.

Most economists will probably agree that few things would be more beneficial to the national well-being at the present time than a cut in taxes. Yet not only is Mr. Dunning's budget delayed to an almost unprecedented degree, but in addition the intervening weeks are filled with details of a Government lending and spending program that gives little if any hope for tax relief when the budget does appear.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

THROUGH faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear.—Heb. xi, 3.

Beware lest any man spoil you through philisophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ.—Col. ii, 8.

◇ ◇ ◇

Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise. For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness.

And again, The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain.—I Cor. iii, 18-20.

Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual.—Cor. ii, 12, 13.

LIFE WELL LIVED.

(The Spectator, London)

THE RIGHT aim is the attainment of happiness. Not sensual pleasure derived from passing physical activities, not the negative state of the contented cow, but the moral and intellectual satisfaction of a life well-lived. This satisfaction can only be attained by a sense of duty well-done, service to others, a true perspective of life ;and the choice of the pure and noble rather than the vulgar and base. It matters not how humble the man's occupation may be. If it is faced in the right spirit, it will bring happiness.

Dr. Sigmund Freud, internationally famous pioneer of psychoanalysis, who gave us such now commonly used words as "complex", "fixation," "introvert," etc., is pictured in London shortly after arrival from Austria. With the professor is his daughter, Mrs. Hollistschek. They are pictured outside Dr. Freud's new home in Elisworthy Rd., Hampstead, where the scientist plans to carry on the work interrupted by Germany's conquest of Austria and his subsequent exile from the homeland.

Bearded Jokes Make Hit With Japanese

TOKYO, June 16. —(AP)—In Japan, it's the old joke that gets the big laugh. Modern Japanese audiences still roll in the aisles over stories known to be 400 years old. In fact, they demand a pedigree. If a joke can't trace its lineage through at least two centuries, it seldom draws so much as a titter. Humor, the Japanese believe, should be aged in the wood.

The Japanese corollary for that famous opener, "It seems there were two Irishmen...," usually is: "Yaji and Kita were going to Osaka."

Yaji and Kita are the Pat and Mike of Japan. They started toward Osaka, their perennial destination in hundreds of stories, about the time Columbia set sail for America. They are bumpkins, yet shrewd in a rustic way. A typical Yaji-and-Kita:

"They are talking with some farmers about frightening things. One of the farmers said he was afraid of lightning, another named something else. Yaji said he feared above anything else, the 'manju' (a kind of sweet cookie). He said the mere sight of a 'manju' made him quake and pale with terror.

"Thereupon, he went to his room saying he was sleepy. At Kita's behest, the farmers collected some 'manju' and placed them near Yaji's face. Then they went outside and made some noise to awaken him. After a few moments they flung open the door, expecting to enjoy the sight of his fright. The 'manju' were gone and Yaji was smacking his lips.

"'I would also be afraid of a cup of tea,' he said."

Known of Old.

Almost every Japanese knows this story. He has heard it, read it, seen it played. It is several centuries old. Yet, he can sit in a modern metropolitan theatre and laugh himself into hiccoughs over it and other equally old and oft-recounted.

The answer is this: His attitude toward the ancient funny story is somewhat the same as that of a music lover toward the opera. There is no surprise for either. Each derives appreciation from the shadings of the different performances.

Thus, formal humor in Japan is left almost exclusively to professional humorists. There are few, if any, amateur jokesters. You don't find a "life-of-the-party" in a Japanese gathering. They seldom tell jokes at a Japanese stag. And no after-dinner speaker ever prefaces his remarks with "This reminds me of a story—"

INDIANS RETAIN A. L. LEAD WHILE YANKS WIN FIFTH STRAIGHT

Tribe Ousts Chase Jinx For 6-4 Win

NEW YORK, June 16 (AP).—Johnny Vander Meer moved into baseball's hall of fame last Saturday. Now he owns it.

Cincinnati Reds' 23-year-old southpaw fastballer, in his first full year in the major leagues, reached a new all-time pitching high last night in Brooklyn by hurling his second no-hit, no-run game in a row.

In all baseball history, only 10 pitchers have turned in two no-hit games over their entire careers. None ever had come through with two in one season.

And now, along comes young Johnny, who started his baseball in a church league near his home in Midland Park, N.J., and then was given the go-by from three big league clubs, to toss two no-hitters in two consecutive appearances—all in the space of four days.

A Repeat Performance

Last Saturday, pitching against nine-inning National league no-the Boston Bees, he hurled the first hitter since Daffy Dean turned the trick in 1934. Last night, he repeated against Brooklyn Dodgers 6-0 before a sellout crowd of 38,748 which packed Ebbets field to see major league night ball inaugurated in the metropolitan area.

His classy performance completely overshadowed two other first-rate pitching jobs on yesterday's program. Jim Tobin, Pittsburgh Pirates' young right-hander, hurled a five-hitter in whitewashing New York Giants, 2-0.

The defeat, however, didn't cut the Giants' lead any, since Deacon Danny MacFayden duplicated Tobin's trick against the second-place Chicago Cubs to give the Boston Bees a 2-0 victory.

Over in the merican League Cleveland Indians retained their half-game lead over New York Yankees when both came from behind to score victories. The tribe snapped a five-game losing streak to top the Senators 6-4. The Yanks stretched their winning streak to five straight with a 6-4 decision over Chicago White Sox.

Swingin' Sammy Chapman hit his seventh homer as the Athletics made it two straight over the Tigers 7-6. Jimmy Foxx wgalloped No. 19 to pace Boston Red Sox to a 7-4 victory over St. Louis Browns.

The Cardinals collected 16 hits to win a 9-7 slugfest from the Phillies.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Johnny Vandermeer, Reds — Pitched second straight no-hitter, trouncing Dodgers 6-0.

Jake Powell, Yankees—Hit double and two singles and scored two runs in 6-4 victory over White Sox.

SPORTS -DAY BY DAY-

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

AND TOMORROW in the twilight followers of the gutted-stick sport will be swarming into the local lacrosse arena to see the Petes do battle with a tough, tough outfit. Yeah, the Inglewood-Caledon Combines. True the locals licked the Combines here some time ago in an exhibition game — but didn't they also beat Brampton in an exhibition joust here? And look what those burly Bramptonites did a little later when the senior "B" schedule opened. They just trimmed the pants right off the Petes — not literally speaking speaking, of course — and the Randle gang are still sizzling over it. The Petes pulled out a 15-14 win in Inglewood the other night and it was as torrid a tussle as most of the players ever took part in. Closer than clock hands at midnight. And the fray here tomorrow at dusk will be another hotcha offering, starting at nine bells.

THE PETES have won two of their three loop starts so far. And, if the Long Branch club's protest against Brampton is upheld, the Brampton win over the locals may be thrown out. It's up to the O. L. A. Long Branch kicked 'cause Brampton used Bill Anthony, who led the senior league in scoring a year ago. Bill played two senior "A" games this year, once against St. Catharines and once in Mimico. Rules say a player in the top division must stay there that season after playing two games. The Petes didn't protest but stand to benefit by the Long Branch kick. Both the Combines and locals will be at top strength Friday as every game in this powerful group is important.

BOB CRAIK, 158-pound pugilist from Ottawa, was in to see us yesterday. Has been travelling through this section but won't be be back again for four weeks. He would like to meet a middle or lightheavy here in the ring, asking only his expenses. Bob is 22 years old and won the amateur lightweight title of Eastern Ontario in 1937. Holds three Ottawa city titles and lost to Eli Brown in Canadian finals in '37. Is a husky looking fellow and admits he is more of a fighter than a boxer, but is more than willing to tackle any middleweight or lightheavy in amateur company anywhere. His home address is 471 Metcalfe St., Ottawa, in case Riverview A.C. officials are interested. Why not pair him with Dutch McIlmoyle?

TORONTO Webbers play the Petes at 3.30 this Saturday in an exhibition ball game in Riverside Park. It being an open date for the locals in the C. O. B. L. schedule, they lined up this tilt with the strong senior squad from the Western City League, Lefty Lesurf may pitch for Webbers whilst Jim Dorris tell us the Petes will probably use three or four of their hurlers — giving each two or three innings. With Joe Jakafby starting. Ought to draw a big crowd of fans over to the East City ball orchard as the Petes have aroused a lot of interest and favorable comment around town since their three-game winning streak shot them to the top of the Central Loop heap. The boys are really hustling now and dishing up some grand baseball.

* * * * * *

THIS FROM Ken Colling, writer and umpire of Belleville: "Chalk up Frank (Lefty) McNally, Boston import to Peterborough, with his second consecutive C. O. B. L. pitching victory. The Beantown portsider bested Big Ed Pollar and Tony Paczkowski all in one day when the Petes whipped the Ponies 4-3 in Kingston Tuesday. From this corner, the C. O. B. L. pitching is close to that back in the days of Fred Goyer, Al Heckman, Duke Dainty and Jack Williams. Today the 'Cobble' loop hurlers work the corners hard and often. Incidentally, why shouldn't they? Most of 'em are major league castoffs." We wouldn't go quite that far, Ken, as there is a vast difference in the diamond game between Class "D" and Big League ball but we do, think the 1938 C. O. B. L. twirling compares favorably with the Central tossing of 15 or so years ago. And the Petes today have one of their best senior ball clubs in history, though they're hitting below form yet.

* * * * * *

PORT HOPE'S intermediate "A" club of the Lakeshore Baseball League is willing to play the Petes an exhibition fray next Wednesday eve, either here or in Port Hope. The Hopers have a strong squad this season with Tommy Pointer ex-Belleville and ex-Napanee lefthander, their ace chucker. The Town Council has spent $200 on fixing up the diamond and it is now in swelegant shape, with new dugouts, et al. The Petes have an open date on the 22nd, next Wednesday, but Bowmanville juniors and the Young Petes are billed to play in Riverside that date i na Lakeshore Junior Ball Loop contest. Local senior club wouldn't mind such a game in the twilight at home and may line it up for some other evening.

* * * * * *

A DISPATCH from Oshawa appears in the Toronto a.m. sheet today and tells of the C. O. B. L. meeting come Saturday to deal with the seven U. S. players in the clubs of Kingston and Peterborough. Doll and McNally here, and Pollar, Paczkowski, McIntyre, White and Wilson. Why make it worse than it is? Paczkowski as a student who was okayed by the O. B. A. last year doesn't need another transfer, and Wilson and White are Ontario lads. Wilson playing for Napanee before and in Belleville in hockey last winter. Don't know where McIntyre hails from. It's all very well to say let Oshawa enter O. B. A. playdowns, but if they don't win the Central League, they won't be proper loop representatives. And all our games through the season would be in the nature of exhibition tilts with the GM-men! But we'll see about it all on Saturday.

THERE WAS A goodly gathering of gals and gents around the Bowl in Ashburnham last evening as C. G. E. and Lindsay clashed in a Girls Softball Loop encounter, with the Electrics copping a 12-6 victory. The nod wafts 'em into second place with two wins and three reverses, and it dumps the Scugog squad into the place where the butter is kept in the hot weather. They've won but one in five, while Keene has one victory and two defeats to date. Second half of the schedule will be drawn up in couple of more weeks when this first half is settled. Top two teams playoff in this half before the second commences. Marilyn McCarthy hurled three-hit ball and fanned a dozen last p.m. while her buddies belted the ball harder than Maggie raps Jiggs and garnered a flock of extra-base blows. Their fielding? Well, let us draw a veil on that; it was oh-oh! Keene and C. G. E. lasses mixtt aeholwBovr ebmyCNcVIIwpgn8I.flicR Keene and C. G. E. lasses mix at the Bowl this Friday at 7.15 o'clock.

UP AND DOWN Sports' Rialto: Bill Walshe, Kingston sports scribe, helped save a boy from drowning the other day . . . Bud Clancy, ex-Ponies' pitcher, is in pro company down south now, we hear . . . How are the local school ball loops coming along these days? . . . While Westclox men softballers and Little Harlemites have an exhibition tussle at the Bowl at seven tonight, Omemee and Motorists meet there Sat'day in a loop fray . . . Guess the Kingstons can't afford to bring in a catcher this season and will use Elliott and Corkey . . . Local lacrossers are plenty worried about Friday and figure they'll have to go all the way out to grab the duke . . . That hole-in-one for Bob Bathgate in Port Hope last weekend was the first ever in O. G. A. championship competition . . . .Lot of tennis being played here these evenings on half a dozen fronts girls and guys . . . A little lass said to us yesterday: "Why suggest a ball game with Niagara Falls — didn't the Petes get enough of the Falls in hockey last winter?" Oh, quite!

This Never Happened Before

British golf fans had waited long for this scene, the presentation of the Walker Cup, international golf trophy, to a representative of John Bull instead of Uncle Sam. The two countries started playing for the trophy back in 1923, but this year saw the British amateurs triumph in the competition (consisting of Scotch four ball matches and singles) for the first time. John Beck, non-playing captain of the British team, is accepting the cup on the LEFT, as veteran captain Francis Ouimet of the U.S. team hands it over.

Clerks Take Lead Hastings League

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, June 16.—The Clerks defeated the Tanners 15 to 12 last night to take first place in the local softball league. They had a 6-run lead in the third but the Tanners tied it up with a 6-run rally. Five runs in the seventh by the Clerks left the decision beyond doubt. P.C.I. Wins 4-2 Over Pirates

P.C.I. nosed out the Pirates, 4 to 2, last night at the Exhibition Grounds in a close Junior City Baseball League fixture. The Bucs put a stop to the no-hit hurling of the Collegians and made it a battle all the way. The seven-inning struggle was run off fast with good hurling and fielding shown by both sides. Foster allowed five hits and three walks while fanning seven. O'Toole on the losers' slab gave eight hits and one free ticket as he struck out six. McBride and Rochetta were main hitters for the losers with two each, while Scriver, Ward, and Millen were the best for the winners. The teams:

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

When Max Henry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Henry, drew ticket No. 6202 from the box of stubs, Ken Sloane, president of the club was declared the winner of a pair of bowls. And while we are on this subject we wish to express to the ladies' membership committee the appreciation of the entire club for their efforts in making the draw a success.

We looked up records this morning and we failed to find anything like what happened on the greens last night. Just imagine 24 mixed rinks made up the draw and yet so even were the rinks handicapped, so close the scores and so keenly were the games contested that only one three-game winner was declared when the scores were handed in. As a rule, it is figured about 15 to 20 per cent. win all games, but there it is. The winners: First, Mrs. J. Ecobichon, H. Darling, Mrs. J. Arnold, R. Dyer, skip, sherbet glasses; second, Mrs. H. Russell, R. Herman, Mrs. E. Crowe, Dr. A. Allen, skip, cream and sugar; third, Mrs. W. Moorehead, R. McCarrell, Mrs. W. Hepburn, R. Hendry, skip, bowl measures.

Over at Port Perry at their annual open doubles tournament our club was represented with 10 entries, about 28 per cent. of the draw. Thirty-four pairs from all around the district competed in this annual event. At a late hour R. Downey and C. Williamson were the only pair that looked as if they might be in the money.

New Italian Ally?

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, June 16 (A.P.). — Reports of a military alliance between Italy and Yugoslavia were revived today as political observers attached importance to the sudden departure for Venice of Premier Milan Stoyadinovich. The Premier's visit was declared to be private, but in political circles it was believed he planned to negotiate with Italy's Foreign Minister, Count Ciano, regarding a military pact.

Those Cold Drinks

PHILADELPHIA, June 16 (AP).—Dr. Harry M. Eberhard told members of the American Institute of Homeopathy today many deaths from "acute indigestion" were caused by heart attacks brought on by cold desserts or drinks after a hearty meal. Chilling the stomach stops the flow of digestive juices for about half an hour, Dr. Eberhard said. Then they start flowing at an excessive rate to make up for lost time.

KEEN RIVALRY MARKS SENIOR SERIES OF CHURCH SOFTBALL

George Street Teams Battle For Playoffs

Keenest rivalry in the Church Softball League this year has been shown by the two George St. senior teams, and they were at it again last night at the Oval where the George St. Sunday School picnic was held. Though the game did not mean a thing to the Buzzers, and a win for the Majors would have given them first place and a bye into the final round, the Buzzers nevertheless took a 15-13 nod over the Majors to leave the latter in a three-way tie for first. All Saints Juniors beat St. John's 15-5 at Central to have a 2-1 edge on the five-game series. Park St. Juveniles clinched third place and a playoff berth with a 30-8 win over All Saints at Queen Mary. Knox Bantams beat St. James 8-6 at King Edward and if they win their replay with George St. at King Edward Park they make the finals.

There was plenty of keen competition last night as the clubs fought it out with the playoffs in sight. Games tonight are: Mark St. Seniors vs All Saints at King Edward, umpires from Murray St. and Knox; St. James vs Mark St. Juveniles at the Oval, umpires from George St. and All Saints; and St. Johns Bantams vs All Saints at Prince of Wales.

Lots Of Homers

On the Buzzers' win last night, Rennie, Ash and Weir connected for homers. Dunkerley started hurling but after three walks and a hit, he retired. G. Gatfield came in and was greeted by Weir's homer but, except for the fourth inning, went well after a long lapse in church loop pitching. Second base errors were a big handicap for the winning heaver. Rennie twirled nice ball till the last frame when the Majors got to him and nearly tied it up. Wright hit a homer, with Gatfield and Wells also hitting well. The teams:

Buzzers ..... 520 521 x—15

Umpires—L. Agnew and J. Gatfield.

Score Late

In the junior joust, All Saints piled up most of their runs in the last two frames. Hill had three hits, including a homer and triple. Hotrum got a homer and single, while Gibson collected three singles. Lomax started the game off with a homer but the St. John's gang could do little with McDougalls flinging. Les and Royal Clark were the best hitters. The teams:

All Saints ..... 303 203 4—15
St. John's ..... 100 211 0— 5

Umpires—Agnew and Thomas.

Tight Tilt

Last night's bantam was a tight one all through with both Gardiner and Leether pitching neat ball. Gourley's homer won the game for Knox. Leether and Roode were the only St James' batters to do much. The loss almost eliminates the Saints, who have but one of last year's champs playing for them now —and they have lost their pitcher, Ellis, who is visiting in England. The teams:

St. James: Allen, cf; Rutherford, 3b; aBldry, c; Leether, p; Roode, 2b; Welsh, 1b; Murduff, rf; Woodcock, lf.

Knox ..... 103 112 0—8
St. James ..... 000 230 1—6

Hurls 3-Hit Ball

MARILYN McCARTHY

Classy pitcher for C.G.E. girls' softball team who pitched three-hit ball and fanned a dozen here last night as the Electrics took a 12-6 win over Lindsay to move into second place in the standing.

Allen Gets Last Laugh, Also a New Shirt

Leafs Suffer 11th Defeat

TORONTO, June 16.—(CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs, who have lost 11 straight games in the International League, are hoping they can pull out of their nose dive as well as Baltimore Orioles have been able to do.

The Orioles lost 13 games in a row before they came through with a victory over Montreal Royals. Since then the Orioles have won four of their last six games. They captured two of them last spring in sweeping a doubleheader from Rochester Red Wings 5-4 and 4-0.

The Leafs, meanwhile, lost No. 11 and their fifth straight to the league-leading Newark Bears 5-3. Charley Keller led an 11-hit attack with a homer and three singles as the Bears won their sixth consecutive victory.

Despite their triumph, the Bears' lead over Buffalo was cut to seven games when the Bisons took both ends of a bargain bill from Jersey City 6-2 and 10-3. The third twin bill on the program saw Montreal Royals and Syracuse Chiefs split. The Chiefs won the opener 9-3 and Montreal the windup 9-1.

The Orioles allowed the Red Wings a total of just five hits in both games. Pat Malone and Bill Perrin combined to stop the Wings with two hits, both homers, in the opener, and Pete Blumette twirled a three-hit shutout in the final.

Lindsay Loses To C.G.E. Girls

C.G.E. girls climbed into second place in the Girls' Softball League last night at the Bowl with a 12-6 victory over Lindsay, the latter team dropping into the cellar. A good crowd saw an open game with the winners having a big edge in pitching and hitting, but looking sloppy in the field. They booted 10 to their rivals' three. Marilyn McCarthy was in fine form on the Electrics' mound to hold Lindsay to three hits and five walks, while striking out a dozen. M. McCabe started for the losers but gave way in the fifth, after allowing 10 hits, to J. Corley, who finished up by giving six bingles and a walk while striking out three.

A. Doughty led the victors at bat with a homer, double and single, while H. Cameron hit a homer and single, P. Bigelow a triple and single, and B. Lee a three-bagger. F. Mark got two of the losers' hits and J. Corley the other one. Fielding features were turned in by E. Craig, P. Bigelow, D. Sexsmith and J. Corley. The latter was the best player on the Lindsay team last night. Most of their runs came in the fourth on errors by C.G.E., while the Electrics scored in all but three heats. The teams:

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, June 16.—(AP)—Max Baer has just completed a movie short in Hollywood and is heading east to watch Louis and Schmeling, one of whom he hopes to see a little more of in September... One New York magazine was so taken with that Speculator story that Tony Galento might fight the Gorilla Gargantua that it called the Hippodrome to see if anything definite had been done about it.

The boys up at Speculator where he once trained, got a big kick out of Gene Tunney's "store" English ...One guy went up to Gene and said: "Mebbe you don't remember, me, Mr. Tunney, but I'm the fellow who used to shine your shoes at Lake St. George..."Quite so," replied the ex-champ, shoving out a hand..."So nice to see you again"...One bookie here predicts odds on Louis will be 15 to 5 by bell time.

Sports Editor Alan Gould who is just back from covering the open at Denver, was tagged a Colonel by Governor Ammons....When his Browns hit the skids for fair, Gabby Street discarded No. 13...

They're experimenting with a new football which may be the berries... It is made over a wax form and has no seams...The ball has been tested on a kicking machine and sails through the uprights as true as a die...Coaches are said to favor it.

FISH FOR CHARITY

AFTER 13 YEARS

NEW YORK (CP)—Joe Cronin's fight with Jake Powell of New York here May 31 was the first the Boston shortstop-manager had had during his 13-year major-league career.

Will Visions Come True For Joe?

Behind those sun glasses is Joe Louis, dusky dynamiter of the heavyweight boxing ranks, and now in training at Pompton Lakes, New Jersey, for his title fight against Max Schmeling, June 22. Joe has visions, in both lenses of the glasses, of a figure on the floor of a ring, the figure of Max Schmeling. Joe's vision is a duplicate of the scene fans witnessed two years ago, the last time he met the German, except the man on the canvas that time was the champion himself, then only a contender for the crown. Which of the two will be the figure on the lenses this year?

Soccer Notes

Special preparations have been made by the local soccer clubs for the important league game between Brinton and Canadian General at King Edward Park. Kick off at 6.30 prompt. Referee, Thomas Foster. Both linesmen to be supplied by the clubs playing. The grass has been cut and the field is in excellent shape.

The C.C.F. club has been given permission to bring Kingston soccer club here on Saturday afternoon, June 25th, as the return game that should have been played last season. The Limestone City club are now very anxious to fulfill that obligation.

Saturday afternoon, June 18, Brinton meets the Politicians in a league game at King Edward Park. Please note that game is scheduled for 2.30 prompt. Referee to be appointed.

The Canadian General travels to Deloro on Saturday to meet the Smelters in a league engagement.

On Saturday afternoon, June 25, the Brinton Club will travel to Deloro instead of playnig the C.G.E. on that date as previously arranged, so as to co-operate with the Kingston-C.C.F. game.

A team is permitted to put five subs on the list given to the referee but only three are permitted to be used as subs who must be in uniform ready to take part in the game. Also a goal-keeper cannot handle the ball from a goal-kick, it must be kicked out into the field of play.

In all probability another local team will enter the Injured Players' cup and the Father Phelan trophy competition when the draw takes place at the meeting next Monday night.

Toronto Webbers Will Play Petes

An exhibition senior baseball game is slated for this Saturday afternoon in Riverside Park between Toronto Webbers and the Petes. It will be started at 3.30 o'clock to give the Toronto team plenty of time to get here. The Webbers are around the top of the strong Western City Senior League in Toronto, along with Columbus Grads, Downings and Kiwanis. They will likely start Letty Lesurf, former local junior star, as the young southpaw is pitching first-rate ball in senior company this year. A number of well-known Toronto amateur diamond stars play for Webbers and they should make it a real ball game. It will give fans an idea of the strength of those teams compared wtih the C.O.B.L. calibre. A big crowd should be on hand for the game.

Manager Eddie Murphy expects to use several of his twirlers this Saturday, giving each of them two or three innings mound work. Big Joe Jakafby will start, it being his first game this season. Whitehill, Kitchen and McNally are also expected to get into the game for a time. The Petes will be at full strength and full of fight, following their three-game winning streak which hoisted them to the top of the Central League standing. If the weather is right, fans will flock out to see this promising exhibition tussle at Riverside Park.

Lacrosse Contest Here On Friday

The Inglewood-Caledon Combines come here tomorrow (Friday) evening to play the Petes in an O.L.A. senior "B" scheduled contest at nine o'clock in the George St. lacrosse arena. It will be the locals second home fixture of the season—not counting exhibition games—and their third of the schedule to date. They have won two and lost one. Coach Frank Randle's crew copped a close 15-14 nod over the Combines the night before last on the latter's floor, and the Inglewood outfit will be out for vengeance thsi Friday evening. They are pretty much the same squad that knocked the locals off in playdowns last fall and won the Ontario intermediate championship.

It shapes up another great game here tomorrow between two smart, well-matched teams. They play clever and rugged lacrosse and the issue will be very much in doubt till the final whistle. A big crowd is expected to see the contest. Probably the same lineup as played for the Petes Tuesday will be on hand tomorrow. It was: Goal, Meyette; defence, Miller, Chute, Jerry Creighton and Dundas; forwards, Whitton Worthy, Dallin, King, Crowe, Magee, Reid and Emmett Creighton The Combines will send their strongest squad for this return fixture.

Smith Township Gives Notice Of Appeal To County Of Its Equalized Assessment

The Municipal Council of the township of Smith met at the clerk's office on Monday, at the hour of 7 p.m., Standard Time.

All the members were present.

Communications were read as follows: Toronto Salt Works, re calcium chloride; Roofers Supply Co., re road signs; Chemong Park Association, agreeable to same terms re police officer; Department of Highways, two sections of road to revert to municipality; petition from cottagers of Plan 54 for Council to take over road; Treasurer of Douro, cheque for $9, relief account; Dominion Bureau of Statistics, for amount of metal put on roads; appropriation of S.S. No. 3, for issue of debentures for school, $6,500; appropriation of S.S. No. 13, for issue of debentures for school, $15,000; Trustee levies from School Sections Nos. 4, 6, 7, 9, 10 and 11.

Messrs. Lowes, Crawford and Kirkpatrick were present to ask Council to extend the fence on the north side of the 8th concession line to Chemong Lake veering somewhat to the north.

Ask Bylaw Passed.

Messrs. Brown, Frise and Johnston, trustees of S.S. No. 13, were present to ask Council to pass a bylaw authorizing the issue of debentures for $15,000 for funds to erect a new school and extending over a period of twenty years.

They also asked for calcium chloride to be placed on some of the streets north of the city.

The clerk was provided with a list of the ratepayers in S.S. No. 13, which section coincides with the restricted building area.

Messrs. A. I. Edmison, W. J. Telford and Bruce Bell were also present to ask Council to pass a bylaw authorizing the issue of debentures for $6,500 for funds to remunerate S.S. No. 13 for its equity in S.S. No. 3 school-house and grounds, such debentures to extend over a period of twenty years.

Moved by M. Clark and seconded by G. McIlmoyle, that the applications of School Sections Nos. 3 and 13 be received and that the clerk advertise for tenders for loans by debenture to the amounts of $6,500 and $15,000, extending over a period of twenty years each. Tenders will be received for $6,500 in one sum, but tenderers may apply for a part of $15,000 in as low a sum as $3,000 each. Carried.

The clerk was asked to ascertain from the Utilities Commission of Peterborough its rules as to the extension of water mains into Smith Township.

Moved by Reeve Mann and seconded by M. Clark, that Council take over the road known as "Kelly Boulevard," being a twenty-foot road allowance at the rear of lots in Plan 54, Smith. Carried.

Constable Appointed.

On the recommendation of the Chemong Park Cottagers' Association, Harry McLachlan was again engaged as police constable for Chemong Park and additional areas and on the same terms. The clerk was authorized to pay his salary on due dates.

By motion of M. Clark and G. McIlmoyle, it was decided to have calcium chloride placed on Bennett and Wolsey Streets and Barnardo Ave., and also on the streets in Chemong Park.

The clerk was instructed to proceed with the matter of the restricted building area recently established by applying to the Municipal Board for its approval of same at a meeting of ratepayers of said area, later to be called.

Moved by M. Clark and seconded by G. McIlmoyle, that the Municipal Council of the Township of Smith hereby serves notice to the members of the Peterborough County Council that it wishes to appeal its equalized assessment, owing to the fact that Smith Township has lost in assessment through the sale of the Canada Cement Company's property to the H.E.P.C. of Ontario, the net sum of $31,925; and also the fact that in the opinion of Smith Council in the last change of equalized assessment, Smith's assessment was unduly increased and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the county clerk. Carried.

Council adjourned, to meet on Tuesday, June 28, at 1 p.m.

Newly Built Clipper Nearly Meets Disaster

The Atlantic Clipper, first of pan-American's planned fleet of six such flying boats, comes perilously close to disaster as she taxied in Elliott Bay, Seattle, Wash. As the giant flying boat attempted a turn the left wing was caught by a gust of wind and lifted high into the air, at the same time the tip of the right wing was plunged at least 10 feet into the water. The service boat, Panair, went to the Clipper's assistance and attached a tow rope to her stern while a sea anchor was lowered from the bow of the airplane to hold her steady. The Clipper, which has just been completed, is designed to carry 40 passengers in the Pacific trade or 50 on the New York-London run this summer.

REGISTERED LATER

Circling in an airliner above the Tower of Empire at the Glasgow exhibition, 18-year-old Agnes Gilmour Spencer of Polmont, Stirlingshire, and Cecil Ferguson, a Glasgow engineer, were married by declaration.

When the wedding party arrived at Renfrew airport to charter an airliner, a lawyer who came with them explained to officials that the couple wanted to be married in the air.

William Gairdner, air superintendent of Scottish Airways, who was the pilot, was asked to rehearse the questions before taking off.

Five minutes after the triple-motored Spartan took off from Renfrew, the pilot turned round and asked the formal question of his front-seat passengers:

"Do you Cecil Ferguson and do you Agnes Gilmour Spencer accept each other as husband and wife?"

They answered "Yes."

Fred Miller, traffic manager of Scottish Airways, handed the declaration form to the bride, bridegroom and witnesses to be signed, and, as the airliner flew back to Renfrew, the air ceremony was completed.

After landing, the newlyweds—Britain's first air bride and bridegroom—motored to Glasgow to register the marriage before Sheriff Macdonald.

NEEDLE WORKS DOWN FROM HAND TO LEG

Makes Devious Journey Through Woman's Body in Forty Years

Hereford—When she was scrubbing a floor nearly 40 years ago Mrs. Elizabeth Izzard of Credenhill, near Hereford, ran a sewing needle so deeply into her hand that the doctor decided it would be unwise to remove it.

Since then Mrs. Izzard has carried out her household duties without discomfort.

Mrs. Izzard is now 80, and recently she complained of a severe pain in her leg.

She extracted it without an operation, and the needle, which is about two inches long and almost as thick as a darning needle, was perfectly clean, the point and eye being as good as when in use.

JUMPS FROM TRAIN IN LONDON TUNNEL

Fugitive Is Caught Hiding in Haystack and Bleeding Profusely

Weymouth. — After a 12-hour hunt, in which 200 police took part, Edgar Wattam, the 30-year-old Londoner who jumped from an express while under arrest, was found hiding in a haystack at Druce.

Wattam was being taken from London to Weymouth when just before the train entered Bincombe tunnel he dived through the window and got away.

"Be careful. I am injured," he cried to his captors.

Later, he was brought to Weymouth where he was remanded, charged with breaking and entering.

HOSPITAL RELIEVES HAY FEVER VICTIMS

Reports 80 Per Cent. Get Marked Relief at Clinic

London—So high a percentage of victims of hay fever reported relief after treatment at the new extension of the Margaret Street hospital for diseases of the chest, last year, that the organizers have decided to continue the treatment this summer.

The secretary, Miss D. M. Fenn, stated that of 850 people treated at the clinic between March and July last year, 80 per cent. reported marked relief. Many, in fact, have had no recurrence of the complaint and say they do not need the treatment this year. There are, therefore, fewer people taking the treatment, which was revived recently and will be continued till autumn.

ST. ANNE'S EX-VICAR TO REMARRY AT 83

Bride-To-Be 40 Years in Civil Service

Eastbourne.—A meeting during a cruise to the Holy Land led to the announcement that the Rev. W. P. Jay, ex-vicar of St. Anne's, Eastbourne, who is aged 83, is to marry again in September.

Mr. Jay retired from St. Anne's two years ago, shortly after the death of his wife, to whom he had been married 54 years. Miss Nottidge will shortly retire from the civil service after nearly 40 years' service.

BIG SHORTHORN HERD IS TAKEN TO SURREY

Tarves Breeder Paid $27,825 for One Animal

Aberdeen.—Collynie, the name which for nearly a century has given world fame to the small village of Tarves, near here, ceased to exist recently, when one of the greatest herds of Shorthorns ever produced was transferred to the Surrey estate of Sir Bernard Greenwell.

Founded by William Duthie and inherited by his nephew, J. Duthie Webster, in 1923, the herd was sold in its entirety to Sir Bernard. It numbers close on 150 animals, valued at many thousands of pounds. A special train made an all-night journey from Inverurie and disembarked the animals safely at Marden Park, Woldingham.

No other herd of pedigree stock in the world has ever achieved such world-wide reputation. For nearly 80 years farmers engaged in breeding beef cattle have journeyed to Tarves from all parts of the world to buy stock.

POLICE EJECT COUNCILLOR

Laborite Had Demanded Conservative Withdraw Statement

Wimbledon.—Police were called to eject a member of the Wimbledon council following a scene at a meeting in the town hall recently. The ejected member, A. E. Baxter, J.P., prospective parliamentary Labor candidate for Wimbledon, demanded that a Conservative member, Councillor Law, should withdraw a statement that he had told an untruth.

WELCOMING "B.P." . . . AND THE ROYAL TOURNAMENT AT OLYMPIA

"Welcome Home" is the message these Sea Scouts (LEFT) are sending via signals to the vessel bearing Lord Baden-Powell, chief scout of world, home to England after an extended tour of South Africa, while the fanfare of trumpets at right is being blown by Trumpeters John Miller and William Lavin, both of the Royal Artillery, to signalize opening of the Royal Tournament at Olympia. Incidentally Lord Baden-Powell, though he was ill, insisted on walking down the gangplank to receive the scouts' welcome.

'WE WANT THE QUEEN' REVIEW CROWD YELLS

Leaves Royal Box to Take Place Beside the King on Dais

Liverpool.—"We want the Queen," affectionately insistent, section after section of an 80,000 audience raised the spontaneous appeal at Everton Football club ground here, at an interval in the most brilliantly ceremonial function of the royal visit to Lancashire.

The King, in the uniform of a field-marshal, had presented new colors to the Liverpool Scottish, "The Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders," of which he is colonel-in-chief, and to the 5th Bn. the King's regiment (Liverpool).

The Queen, in the palest crushed strawberry, with hat, costume, and fox fur in perfect harmony, in the royal box, responded to the appeal of the great crowd.

She walked out to the dais, whence the King had taken the salute, and, turning to each of the four massed banks of wildly cheering people, waved her hand.

MISSING WILL IS MYSTERY AT INQUEST ON MOTHER, SON

LEFT HER A HOUSE

Birmingham.—The mystery of a missing will was referred to at a Birmingham inquest on a mother and son who committed suicide.

A 79-year-old widow, Caroline Ward, was found gassed, and her son George (57), a quantity surveyor, with throat wounds at their home in Bromyard Rd., Hall Green.

The coroner (Dr. W. H. Davison) read a statement from the son describing how his mother had been found dead. "We were very happy together," it ran.

Mrs. Florence E. Elliott, a neighbor, said that during a visit to the house a few days earlier the question of a will was raised between Mrs. Ward and her son.

The son brought a will into the bedroom and Mrs. Elliott's husband and her father signed it.

Witness said she did not know what the will contained, but understood that Mrs. Ward was to leave her the house she rented.

The coroner: "But she would not be leaving the house to you while her son was still alive?" "That was what I could not understand."

"That will has never been seen since, do you know that?" "Yes, I understand so."

"Did you know that there is a will in the hands of solicitors in which the mother and son, in the event of one of them dying, left the property to the other?" "I know nothing of that."

London.—An inquiry by the ministry of labor shows that at the end of 1936 there were 6,544 employers operating voluntary schemes for employees' pensions. This total does not include government departments and local authorities. These schemes cover 1,617,000 people, of whom 814,000 are manual wage-earners.

BITTER FAMILY FEUD IS HEALED IN COURT

Men Shake Hands and Assault Charge Is Dismissed

Wimbledon. — Next-door neighbors at Malmesbury Rd., Morden, who were said to have been bitter enemies for two years, settled their disputes at Wimbledon police court.

Appleyard denied the assault. He said he and his family had been persecuted by the prosecutor ever since they became neighbors. Rachael made a similar complaint, adding that each time any members of the two families met there was trouble.

A. E. Baxter, the chairman, asked the two men to stand in front of the bench.

"Now look here," he said. "You are both making yourselves miserable by being bad friends like this. It is silly to spend your lives quarrelling. Are you going to shake hands and say, 'We are going to drop this altogether.'

BLOOD TEST USED TO PROVE MAN ISN'T CHILD'S FATHER

First Case of Kind in English Court Heard at Marlborough

GIRL'S PLEA FAILS

Marlborough, Wilts.—The first case heard in this country in which a blood test proved that a man cited in a paternity case could not possibly be the father, came before the Marlborough magistrates.

R. J. Parker, solicitor, of Swindon, stated that there had been an application by Miss Ena Dorington, a domestic servant, of Ramsbury, for an affiliation order against Leslie Richard Hawkins, Aldbourne, for whom he appeared.

On that occasion, after the bench had heard evidence on behalf of both parties, he (Mr. Parker) had intimated that if the magistrates were not satisfied that Hawkins was not the father, he would like a blood test to be taken.

A blood test had now been taken by Dr. Roche Lynch, senior official analyst to the home office and director of the department of chemical pathology at St. Mary's hospital, Paddington.

Dr. Roche Lynch then gave evidence that Miss Dorington called at St. Mary's hospital, and, in his presence, samples of her blood and of the child's were taken.

About half an hour later Hawkins came, and a sample of his blood was taken. The results were:

Miss Dorington — blood group A.-M.-N.

Baby Dorington — blood group A.-N.

L. R. Hawkins — blood group O.-M.

The children of parents whose groups were M.-N. and M. could be only M. or M.-N. They could not be N. In this case the child was N.

Therefore, with the mother in group M.-N., the father must have been M.-N. or N. In this case it was absolutely established that Hawkins could not be the father of the child. The factors A and O had no significance in this instance.

Mr. Parker (to Dr. Roche Lynch): "There can be no question about the result of the test?" "The only possible question would be an error personally, and I can say that the test was honestly and carefully done."

Mr. Parker: "You conducted this test personally?" "Yes."

"You are satisfied that you did not make a mistake?" "I am."

E. G. Docker, for Miss Dorington, said he was prepared to accept the doctor's statement, and Sir Francis Burdett, who presided, said that Miss Dorington's application would be dismissed.

SURPRISE FOR MOURNERS

Chesterfield.—Relatives of the 79 victims of the explosion at the Markham colliery, near Chesterfield, visited the pit-head for the last time to receive the men's wages.

New York Mother Established Record in 1935

Doncaster.—A baby girl weighing 14 lbs. 4 ozs. has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Best, of Conisbrough, near Doncaster.

A boy born at Gastonia, North Carolina, in March weighed 19 lbs. A 22-lb. baby was born in New Yory in 1935.

The case of a Crewe schoolmistress whose baby weighed 20 lbs. at birth has been mentioned in the British Medical Journal.

CURATE SENTENCED FOR STEALING HAT

Magistrate, Shocked at Occurrence, Passes Six Months' Sentence

Leeds. — Rev. Benjamin Beckworth, 38, curate at Christ church, Meadowlane, Leeds, pleaded guilty to stealing a trilby hat and was sentenced to six weeks in the second division.

W. Brownbill, a Leeds store supervisor, stated that Mr. Beckworth took off his hat, placed it on the counter and then tried on several similar hats. He put his hat in his mackintosh pocket and left the store wearing a new one. When stopped he said, "Yes, that's right, let me pay for it."

The magistrate, Mr. Horace Marshall: To me it is inconceivable that a man can be in the position of a priest who is capable of going into a shop and stealing a 5s ($1.25) hat. The two things seem utterly inconsistent.

The vicar of Christ church, Rev. C. C. Cooke, said there might be disciplinary action by the bishop, and afterwards it might be possible for Beckworth to be reinstated. He would do all he could to help him.

Mr. Beckworth seemed dazed by the sentence and stood for a moment gazing at the magistrate. He had to be assisted from the dock by police officers.

Later in the day notice of appeal was given and Mr. Beckworth was released on bail.

ACTOR IS DELIGHTED BY PRISON AUDIENCE

Wishes All Were as Appreciative as 600 Men in Wandsworth

Wandsworth—"I wish all audiences were as quick and appreciative as this one," thought Sir Seymour Hicks, as he watched 800 men enjoying themselves in Wandsworth prison.

Seated in long rows in the chapel, the prisoners listened to nearly two hours of entertainment provided by a party of well-known stage and radio artists. At the word of command, but still laughing, they filed back to their cells after the show.

"They sat as if hypnotised when Giovanni, the lightning "pick-pocket," stole a watch and removed a man's braces with his darting hands.

A banjo solo set them humming and beating time, and they almost frightened Olive Grove with their applause when she sang "The Little Damozel."

Above all, they enjoyed the score or so stories told to them by Sir Seymour Hicks in that casual, masterly way of his. They laughed most when he told how at an official reception in one of the Dominions the chairman, saying what a wonderful actor they now had among them, concluded:

"You all know the name of the man I mean. It is Mr. Seymour Tich."

NEWS AND VIEWS FROM ALL CORNERS OF THE WORLD

KEEPING VOW OF 10 YEARS CUTS EGYPT DRUG TRAFFIC

Prices So High Peasants Turn to Black Tea Brew

GROW OWN HASHISH

Cairo.—Russell Pasha, British commandant of the Cairo city police, is keeping a vow he made 10 years ago when he began a great campaign to drive the drug smuggling kings from Egypt.

He vowed to raise the price of illict drugs so high they would be out of the reach of the peasant farmers, who form the backbone of Egypt's population. His report for 1937 shows that the wholesale price of illict heroin has risen from £30 ($150) a pound in 1939 to £300 ($1,500) a pound—which is far too much for the poor Egyptian farmer.

Russell Pasha gives a stern warning to peasants who are now growing their own hashish and poppies from which opium is extracted. Last year 22,347 hashish plants were uprooted and acres of poppies destroyed.

Peasants have also taken to drinking a special black brew of tea which acts as a drug. As a remedy he suggests reduction in customs tariffs on cheaper varieties of tea and tobacco.

PRINTS OWN TICKETS FOR TRAINS 10 YEARS

Strasburg.—For 10 years a dapper little old Frenchman has been travelling around France in luxury trains—and never paid a nickel.

Now a Strasburg court has given him 10 years' rest from his "fatiguing journeys" in a French prison.

For 65-year-old Georges Siebert, a former railroad employee, has manufactured his own first class tickets and even Pullman sleeper tickets so that he had no difficulty at all, or so he told the judge, in visiting the whole of "my charming country."

JAPS PLAN CONTROL OF VAST JUNK TRADE

$23,000,000 Revenue Would Build Battleship

Tokyo.—Japan is overlooking no bets in efforts to conserve and utilize all resources in the present emergency. The bureau of commerce and industry plans to extend its official control of the junk business.

Preliminary surveys revealed that Tokyo rag-pickers collect around 200,000 tons of waste each year which brings $6,500,000. The total national junk trade is valued at $23,000,000, and Japan could build a battleship for that.

Japan consumes 70,000 tons of rubber annually; 15,000 tons of this is reclaimed by junk men.

URGE EVERY TOWN TO PLAN FOR AIRPORT

Johannesburg, S.A.—Every municipality in South Africa should have at least one airport, and some of the larger towns should have more than one, said Captain Roy Makepeace, manager of the Rand airport, in an address to a conference of municipal engineers here.

"Millions of pounds have been wasted as a result of short-sightedness on the part of local authorities in not reserving airport sites of sufficient size in the earlier days of the development of air transport," he said.

JAPS PAY LUXURY TAX

Toothpaste Tubes Banned — Army Needs Lead

Tokyo.—Shoes, hats, shirts, neckties, matches, radios, watches and toilet goods (excluding tooth powder and soap) are among the more than 40 articles subjected to a luxury tax under Japan's new war-time revenue laws. Toothpaste tubes are banned as the army needs lead for bullets.

MOVE 2,000,000 TURKS TO HOMELAND, IS PLAN

Europeans Will Have to Change Dress Mode After Transfer to Asia

Two million Turks still remaining in Europe outside Turkish rule are involved. They are divided between Bulgaria (about 1,000,000), Greece, Jugoslavia and Roumania.

The mass emigration will mostly affect Thrace and Macedonia, which were wrested from the Ottoman empire in the Balkan wars of 1912-13. Here whole areas will be almost depopulated, while in Anatolia and other parts of Turkey in Asia districts and settlements have been prepared for their reception.

The European Turks will have to change their dress and mode of life when they are restored to Turkish rule.

Paris. — Two hundred deserters from the Spanish government army hiding a wood near the Franco-Spanish border at Palaud de Ceragne, were trapped by loyalist militiamen, who shot dead 20 of them and wounded 30 others.

This was revealed when survivors appeared near the village of Palaud and told how they had plotted to pass into France.

GETS ON JOBLESS LIST SENATOR ENTERS MINE

Foreman Complains New Chap Doesn't Know Job —Sought Data Incognito

Brussels.—When the day shift came up from Sacre-Francais coalpit at Dampremy, near Charleroi, the other day the foreman went to the manager. "That new chap you took on a week ago doesn't know much about his job, and, what's more, I can't understand him. He speaks kind of funny, not like us," he said.

The manager investigated and found that the "new chap" wearing a miner's cap and as black as a sweep, was Count Xavier de Grunne, senator, who formerly belonged to the Rexist party, and who now sits alone in the Upper House as an Independent.

Desiring to gain practical knowledge of a miner's task, Count Grunne assumed a false name and had himself registered in Charleroi as unemployed. He was given a job in the mine, but whatever he has learned about mining since then he has evidently not been able to pick up the miners' argot.

He has rendered himself liable to prosecution for using false identity, but the offence is covered by parliamentary immunity.

TO SAVE ON COINAGE

New 5 and 10-sen Jap Coins to Cost Less

Tokyo.—The finance minister plans to replace Japan's 50-sen silver coins with paper notes and to issue new ten and five-sen coins and coppers containing more alloy than at present. It is estimated the plan would save 320 tons of silver, 250 tons of nickel and 25 tons of tin.

GUARDING 'LOVE LETTERS' FINDS THEY'VE STOLEN $1,500

Burned Ship's Cashier and Fiance Arrested—Make Confession

LAUNDRESS CURIOUS

Levieux, according to his confession, left the ship on the evening of May 4, having made up his accounts and taken from his safe about $1,500, which he was to deliver at the company's head office the next morning.

But when Levieux awoke the Lafayette was ablaze. Telling his chief he had left the money on board, he returned home, made a parcel of the cash, and handed it to his sweetheart, a stewardess on the ship.

She took the parcel to a friend, a laundry-woman, and told her: "I am in a mess. These are love letters from a dear friend. Do keep them for a few days."

The woman agreed, but she was inquisitive to know more about the "mess." She opened the parcel and discovered the money. The company was informed: Levieux and his sweetheart were arrested. They made a full confession.

FROST INJURES VINES SWISS EXPERTS SAY

Zurich.—Agricultural experts state that the damage done to the vines by frosts verges on calamitous. They fear that the confederation will have to help the peasants.

In the canton of Vaud, the frost has affected from 80 to 100 per cent. of the vines and the situation is almost as bad in the cantons of Geneva and Neuchatel and the region of Lake Bienne. Losses in the eastern part of Switzerland are not so serious, but range from 30 to 70 per cent.

WOMAN GANG LEADER CAUGHT IN ROBBERY

Paris Police Believe Powerful Gang Broken Up

Paris.—A feminine ganglander and lieutenant of France's Arsene Lupin, Serge de Lenz, has just been arrested.

Germaine Aupet was caught robbing a Paris hotel and French police are now confident they have captured the ringleader of a gang of hotel and house thieves which has been successfully operating throughout the country for two years.

Germaine's husband is still in jail as is Serge de Lenz but the Paris police consider the gang, at one time the most powerful in the capital, broken up.

MAY LEAVE TROOPS AT CAIRO, ALEXANDRIA

Cairo.—The view is gaining ground in Egypt that in the present circumstances it might be advisable to leave the British troops at Cairo and Alexandria instead of removing them to the Suez Canal zone, as provided in the Anglo-Egyptian treaty of 1936.

According to the treaty, Egypt agrees to build barracks in the canal zone and to pay for maintenance of British troops there.

N.Z. BUYS 30 PLANES

moderate decline in the face of depressed conditions elsewhere, and since February our index of the physical volume of business has been tending upwards. Moreover, there are now important forces at work which in my opinion should give a vigorous impetus to further recovery later in the year. Most important of these is the improved prospect for a good wheat crop and for good agricultural conditions generally. The mining industry may also be counted on to provide a further stimulus.

"Finally, I am confident that as a result of the government's program in relation to housing, municipal improvements and national conservation and development generally, we may expect to see during the next few months the beginning of a more vigorous revival in the construction industry and the many industries which depend upon it. If backed by the wholehearted co-operation of all elements in our population, these should make the current year a reasonably satisfactory one."

In his review of government financing for the past year, Mr. Dunning told of collecting $516,692,000 from all sources, an increase of $62,538,000 from 1936-37, and $55,835,000 higher than 1928-29, the previous record year for Dominion revenue. Of this total, $448,652,000 came from taxation, mostly from the sales tax, income tax and Customs duties.

Where The Money Went.

With $516,692,000 in the national till, he spent $410,954,000 on the ordinary expenditures of government, an increase of $23,842,000 from the previous year. This money was spent for such purposes as running the departments of the government, financing the public debt, paying subsidies to provinces, paying old-age pensions, war pensions and for the new defence program.

Counting only ordinary expenditures, the national treasury would have reported a surplus in excess of $100,000,000, but when special or extra-ordinary expenditures were taken into account, an over-all deficit resulted.

For instance, $43,947,000 was spent for general relief and $24,585,000 for special relief in the Western drought area. In addition, the Canadian National Railways, Trans-Canada Air Lines, and other government-owned enterprises needed $44,833,000, leading to the over-all deficit of $13,775,000.

Eventful, Dramatic Year.

OTTAWA, June 16 (CP). — The fiscal year 1937-38 was eventful and dramatic, said Finance Minister Dunning in opening his budget speech today. Last year he had stressed the dependence of Canadian economic progress on the preservation of peace and lessening of international friction. No one then could have forecast the degree to which international relations had become disturbed in the interval.

Canadian economy, however, had given a good account of itself under the shadow of disturbing world events. The physical volume of business had expanded eight per cent. from March to November, 1937, and then a decline had set in until April, 1938, when it was nearly nine per cent. under April, 1937. Since then it had advanced 5.3 per cent.

In neither the United States nor the United Kingdom had there been the same reversal of the downward trend as in Canada. The lag between the downward trend in Canada and other important countries was more remarkable in view of the crop failure in Western Canada. Crop prospects for this year were favorable.

Blames Tension Abroad.

"A critical examination of all the major factors leads me to the conviction that, had it not been for economic depression and political tension abroad, Canadian business would have continued its upward trend with only a moderate slackening in its rate of advance," he said.

"In each of the last two years I have had to refer to the failure of employment to keep pace with the striking gains in business activity and to point out that this was a condition usually met with in the early stages of recovery from business depression.

"I am therefore pleased to be able to report that during 1937 the increase in the volume of employment was for the first time since 1929 more rapid than the rise in industrial production, and also that since the downward trend in business began last December employment has declined less rapidly than other business indices.

March Job List Up.

"Estimates by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics of the total number of wage earners employed in all industries show that the number in employment was higher in March, 1938, than in the corresponding month of the preceding seven years, and only slightly less than in March of 1929 and 1930. The estimated number of unemployed wage earners was 456,000 in March, 1938, which was lower than in the same month of any year since 1931."

There was no better way of expanding employment than by stimulating building activity. The construction industry had already revived under the stimulus of the Housing Act and Home Improvement Act.

"Under our system at least, government expenditures cannot take the place of private enterprise, and I do not think that our people are prepared to accept the alternative system of regimentation under which al or practically all expenditures would be government expenditures."

These principles led the government to propose the Municipal Assistance and Housing Bills now before parliament. For the most part they would involve the government in loans of a self-liquidation character. There would be some loss but it would be amply compensated by the employment created and permanent improvement in living conditions.

Manufacturing activity in the production of capital or producers' goods was one of the bright spots of the year, particularly in the iron and steel industry. The mining industry was responsible for the greatest stimulus to national economy and production was well over the previous year. Results in the forestry industries were less encouraging. Exports of newsprint fell off towards the end of the year.

A Hoary Fallacy.

Referring to interest charges, Mr. Dunning said:

"There are some who appear to believe that the government should not pay interest at all or, indeed, should issue debtfree money to finance its expenditures or to retire its interest-bearing debt or to do both of these things. It is incredible that this hoary fallacy should persist after so many historical demonstrations of its devastating possibilities.

"Perhaps I underestimate the insidious appeal of a program which promises to make something out of nothing, although I must say that for one one more than for a Minister of Finance should such a program have seductive charm.

"How much easier my task would be if I could draw on the accumulated savings of the Canadian people without paying interest thereon, or if indirectly I could do the same thing by issuing credit against our natural wealth, that is, against the resources of farm and forest and mine and factory now owned by the Canadian people as individuals and not by the Dominion Government.

"For the fiscal year 1937-38, our revenue from taxation and all other sources aggregated $516,692,000. This total exceeded that of the previous year by some $62,538,000, and surpassed by $55,835,000 the previous high total of the fiscal year 1928-29.

Revenue Up 65 Per Cent.

"The extent of our recovery from the low point of the depression is strikingly illustrated by the fact that our total revenue for 1937-38 represented an increase of more than 65 per cent. over that for the year 1932-33.

"Total revenue from taxation amounted to $448,652,000, and exceeded the total for last year by over $62,000,000. Every major tax source contributed to this increase.

Expenditures Up 23 Million.

"The ordinary expenditures for the year totalled $410,954,000, an increase of $23,842,000 over the previous fiscal year. As ordinary revenues amounted to $510,299,000, the so-called surplus on ordinary account was almost $100,000,000. However, this surplus on ordinary account has only slight significance under present conditions which require substantial expenditures for relief and other purposes.

"The largest single item of special expenditures was necessitated by the disastrous drought in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

"To meet the emergent and unforeseen problems created by this renewed drought condition, the Dominion Government felt obligated to appropriate funds by Governor-General's warrants in order to pay the expenditures involved in purchasing and distributing feed and fodder for livestock in the drought-stricken areas, and in providing direct relief to farmers living in these areas."

Testify At Kingston Inquiry

Inquiring into the death from a rifle bullet of Cadet H. G. Campbell at Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont., a coroner's jury found that the cadet died from a self-inflicted wound. These officers, Capt. D. B. Buell and Capt., C. G. Wood and Cadets J. O. Alexander and G. A. E. Couture are pictured as they attended the inquest. Capt. Wood is R. M. C.'s medical officer and Capt. Buell the physical instruction officer. Depression resulting from the death of a fellow cadet in a friendly scuffle some weeks ago and worry over term examinations was blamed by the jury for Campbell's act.

400th Anniversary Of Bible Marked

Dr. John McNicol addressed a representative gathering at Trinity church Wednesday evening in commemoration of the 400th centenary of the English Bible. Dr. McNicol stressed the influence of the open bible in the life of England and the English speaking world during the 400 years since Tyndale gave to the people of England the Word of God in their own language. The speaker pointed out that the brilliant literary period of Elizabeth's reign had its foundation in the opportunity of the English people to read the Bible and to master its beauty of style and its matchless understanding of life and human nature. Dr. McNicol made a strong appeal for the return of the study of the Bible individually and the recognition of its guiding principles in the life of the nation. G. A. Gillespie, president of the local committee of the Bible Society acted as chairman and Rev. G. S. Easton, Canon J. D. Paterson, Dr. T. Barr and Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe assisted in the service

The choir of Trinity church under the direction of Miss Clarry was augmented by members of other choirs of the city.

Backfire Hurts Skipper

LONDON, June 16 (C.P.-Havas). —Commander Steel of the famous clipper 'Cutty Sark' was injured last night when an ancient gun backfired as he lit its fuse to fire a farewell salute. He was taken ashore to hospital. The accident happened just as the 'Cutty Sark', which has won many Australia-to-England "grain" races, was leaving for Falmouth, where the ship was to become a cadet training craft.

Municipalities Must Assume Cost Of Connecting Links United Counties Informed

(By A Staff Reporter)

COBOURG, June 16.—Roads in towns and villages regarded as connecting links in the county roads system of Northumberland and Durham have never been officially so designated by the Department of Highways, and should be maintained by the respective urban municipalities, C. A. Poynton, Toronto, a representative of the Department, told the counties council Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Poynton's statement was not only news to the members, but it was surprising news leaving a more or less mild sense of shock. Campbellford, for instance, according to Reeve Chas. Calver, has arranged for repairs to the paving on its so-called connecting link to be begun next Monday, and the Trent town expected that the counties would bear as usual part of the cost. In fact Reeve Calver said that if the council of Campbellford had known the circumstances mentioned by Mr. Poynton the work would have been done a year ago.

A. S. Miller, county road superintendent, replied that he was not informed until this year of the Department's contention, and for that reason he was not in a position to advise Campbellford or any other municipality.

"I assumed that the county road system was as indicated on the map used by my predecessor (George Greer)" Mr. Miller said, "and it was not until I was in Toronto some time ago that I learned differently. I was censured by the Chief Engineer, and I found that I hadn't a leg to stand on. Had I known the facts as held by the Department there would have been no money spent on connecting links during the last two years.

Reeve Calver asked Mr. Poynton—"Does it mean that each municipality, town and village, must assume the cost of maintaining its connecting links?

Mr. Poynton—Yes.

Reeve Calver—Well, that's a bolt out of the blue for Campbellford and other municipalities that are affected. If we had known that we would have pressed for the repair work to be done last year. We are now ready to go ahead with it next week.

Mr. Poynton said that the county road map for Northumberland and Durham in the office of the Department showed a total of 240 miles, but in the counties engineer's office it was 277 miles. The difference of thirty-seven miles was represented apparently by Mr. Greer's understanding that the connecting links in the towns and villages were part of the county road system. But, there had been argument to that effect, and the grants made by the Department toward the paving of those links some years ago had been only for the purpose of assisting those municipalities in constructing permanent roads.

Replying to Reeve L. E. Wilson of Cobourg, Mr. Poynton said the discrepancy had been discovered only recently by an auditor for the Department.

"We certainly have been under a false impression," Reeve Wilson said, "and it looks now that you are taking the attitude that you are through with us, and the towns and villages can look after the entire cost of those links themselves."

Paving Began In 1927

Paving of the connecting links, as they have been commonly designated, began in Hastings back in 1927, and extended to all the towns and villages in the united counties, involving a heavy expenditure that was met by the issuing of debentures. In the discussion Wednesday afternoon it was said that prior to 1927 the town and villages had received grants from the counties council for expenditure, 50 per cent. of the cost in towns and 75 per cent. in villages. When the paving program was undertaken the urban municipalities realized that the work was imposing an extra cost on the townships, and agreed to refund or forego to the counties council the amount of the road grants for periods of ten to thriteen years, depending on the quality of the pavement for the most part. When George Hooton of Cavan was Warden about 1931 the equalized assessment of the counties was increased from $29,000,000 to $51,000,000, and with an increased tax rate for roads and townships agreed, because of the resulting increase in the amount of taxes the towns and villages would have to pay, to reduce the period for the refunding of the county road grants, to five and eight years.

Mr. Poynton contended that there was no mention of repairs in the original agreement, that the bylaws were simply for road construction, the Department assuming a share of the cost by way of assisting the municipalities. He also said there was no record in the Department of bylaws changing the terms of forfeiture of road grants, and hence the original agreement had to hold good.

"The agreement for the construction of paved strips in the towns and villages did not make those roads part of the county road system," Mr. Poynton declared.

It was also said that in the case of Millbrook its pavement was on roads that were originally part of the county road system.

Reeve Wilson—How could debentures be issued by the counties if the roads were not in the county roads system?

Mr. Poynton—Well, it was not in the bylaw, and Department knows now it is not legal that it should pay toward the maintenance of the links.

Mr. Stinson, who had been called in, said it seemed strange that 50 per cent. grants were made if the links were not classed as county roads.

The question is likely to come up for further discussion at a meeting of the roads committeee Thursday.

Ontario Saves

Mr. Stinson, a former Warden of the United Counties, estimated that the saving to the ratepayers of Durham and Northumberland by the action of the Ontario Government is assuming full cost of old-age pensions and mothers' allowances would be about $54,000 a year.

"The total payment of allowances in the United Counties for the fiscal year ending March, 1937, was $52,-415, of which fifty per cent., $26,-147.50 was paid out of the Counties' treasury. We are the fifth highest in the province, being exceeded by the same three counties as in old-age pensions with Essex added. That county exceeds us by $3,000 in mothers' allowances and we exceed them by $2,000 in pensions.

The Commission points out that the allowance is in itself not considered adequate to supply all family needs. In ordinary circumstances the families manage fairly well, but where there is sickness or unemployment additional help is sometimes needed and should be given. The total payment yearly in this province is approximately $5,-000,000, caring for 12,586 mothers and 28,000 children. One can readily see the burdens that would be thrust upon the public if there were no allowances for these mothers."

Counties Statistics.

Mr. Stinson said there were in the last summary 1,256 old-age pensioners and 172 mothers receiving allowances in the United Counties. Pensioners, residing in the constituent municipalities were grouped as follows: Alnwick 7, Brighton Village 65, Brighton Township 61, Bowmanville 80, Cobourg 114, Campbellford 112, Clarke 50, Cartwright 11, Cavan 40, Colborne 40, Cramahe 56, Darlington 50, Hope 32, Haldimand 56, Hamilton 27, Hastings 26, Millbrook 17, Murray 92, Manvers 45, Newcastle 21, Port Hope 117, Percy 58, South Monaghan 16, and Seymour 23.

No mothers' allowances are received by residents of South Monaghan and Alnwick, Millbrook has 6, Cavan 6, Hastings 5, Percy 4, Seymour 4, Manvers 4, Campbellford 20, Port Hope and Cobourg have 20 each, and Bowmanville 13.

Mr. Stinson also reported that 30 applications for pensions have been recommended by the local boards, but not yet approved by the Commission, and there are fifteen on hand to be dealt with by the boards. The number of applications received this year is 130. Pensioners in the Counties' Home 18.

Personnel of Boards.

The memebrs of the Durham Board for Pensions and Mothers' Allowances is composed of Mrs. J. R. Cooper of Orono, George Bennett of Port Hope, and Vernor R. Hunter of Cavan, appointed by the Government, and Mrs. A. L. Nicholls of Bowmanville, and A. L. Pascoe of Hampton, appointed by the counties. The first meeting of the new board was held at the home of Mr. Cooper. A. L. Pascoe was appointed chairman and Mr. Hunter vice-chairman. The second meeting was at Coburg, but it was felt that Durham meetings should be held within the county, and Port Hope was chosen for future meetings, the fourth being held there on June 13.

The members of the Northumberland board are Miss Mary O'Rorke of Cobourg, Edward Quinn of Colborne, and William J. Duncan of Seymour, appointed by the Government, and Mrs. Elva Vincent of Brighton, and Fred Waterman of South Monaghan, appointed by the Counties Council. Mr. Duncan was appointed chairman and Mr. Waterman vice-chairman. Meetings are held at Coburg on the third Friday of each month, with the understanding that if there are not sufficient applications to warrant a meeting the secretary, Mr. Stinson, shall notify the members to that effect. Complete lists are being supplied each member of the Council. Clerks of the minor municipalities are to make out the Mothers' Allowance applications as well as those for old-age pensions, which should be sent directly to the secretary.

reason why all correspondence goes to him. "To say he is the mouthpiece of some particular packing concern is scarcely correct."

Mr. Stevens went on to declare that Canada Packers deliberately included second grade hogs in the bacon trade of Great Britain because there was some market there for it and, in his opinion, because it kept down the price of hogs in Canada.

Mr. Gardiner said that from investigations he made himself in England and from investigations of the committee which was over there last summer, an entirely different reason is given for the lower price of bacon in Great Britain. He did not elaborate on this statement.

Car Hits Sidney Lad Cuts Head Badly

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, June 16.—Running out from a school yard on the front of the Township of Sidney and directly into the path of an east bound automobile, nine-year-old Billie Saylor of Sidney Township sustained severe head lacerations and internal injuries at noon on Wednesday. The injured lad received medical attention and was taken to a nearby hospital.

George Hossang, Toronto, was the driver of the motor car proceeding easterly when it was said little Billie Saylor ran across the highway directly into the path of the car. The injuries are not believed to be critical. Sergeant Harry Thompson of the O.P.P. investigated and later stated no blame could be attached to the driver.

Seaplane Base Is Established By New Peterborough Company On The Shores Of Chemong Lake

A brand new industry, as modern as streamlining, is starting operations in this district. Today Roman Braun announced the formation of the Peterobrough Air Services, Limited, with R. M. Glover as its president.

This is the first time in the history of the city that Peterborough has been able to boast of a seaplane base. It is located on the shores of Lake Chemong, only a short distance from the Smith end of the floating bridge. Already a large workshop has been erected, gas pumps installed, a ram and embarking float built into the water. A modern Taylor Cub cabin lane is being installed with floats and the club will be ready to commence operations early next week. Already the wind sock, typical of all air fields, is flying from a mast high in the air.

The establishment of an air base fulfils a need long felt in this city, only one of its size in Ontario without air service. The shore of Lake Chemong offers ideal conditions for seaplane landing, in the location where the company has made its headquarters.

Roman Braun, secretary-treasurer of the newly formed company, said he has been attempting to establish an air base here for nearly a year. Last years he tried to secure fields in the neighborhood of the city, but each was rejected by the Department of Transport. Civil Aviation Branch, because it was not suitable, so stringent are the regulations governing licensing of such bases.

Last fall he decided upon a sea base at Chemong Lake and permission was received from the Department in the middle of March. The location chosen is the only one on the entire lake that the Department would pass. In other sections the lake was too narrow, or else trees were too high for landing purposes.

Officers Elected

Officers of the service, elected Wednesday evening are as follows: R. M. Glover, president; Floyd Graham Wemp, vice-president; Roman Braun, secretary-treasurer; Max Swanson and Stewart Finnie, officers. The company's charter has been granted.

Considerable interest has already been shown in the establishment of the company, which will train pilots and also fly commercially, Mr. Braun said. He has already enough prospects to warrant establishment of the air base, and hopes for a large number more. A second plane will be purchased in the near future, to be used for commercial puropses, he said. The Taylor Cub is fully insured against all liability, including crash liability, with Lloyds of London, and also carries passenger liability. An instructor for the flying school is available as soon as operations commence.

Roman Braun, who first organized the company, is a German by birth, has lived in Canada for eight years, has been a naturalized citizen for three years. He first took flying instruction in Germany, then later at Toronto. For the past eight years he has been employed by the Hon. Dr. Jamieson, M.P., of Durham.

Truck Driver Is Given 10 Days For Being Drunk

Damage estimated at $1000 was done to a huge truck belonging to the Ontario Freight Lines when the big machine plunged off the road and over turned in a ditch on Highway 28, five miles out of Peterborough on Wednesday night. As a result of the accident the driver, Gerald McHady of Toronto was sentenced this morning to 10 days in jail for drunken and reckless driving.

The machine, a truck of the tractor semi-trailer type some 30 feet long and weighing with its load in the neighborhood of 15 tons, shot off the highway on the left hand side of the road and rolled over on its side with the result that the equipment was badly damaged, the van being almost completely wrecked and the radiator ruined.

The truck in charge of McHady was carrying a load of scrap lead from the Bell Telephone Company, the cargo weighing five or six tons.

Constable John Rogers of the Peterborough police force who is at present on holidays happened to come along in a car Wednesday night soon after the accident and he had the driver taken into the police station here where he was placed under arrest. This morning McHady was arrainged before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell on charges of drunken and reckless driving and to both he at first pleaded not guilty and was remanded until Monday, bail being fixed at $500. Shortly afterward however the truck driver decided to change his plea in both charges and he was brought back into court for Magistrate Campbell to listen to him say "guilty" to drunken driving and reckless driving.

On each charge he was sentenced to 10 days in jail, the sentences to run concurrently. His license was also suspended for 30 days.

Ottawa Valley Seed Growers Visitors To City

Peterborough was invaded Wednesday by three large motor coaches packed with members of the Ottawa Valley Seed Growers' Association, who dropped off here, en route to the annual convention of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association at Guelph, and inspected the plant of the Quaker Oats Company.

The visitors comprised seed growers from twelve counties in the Ottawa valley, including two Quebec counties, and were in charge of J. W. MacKay, of Ottawa, district supervisor of production services for the Domihion Department of Agriculture, who told The Examiner that two of the buses had started out from Renfrew and the third from Ottawa, and that the trip had been a most enjoyable one, despite the fact that all three of the big buses had run into tire trouble before reaching Peterborough.

The visiting seed growers were entertained at luncheon in the Murray Street Baptist Church as guests of the Quaker Oats Company, and they were welcomed by Gordon Hancock, president of the Bay of Quinte Seed Growers' Association, and others.

Mr. MacKay said the visitors had very much appreciated the hospitality of the Quaker Oats management and their visit to the plant. The party left late in the afternoon, intending to go through to Guelph Wednesday night.

George Street Church Holds Picnic

Ideal June Weather greeted 900 people attending the annual picnic of George Street United Church held yesterday afternoon and last night at Nicholls Oval, and a complete and diversified sports program was run off smoothly and efficiently.

Foot races got underway early in the afternoon and finished at five o'clock when the crowd had supper under the trees bordering the south rim of the oval, and the Sunday School orchestra augmented by members from other bands in the city provided music following the evening meal. Primary grades were fed at long tables and the provisions which included all the delicacies that feature a picnic menu were so plentiful there was a large supply left over. Mrs. T. Mark, Mrs. W. P. Hetherington, Mrs. F. E. Latimer and Mrs. J. Tinney, directed the serving from a tent on the grounds, and were assisted by several other women and men who poured lemonade and tea.

Miss Eileem Wilde's class captured first prize in the scavenger hunt while the Rainbow group led by Mrs. C. Wasson placed second. In the bait casting a new event on the sports program, Morley Powell took the prize for accuracy and Stanley Thompson tossed the plug bait the farthest.

Softball Competition

Five ladies and eight men competed in the tennis tournament which could not be completed owing to darkness and those still in the running are Mary Burnham, Mrs. C. Wasson, Reg. Kingdon, Bill Griffiths, and Earle Wellman. Competition was keen in the softball tournament which was divided into six groups, the winners of each taking a silver cup given every year for annual competition. George Street Buzzers took the senior title with Mrs. Wasson's Rainbow Class winning the ladies senior section. Honors in the intermediate bracket went to Leo Copp's team and Miss Vera Squire's girls, while Jake Burnham's juniors cleaned up in the young boys section and Miss Helen Deahye's class took the title for the junior girls.

The entire picnic program revealed a smooth organization which included the serving of supper and credit is due the various chairmen who worked out the program details and then were assisted so capably by the adult members of the church. Rev. M. C. Parr and Mrs. Parr were hosts and extended a friendly welcome to all. All children in the primary grades were given whistles and balloons free by Homer Borland, superintendent of the Sunday School. A refreshment booth presided over by Lloyd Gilders and W. C. McBride did a thriving business.

Members of the Church who took a leading part in the direction of the program were, Frank Greatrix and Ralph Burns, races; Lloyd Parnall, softball; Edith Burnham, Ken Brenton and Loretto McDougall, tennis; Thos. Mark, horseshoes; Arnold Lillow, bait casting; Cecil Wasson, Volleyball; Mrs. L. W. Copp, group games; Bert Hamilton, scavenger hunt; Leo W. Copp, sports chairman; Miss Mary Elliott, Mrs. W. H. The Rambling REPORTERS

WANTS NO FAST TIME

The Examiner doesn't vouch for this story, but H. B. Cowan, Jr., an employee, does.

Bert claims he has found a watch that objects to daylight saving time, in fact refuses to run on it and skips back to standard time when not watched carefully.

A friend of his, a railroad man, is no supporter of daylight time, but grumblingly set his watch an hour ahead when summer time came into force in Peterborough at midnight Saturday. Next morning his wife, who had kept possession of the watch all night and who is a daylight time enthusiast, found that the hands of the clock had mysteriously moved back to standard time. So says Mr. Cowan.—P.

ONE HOUR TOO SOON

Alex Elliott, Peterborough's member of Legislative Assembly, had a long wait for dinner yesterday at noon, all because of daylight saving.

Slated to attend a meeting of the Central Ontario Ayrshire Breeders' Club at the farm of Clarence Mann, he looked at his invitation and found that dinner was served at twelve o'clock. He arrived at the farm ahead of nearly all the members, and cooled his heels for a solid hour.

"I have often heard that farmers don't like daylight saving," he told club members in his address. "This is once you have got one back at a city man. I've been here since eleven o'clock your time."—P.

Drunken Driver Given 7 Days

Seven days imprisonment was the sentence meted out by Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell in police court this morning to Erwin Twomey, 21, of Ennismore, who pleaded guilty to a charge of drunken driving on Aylmer street Wednesday night. In addition Twomey was ordered to pay the court costs amounting to $11.50.

On a second charge of theft of the use of a car belonging to J. J. Young, also of Ennismore, the youth also pleaded guilty and on that count, Magistrate Campbell imposed a fine of $2 and $11 costs.

The two charges arose out of the fact, as explained to the court by Crown Attorney McElderry, K. C. that Twomey, without the consent of Mr. Young, had taken the latter's car from where it had been left at Magee's garage on Hunter street and later he had driven into the back of another car on Aylmer street above Charlotte street. After breaking the bumper off the machine he was driving he again drove into the back of the other vehicle and he was placed under arrest by Inspector J. F. Reid. In the car there were a large number of empty bottles.

Twomey told the court that he had come into town Wednesday to have a tooth pulled, but the operation was postponed because the offending molar was ulcerated. He said that he had been in court once before on a drinking charge but never for an offense under the traffic act.

Just a Sturgeon

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 16 (CP).—Niagara's "sea-serpent" is nothing more than a huge sturgeon, according to passengers on a boat who saw the mystery monster the other day. The fish was first seen nearly a month ago.

Peak Is Higher

Operating reports from the electric department of the Peterborough Utilities Commission for May as presented by Manager Ross L. Dobbin showed that the peak for May was 8,900 horsepower, an increase of 1,035 horse power over the same month last year. In the domestic lighting department an increase of 11.9 per cent. was noted while commercial light also showed an increased of 6.8 per cent. On the other hand sale of commercial power dropped off by 7.3 per cent.

Water For Park Is Discussed

The problem of providing a water supply for Jackson Park was discussed at some length at a meeting on Wednesday afternoon of the Utilities Commission, attended by a deputation composed of Mayor Hamilton and Ald. Dutton representing the city council, Ivan Lillico and John I. Allen, for the Kiwanis Club and Dr. J. A. Middleton of the Nicholls' Park trust but no solution was reached at the conference.

Superintendent Ross L. Dobbin submitted figures giving the estimated cost of several schemes by which a water supply could be furnished to the park, ranging all the way from $9130 for laying a six inch main from Bonaccord street down to $1430 for laying a two inch main.

The meeting seemed to be unanimously of the opinion that the two-inch main plan should not be considered but beyond that nothing was decided upon.

Since the well in Jackson Park has been condemned as unsafe the question of water for the park has become a serious one and yesterday's conference was called in the hope of arriving at a solution of the problem.

Jolly Shower Held Bonarlaw Couple

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BONARLAW, June 16.— On Monday evening about one hundred and fifty friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Mumby gathered to spent the evening with their son Ralph Mumby and his recent bride, who was formerly Miss Helen Scott of Toronto.

A large table was heavily laden with beautiful gifts and at 10.30 the Rev. Mr. Harding called the company to order and after a few pleasant remarks a very appropriate address was read by Miss Marjorie McKewon. Mr. Mumby thanked all present for the very pleasant surprise.

Canon W. G. Swayne was then called on and in his jovial manner gave a very pleasant speech, after which all joined in singing for they are jolly good fellows.

Land Farmer's Best Investment Ayrshire Breeders Told At Field Day On The Mann Farm

Intelligent inspection and correction of pasture soil deficiency is the greatest need of farmers in this province, declared Dr. E. S. Archibald, director of Dominion Experimental Farms, yesterday. He was speaking at the annual field day of the Central Ontario Ayrshire Breeders' Club on the farm of Clarence Mann. A large crowd was present from all parts of Central Ontario.

Land is the farmer's best investment and his greatest source of wealth, the speaker said. He asked his listeners to have a love for their land such as farmers in the Old Country have. He doubted that such care is being taken of the soil in this country as is in England and Scotland.

Thirty years ago he came from Nova Scotia and saw for the first time rich pasture land, free from weeds, of first-rate quality. Today he finds degeneration in that pasture land and wonders whether it is receiving sufficient care, he said.

The use of commercial fertilizer on pasture land is of comparatively recent origin and the common use of a variety of fertilizers necessary for different deficiencies than the most common ones, is still rare, he declared. Trace elements are sometimes not available in the soil and the deficiency in them is causing crop and animal destruction, because farmers have not yet learned to make full use of all varieties of fertilizer that have been developed.

Describes Soil Survey.

He told of the soil survey the government is now engaged upon in Ontario and related some of the surprising changes that have been found to have taken place in the soil during the past two or three decades. "It doesn't tell you or me very much other than this—are we feeding the soil properly?" he said. Despite lack of technical knowledge of the surveyors' findings, the farmer in the future will profit immensely by the survey, he said. The younger farmers are going to have a great deal of knowledge of methods to follow to improve and insure their future crops, he said.

"Farming in the days of our grandsons is going to be an industry of building rather than of destroying soil fertility," the speaker warned. And in dairy farming the successful man is going to be the one who has good pasture land, he continued. "Good summer feeds mean cheap production," he said.

Thirteen out of twenty-two million acres of land in this country are in pasture land, yet it is only recently that the farmer has begun to feed that pasture intelligently, he claimed. He said there is definite need of drastic change in the care of pasture land in this province. "The greatest curse we have today is weeds," he said, and told his listeners they must take every means possible to rid their lands of them, even to the point of ploughing under their pasture lands and starting afresh when other steps fail.

Praises Ayrshire Cows.

The Experimental Farms at Ottawa used to have an outstanding Ayrshire herd, but it is not among the best in Canada today, the speaker said. He told that economies have been forced on the branch and have hindered the development of that part of their work. He hoped for a good herd in the future, saying that the government employees are attempting to build up such a herd again.

He praised the work of Ayrshire breeders in building up a pure-bred herd of dairy cattle. The club has taken a courageous stand, often to their own cost, in the elimination of disease among animals. He lauded the Ayrshire breed of cattle, citing it as one of the best "machines" for producing what the farmer had to sell. Few disappointments come with the purchase of Ayrshire cattle, he said.

Brilliant sunshine greeted the members of the club at their annual field day. More than a hundred were present, ate a dinner prepared by the women of Fairview United Church, and watched a judging competition by junior farmers following a lengthy program of speeches. R. B. Ness, of Portsmouth, Ontario, president of the club, was chairman. Speakers included A. L. Elliott, M.L.A.; Arthur Hume of Campbellford, honorary president; F. M. Rutherford, of Bonarlaw, secretary; Wallace Havelock Robb, of Abbey Dawn Farm, Kingston, a director; W. A. Hume, of Campbelford, vice-president; Frank Napier, of Toronto, prominent breeder of Ayrshires; J. Stewart Hyde, of Dundas, secretary of the Hamilton-Niagara Club; G. A. Gillespie, of Peterborough, manager of Silverwood's Dairies.

Poet-Farmer Speaks.

When he wanted to live the life of a poet and yet have financial security and "not end up in the gutter as so many of my fellow-poets have," he purchased a farm, recounted Wallace Havelock Robb, of Abbey Dawn Farm.

"I got some cattle on that farm, but soon found they were not the breed that were going to keep me from the gutter," he said. "So then I bought Ayrshires."

When he found fields that had formerly yielded good crops were becoming poor, he called in government men after consulting his neighbors. Today his yield per acre is high, and he has hopes it will become even higher, he said.

"If I, a poet, can take a worn-out farm and make it prosper, then there is some hope for life-long farmers," he pointed out. He praised the direction farmers are receiving from government bulletins, urged a careful reading of each of them.

Robert Ruddy, one of the largest Ayrshire breeders in the Toronto district, spoke briefly. "There is nothing more needed on my farm or on any of my neighbors' farms than recuperated pasture land," he said, praising Dr. Archibald's address.

Not Enough Milk Produced.

For the past two years there has been a shortage of milk reaching dairies, G. A. Gillespie, of Silverwood's Dairies, told the gathering. "If we had twice as much we could handle it." Feed during the past two winters has been disappointing in its milk returns, he said, attributing the cause to soil deficiencies. "The cost of production is in the hands of the farmers, even though the price he receives for his milk is not," he said.

William Hume, vice-president, moved a vote of thanks to the ladies of Fairview United Church, who provided the dinner, at tables spread under a large tent on the farm grounds.

Tweed, June 16.

RETAINING sufficient presence of mind to grasp the chain attached to the ring in the nose of an infuriated bull, as the animal stood over her prostrate body in a field near the barn, Mrs. Cleveland Blakely, Wellington farmer's wife, averted possible serious injury as she calmly wound the chain around a bush and made her escape over a nearby fence.

Knocked down from behind by the animal, Mrs. Blakely rolled on the ground as the animal endeavoured to gore her, then coolly reached up and grasped the chain as the animal pawed the ground at her side.

Outside of a few bruises Mrs. Blakely was unhurt after her experience.

Central Ontario Ayrshire Breeders Hold Field Day

Brilliant sunshine greeted the annual field day of the Central Ontario Ayrshire Breeders' club on Wednesday afternoon at the farm of Clarence Mann, a few miles north of Peterborough. More than a hundred were present. Some of those who took prominent parts are shown in (1). In front row, left to right, are: Alex Hume of Campbellford, honorary president; J. Stewart Hyde of Dundas, secretary of the Hamilton-Niagara club; Wallace Havelock Robb of Abbey Dawn Farm, Kingston, one of the speakers. Standing from left to right are: Robert Ruddy of Pickering, a speaker; R. B. Ness of Portsmouth, president; Dr. E. S. Archibald of Ottawa, director of Dominion Experimental Farms and chief speaker; Clarence Mann; W. A. Hume, of Campbellford, vice-president; F. M. Rutherford, of Bonarlaw, secretary.

Norwood Church Honors Members

(Examiner Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, June 16. — On Monday evening the members of the congregation of the Norwood United Church held a social evening in the Sunday School. The main feature of the evening was the presentation of an electric cleaner to the Rev. and Mrs. Cleland, who are leaving shortly for their new home in Athens. Mr. Keifer, in a few words, expressed the regret of the departure of the Rev. and Mrs. Cleland, on behalf of the congregation, while Mrs. Marks presented the token of appreciation. Rev. Mr. Cleland and Mrs. Cleland replied in a very appreciative manner and expressed their hope that any of the Norwood congregation would be welcome visitors at their new home. Refreshments were served by the ladies and a social hour spent.

Grandmother's Day.

The annual Grandmother's Day was observed by the local branch of the Women's Institute at their meeting held at the home of Miss meeting held at the home of Mrs. Rork Ferguson on Friday. There were six grandmothers present, and the meeting opened in the usual manner with the ode and prayer. Mrs. Alexander Innis, the president, was in the chair for the business part of the meeting. Reports were given by the various secretaries, showing that the society was progressing in its work. It was decided to join an overseas correspondence link following the reading of a letter from a member of an overseas society. The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. George Bitten, with a picnic lunch.

The leader, Mrs. Chamberlain, of the group in charge presided over the program, which opened with community singing. Mrs. R. S. Fennell gave a reading entitled "Beautifying Our Homes," an interesting paper was given by Mrs. J. Rothwell on "Our Flag.' Mrs. G. A. Hamblin and Mrs. Fennell were the winners of the contest presented by Mrs. Chamberlain. The ladies were favored with a solo by Mrs. Ferguson, "Reminiscences." Following the program afternoon tea was served, Mrs. Fennell being the holder of the lucky cup for which a prize was donated by Mrs. Innis.

Mrs. Ferguson was tendered a vote of thanks for the use of her home.

Bards Invoked To Gain Time For 'Pub' Owner

(By Pat Usher,
Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, June 16. — (CP) — Plenty of bottles have been uncorked since Shakespeare and his cronies foregathered in the Mermaid tavern in Southwark for a festive evening. That was a long time ago. Nobody has bothered to figure out when closing time came round in the Mermaid.

But closing time still is a matter of moment to the playwrights and poets of today when they foregather in the neighborhood "pub". It's a matter of moment, too, to mine host of the inn.

Periodically applications come before the magistrates for leave to extend licensed hours. A Cardiff pub owner decided to try a new approach. He relied partly on Shakespeare but considerably more on Alfred, Lord Tennyson. Here's how his request was phrased:

Half an over onward.
To be or NOT to be—that is the question.
First it was nay, then it was yea,
Which all the public wondered.
We could tell them why,
Ours not the reason to wonder why,
But no one will deny
We were all bewildered.

It worked. The magistrates granted an extension of half an hour from June to August inclusive. Down in World's End, near Fareham, Hants, they had a "pub problem" too. World's End has two pubs but they can't serve anything stronger than beer.

Mine host of the Chairmakers' Arm, Charles Webb, thought something ought to be done about it. He sought permission to sell spirits, But mine host of the Horse and Jockey, Sidney Clarke, opposed the application. He said World's Enders couldn't afford expensive drinks.

But Webb had a trump card. He produced as witness a farmer who told the court that a valuable cow of his nearly died for lack of stimulant (which a vet had told him the cow must have). The farmer said in all World's End he couldn't get more than "a couple of doubles" of spirits. The licence was granted.

India's Frontier On Northeast Calmed Down

CALCUTTA, June 16.— (CP) — The northwest frontier is usually thought of as India's most turbulent gateway but there are some bonny fighters on the northeast as well.

Between India's fertile plains and the Chinese frontier lies a tangle of hills skirted by India's famous river the Brahmaputra and containing the headwaters of three great Burmese rivers, the Chindwin, Irrawaddy and the Salween, and several important Chinese streams. In these hills live primitive and vigorous tribes. Among them, in India's eastern province, Assam, are the Naga tribe, noted head hunters in former days and perpetual raiders of their peaceful neighbors on the plains.

Before bringing them under control the British authorities had heavy fighting with them in the last century. In the unadministered territories on the Assam-Burma border the Nagas still delight in capturing their neighbors for slaves, and a year ago the deputy commissioner of the Naga Hills with a military escort marched up to stop their misdeeds.

Three officers of the Assam Rifles have now been awarded the King's Police Medal for gallantry during these operations. The official report describes how during the column's withdrawal the commandant's small force was heavily attacked in thick country and was in danger of being overwhelmed but coolness and tact extricated it.

Special tribute is paid to Subadar Bhotu Gurung, who was covering the withdrawal. "By his skilful leadership he occupied the only possible position in a very short time; and the covering fire of his party, opened at a critical moment, undoubtedly saved the rearguard from being charged down upon by an enemy whom they could not see and whose obvious intention was to overwhelm the column through sheer weight of numbers."

Britain's "Flying Battleships" Ready For Tests

The Sunderland, flagship of Britain's new fleet of "flying battleships", giant flying-boats capable of 3,000-mile ocean flights carrying bombs and guns, pictured lying on the Medway, near Rochester, as final preparations for her trial flights were made. Note the gun turret in the tail. The Sunderland is the first miltary flying-boat in the world to be fitted with revolving gun turrets like those of a battleship. The giant airplane will make a demonstration flight to Singapore this month, with a crew of six men.

Vancouver Constable Doing Work Planned To Do As a Clergyman

VANCOUVER, June 16 (C P) —Constable Ronald Eveleigh accomplished as a policeman the job he planned 10 years before when training for the ministry at the University of British Columbia.

"I was always interested in boys, and wanted to help them," said the supervisor of the year-old Junior G-Men a boys' club with 2,000 members in British Columbia and branches in other parts of Canada.

"That was what I had in mind when I started at the U.B.C., but after three years of depression put an end to those plans and I got a police job."

One April day in 1937 when off duty he saw fellow-officers halt a game of street baseball which led to a shattered window.

As the 17 young players passed by him grumbling, Eveleigh stopped them and suggested forming a club and finding a place for them to play.

The first problem was choice of a name, settled when Eveleigh asked about their favorite characters in fiction and movies.

"G-men!" was the answer, and so they were called the Junior G-Men. The name attracted youngsters quickly and membership soared to 100 within a month.

Adult instructors volunteered aid. A service club helped Eveleigh obtain an abandoned factory. The boys made it a club house, the first of five in Vancouver where lads between the ages of eight and 18 can practice any one of 30 hobbies.

Before many weeks the group became a city-wide movement. Eveleigh was given leave of absence from the city police to aid organization.

The clubs, however, are run by the boys themselves, each centre being directed by a council which brings requests and problems to Eveleigh.

Recently the club was incorporated under the Dominion Companies Act as the Junior G-Men of Canada to prevent its commercial exploitation.

Small monthly dues are charged, but a boy never is refused because of inability to pay. Instead, he is allotted some task around the clubhouse to make him feel he's doing his share.

"It's really those sort of boys we're after," said Eveleigh. "Fellows who have no place to play but on the streets, who can't afford toys and games."

By giving them a place to play, he feels he's putting into action the club motto: "It is better to build boys than to mend men."

Mrs. D. Brisbin Entertains Roseneath W.M.S.

ROSENEATH, June 16. — Mrs. D. Brisbin was hostess to the W.M.S. members and several visitors at her summer home, Minnetonka Park, Rice Lake, on Tuesday afternoon. The view of the lake, the tree-lined shore, summer breezes, and a perfect June day combined to make a delightful setting for the meeting. Mrs. L. M. Scott, president, presided. Important features of the meeting were the presentation of reports of the sectional meeting by Mrs. R. Crego and Mrs. D. Brisbin, and a world peace program. The program was conducted by the president, assisted by Mrs. A. J. Campbell, who contributed a fine paper entitled "World Peace." Articles were read by Mesdames L. Turner, L. Tucker, M. Davey, R. Crego, and A. Halstead. Mrs. W. Smith, community friendship secretary, gave an outline of the work of her department for the first quarter of the year. Mrs. C. W. Varcoe, corresponding secretary, reported Mrs. Hinton's acceptance of the invitation to address the July meeting. Mrs. Hinton's subject will be temperance.

It was decided on motion to extend an invitation to the Mission Circle to attend the July meeting. Mrs. R. Crego and Mrs. C. W. Varcoe were named a program committee. The meeting will be held in Mrs. Andrew Brown's home and Miss C. Payne will be assistant hostess. Following a discussion regarding raising funds, a committee was named to meet with a W.A. committee to arrange details. The ladies on the committee are Mrs. L. M. Scott, Mrs. A. Halstead, and Mrs. R. Crego.

Following the closing exercises, the hostess served refreshments, and later the guests enjoyed a walk down to the shore.

Law Is Attacked

LONDON, June 16.—(CP Cable)—Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express today attacked the law which enabled the late Duke of Devonshire to convert his estates into a company, saving his heirs more than £1,000,000 ($5,000,000) in death duties.

Twelve years ago the Duke formed the Chatsworth Estate Company, embracing estates worth more than £2,000,000. Under the law the estates ordinarily would have paid £1,000,000 in death duties. Actually they are paying about £27,000.

Saves His Life

Pictured here is the actual "hanging" of Herbert Campbell, performed in a Chicago hospital with the object of saving Campbell's life. His neck broken in an automobile accident, Campbell was placed in this strange position, while doctors enveloped him in a plaster cast from chin to hips. Dr. George W. Terry is shown behind Campbell as he put on the cast while the patient hung suspended by his head, toes barely touching the ground.

Old Ontario's Ideal Chamber Has Ambitions

She's a girl eager to accomplish something, and probably she has left her home in Perth, St. Mary's or Huntsville for a position as a nurse or schoolteacher in a larger centre, Toronto, London or Ottawa.

Years of living and art study in Paris and New York have not had the effect you would expect on Mr. Russell's viewpoint with respect to womanly charm. His opinions on the subject are not the sort you would look for from a painter whose nudes have evoked loud yells of shocked modesty from Torontonians at more than one public exhibition.

Miss Ontario, said Mr. Russell, has humanitarian feelings. She wants to serve, to be allied with some good cause.

Mr. Russell declined to be too specific about physical details, but felt that blue eyes and brown hair would be likely attributes.

"There's something wholesome and refreshing about here," the artist said. "Her face isn't all painted up and her eyebrows aren't just a thin line. She's natural and has a nice complexion.

"She likes parties. She does everything other girls do, but she's more serious-minded. She's neatly dressed when you see her on the street or at a party, but not as flashilly or as stylishly-dressed as a society girl.

"She reads books and likes pictures, but probably hasn't a technical or highly-critical understanding of them. At the same time, she doesn't try to give the impression that she is an authority. She likes beautiful things, and she's not the kind of girl who would belong to a lot of women's clubs."

Mr. Russell said nine-tenths of all city girls are badly brought up. That's why this ideal miss is from a village, a town or a small city, which is where most of the province's nurses and school teachers come from.

Oil Pipe Lines Serve Need Of Mining Area

Oil by pipe-line to serve the needs of the growing mining camps at Cameron Bay and other far northern outposts is the ambitious dream which now is coming true. Cutting short the long haul over turbulent streams and rough portages, oil will be piped direct from the wells below Fort Norman to the Diesel engines pounding out their songs in the northern camps when the tank barge arrives on Great Bear lake this summer. Already the pumps are in operation and the picture at UPPER LEFT shows the first barge load being pumped across the portage which separates the Mackenzie from Great Bear lake. At RIGHT workers are shown laying the line, now in its final stages of completion. The busy Cameron's Bay settlement is pictured BELOW.

Project Of Tank Barge Companies Solving Transport Of Fuel In the Great Bear Lake Territory

By FRANK F. MOYLE
Copyright by Central Press Canadian

FORT SMITH, N.W.T., June 16.—Arrival this year on Great Bear Lake of the tank barge serving the mines at Cameron Bay, will forge the last link in a chain of barges and pipe lines which will make the transportation of fuel oil in barrels a thing of the past in the Canadian Northwest. Last summer saw completion of all but the one important link, so that to-day fuel oil can be pumped into tanks and start out for the busy diesels in mines and boats as far removed as Out Post Island, Yellow Knife Bay, the Eldorado and Aklavic on the Arctic coast.

From the oil wells 55 miles below Fort Norman, radiates a waterways system that reaches the scene of every major activity in the territories to-day. Northward the McKenzie flows for another 500 miles past Good Hope, Artic Red River and Aklavic before emptying into the Arctic Ocean. Southwards river steamers and tugs can pick up a barge and take it up the McKenzie within reach of any of the mines at Out Post Island, or the Yellow Knife.

Rapids to East

Only to the eastward and the Eldorado where necessity was the greatest did nature see fit to put a barrier in the way of the country's development. The Great Bear River, from its swiftness and the shallowness of its channel has made it necessary to employ nothing but the shallowest draft in boats and barges, but it is the barrier of the rapids that has been from the first the greatest obstacle in the development of the Great Bear field.

Prior to 1936 all freight bound for Cameron Bay and the Eldorado went through the rapids by the tedious and expensive method of freighting with rapids boats. Every barrel of fuel had to be handled once at the wells, once at Fort Norman, twice at the rapids, once again at Franklin before it was then unloaded at its destination. Barrels soon showed the wear and tear of rolling over rocks, of being dropped and hoisted and bumped; barrels and labor are expensive in this country and it required a lot of both.

Works in Hours Now

Significant of the changes taking place monthly in the north is the difference in the handling of the fuel oil now. To-day a tank barge is filled, a tug picks it up and delivers it to the mouth of the Bear. Here the stern wheeler Silver Queen picks up the barge and 12 hours later slips into her dock at the Bear River rapids camp. No sooner is a line ashore than the man in charge of the pumping steps on to the barge, grounds the tank, connects the suction hose and starts the engine that pumps the fuel up the hill to the first tank. Before the Queen has returned to Norman (and it takes but three hours going down), the oil is across the rapids and waiting for another tug to take it on Franklin at the head of the river. One or two men do easily what 20 used to labor at.

All this came in a short month or two. Storage tanks came in a multitude of sections to a variety of places; thousands of lengths of pipe, engines, tanks, tank barges and even new boat crews landed where there was nothing to show that the foot of man had trod before; overnight tents sprung up, next day the round earthern foundation, and in a week the walls of the storage tank rose section on section and nothing, the lack of tools or equipment or the over-supply of flies and mosquitoes, halted the work. The men from Turner Valley built nine miles of pipe line through the northern muskeg in the worst of the fly season, and they had it almost finished when the special tools they were to work with arrived.

Blocked by Freeze-up

As fast machinery arrived they set it up, tested it and it ran. They may have been new men to the country, but no one ever heard them referred to as cheechakos, and when it came to doing the work and getting it done right they set a new high in northern development.

In all the vast program last summer, they failed in only one item, the delivery to Bear Lake of the barge designed for service to the mines at Cameron Bay. One hundred and thirty feet long, and 30 feet wide, it was by far the largest and most cumbersome barge that was ever worked through the narrow, swift, boulder-strewn channel of the rapids. For weeks men worked in the icy water, laying cable, and working their way inch by inch through one difficulty after another. The equipment, new as it was, was not enough for the tasck and finally, with freeze-up only a week or so away and within a few hundred yards of their objective, the unforeseen happened. A rolling boulder crushed through the hull beneath the tanks, and there was nothing to do but pull it up where the hole could be mended and then launch it again, and go on, an impossible task in the time left.

The barge didn't get through. It will get there this year, and with its arrival the last link in the pipe line-tank barge chain between the oil wells and the ever-hungry diesels at Cameron Bay will be completed.

New Defence Plan For Australia To Cost Millions

CANBERRA, Australia, June 16.—(CP-Reuters) — Australians may have to foot a bill amounting to between £12,000,000 ($48,000,000) and £14,000,000 ($56,000,000) when the defence estimates are put forward in the budget for the next financial year beginning July 1.

The defence council already has endorsed a three-year expansion program providing for expanding the capacity of the munitions factories, and advancing steps necessary for conversion of industry to war purposes.

More money is needed to carry defence plans forward and in any case it is almost certain this year's record defence expenditure of £11, 500,000 ($46,000,000) will be substantially increased when the budget comes up for approval.

Though no official statement has yet been made it is understood that all three services—navy, army and air force—are affected by the new defence plans.

It is believed the main points of the defence plan include: an additional ship for the Australian naval squadron; an increase in the number of air force machines and in the strength of the personnel. It is thought a move will be made to purchase a British cruiser rather than wait for the building of a new cruiser.

No change in the present voluntary system of enlistment is expected to be made regarding the militia. Organization, however, will be tightened and plans made for Australian grain races which today ment.

Naval experts here, however, are divided as to wether a cruiser of heavy armament or a powerful "pocket battleship" should be ordered. Discussions with the British Admiralty will be held before a final decision is made regarding naval-expansion plans. These talks will take place when the Australian trade delegation reaches London.

In increasing the strength of the Royal Australian Air Force, the government will make provision for the supply of machines from which the Commonwealth.

In the realm of communications Australia is to have three radio stations.

Work is proceeding with the erection of a high-powered short-wave radio station at Canberra as a part of the network of Empire radio communication. This station is expected to be ready for operation by the end of this year and will be used by the Australian navy for direct communication with the British Admiralty and with British ships. It will also be in constant touch with Singapore, New Zealand and the China and South Africa stations. Fifty officers and men of the Australian navy will be permanently stationed at the new Canberra radio station.

One of the other two wireless stations will be erected for the Royal Australian Air Force and the other for the civil aviation department.

Expect Deficit Under 15 Million

OTTAWA, June 16 (CP).—Finance Minister Dunning's long-awaited budget will be brought down in the House of Commons this afternoon. What it will contain remains a closely guarded secret until the Minister rises in the House.

He is expected to start his speech soon after 3 p.m., E.D.T., but he might be delayed by members bringing other business before the House.

While Ottawa waited for the budget the question in every mind was whether the Minister would announce a new trade agreement with the United States. The general opinion is negotiations going on at Washington for weeks have not reached the point where any treaty provisions could be given effect in today's budget.

Belief is that Mr. Dunning will be able to show Canada's financial position has improved in the fiscal year ended March 31 last. He budgetted last year for a deficit of $35,000,000, but is reported this will be reduced to well under $15,000,000.

Lindsay Girls High Hatting Poll Tax Idea

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, June 16.—Lindsay girls are haughtily ignoring the suggestion that they swell the town's coffers by the payment of poll tax. So completely are they ignoring the Town Council's endorsement of the suggestion that they refused to talk with an Examiner reporter and would not be quoted in anything. One young lady remarked that the suggestion that they pay poll tax is so ridiculous that it's funny.

A search for a day and one-half for Johnny Ward, elderly inmate of the County Home for the Aged, who wandered away from the Home on Tuesday morning, was concluded at noon on Wednesday when the man was found near Omemee. Fears for his safety were held by officials, who recalled the fate which befell former inmates who wandered away. Two of them were found in the Scugog River. Ward was just visiting old friends in the Omemee district, he is alleged to have told officials who found him.

Farmers in the Lindsay district are looking forward to the harvest season because indications at present point to the best crops in years. In all directions around Lindsay, farmers are pleased with the condition of their crops at this time and say that, with sufficient rain in ensuing weeks, they will harvest a bumper season.

Agnes Macphail Happy Over Prison Report

OTTAWA, June 16 (CP) — Miss Agnes Macphail, first woman member of Canada's parliament, exulted Wednesday that a royal commission had recognized the need for "complete reform of Canada's penal system."

Miss Macphail said the battle she started years ago was ending in victory.

"It took years to do it," she said. "I won't forget the things that were said about me when I started the battle to reform our completely punitive and unreformative prison system. All parties are for reform now but I got no help when years ago I said some of the things this report sasy now."

Miss Macphail held an abstract of the royal commissions report on Canadas penal system in her hand and declared it was "magnificent."

"This is one royal commission that has wrapped honor around itself," she said. "The report is amazing in its comprehensiveness and I am eager to study it."

The report had few surprises for her, said Miss Macphail. For years she has heard prisoners' stories and she reached the conclusions the commission reached.

Knew Stores True

"Prisoners who didn't even know each other, told me the same things," she said. "I knew they were true. Canada's prisons turned out men with the prison stamp on them. I knew when one rapped at my office door. Even that rap was a thing born in prison."

Miss Macphail commended particularly the recommendation for a three-man commission to administer Canada's penal system. She was surprised that the report urged that this commission should also deal with remission of sentences and paroles.

"But the commission certainly studied the matter thoroughly and they must know what they are doing," she said.

Haste should be made slowly in the reform of the penal system she said. A start should be made on the most careful selection possible of the three-member commission, at least two of whom should be expert penologists.

Adelard Godbout, ABOVE, retained his leadership of the Quebec Liberals at a stormy convention of the party, during which Eduoard Lacroix chief opponent of Godbout for the leadership, stalked from the convention with the suggestion that it had been "fixed" for Godbout.

FICTION AND FEATURES

FIESTA

BY OREN ARNOLD

RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Bill Baron, a footloose Texan, has just been rescued from band of Yaqui Indians, holding him for ransom, through a bold move on the part of Ellen Dale, Hollywood screen star. Ellen and Bill had been staying at the wealthy Montoya ranch across the Mexican border where they found themselves after a lucky parachute jump from Barons plane during a storm. Ellen, enchanted by the atmosphere of old Mexico, finds herself growing much interested in Bill. Also rescued with Bill was Panola Montoya, the ranch owner's daughter whose invitation to ride with her led to their capture by the Yaqui. As they return to the ranch, Bill and Ellen find Don Julio, their host, and his son, Felix, with a large following of Mexicans, in hot pursuit of the Yaqui. Ellen begs them to desist. Bill drives Ellen to Nogales after they say goodby to the Montoyas, both promising to return later for a fiesta.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 15

Ellen and Bill parted when they had crossed the international line and were in Nogales, Ariz. They had some difficulty explaining their situation to the United States border patrol, but the immigration officers soon recognized Ellen Dale of the movies, and when Bill had made private talk with the patrol inspector, he was cleared.

"I'll find out about train and plane schedules," Bill told Ellen, "and call you at the hotel. I have some telephoning to do, myself."

"I shouldn't wonder, Bill. We've been gone forever. Your people will be sick from worry."

"And won't yours?" He smiled down at her.

"No. I have no—people. Some distant relatives, but—"

Instantly he was contrite. "I'm sorry, Ellen! I knew about that. But I mean, won't your friends be worrying? The people in California?"

"I shall telephone them at once."

She put in a call for Sid Bromberg in Hollywool from her hotel room, but could only get the producer's private secretary. Sid was out of his office for an hour.

Ellen dismissed her maid—the hotel had sent her an efficient servant dressed in Mexican costume—and lay back on her bed to relax. It was luxury to rest in the United States again, to feel at ease and think back on the past week's excitement.

The adventures scarcely seemed real now. How unpredictable the future is, she thought! A week ago, all of her life seemed cut out for her. She would fly to Hollywood, make pictures for as long as her popularity lasted, then retire somewhere. She was a city girl, grooved in city business and social routine. And then to be dumped out of an airplane by a thunderstorm—into an adventure stranger than any she had portrayed on the screen! And most exciting of all was the fact that the past week had done something inside her. All of the handsome polished men of the moving picture capital had not stirred her, but one big drawling Texan, whom she didn't really know a thing about, had completely upset her reasoning.

"He said he did not love me, he said it coming down that awful trail!" Ellen whispered to herself on the bed, staring at the ceiling.

She knew he was joking with her. Or was he?

When things of the heart are affected, one' discernment is never very dependable. Emotions get in the way of logic, and the slightest things can have profound import.

Panola Montoya had kissed him, too. Panola was—wel, pretty, even if she was also a trifle too obvious, too sexy or something, Ellen knew. Men are blind sometimes. Panola's mouth, Panolas dark eyes and black hair, Panola's—phooey, Panola was nothing but a flirt!

Ellen succeeded in making herself quite miserable during that half hour, and the reverie was interrupted by a telephone call, long distance. It was from Sid Bromberg.

"Hello, baby!" he shouted it. "Where on earth have you been? We expected you a week ago."

"I was delayed. But I'm safe now, in Nogales."

"Safe? Have you been in danger? Tell me!"

Ellen realized they hadn't know a thing about her exploit. But somehow she didn't want to tell Sid about it.

"I mean I am feeling fine. I have been resting. I was on a ranch in Mexico."

"Great goodness, baby, don't run off like that! Papa's coming after you right now. I'll order the plane. I'll leave for Nogales at 6 p.m."

"Never mind, I can get home."

"Not without me, baby! I'm coming. I'm going to marry you, then bring you home. I been telling you all along. I'm coming."

Bromberg was a good picture man. He could whip a cast into doing the impoible. But he was too fat and self-assured to command much of her admiration otherwise. Evidently he thought himself in love with Ellen. He often said he was, sometimes embarrassed her by telling it to the world.

Ellen wished she had parents, a family, anyone close now. But Hollywood was her home, her life, all that she knew except the New York 10-cent store where she had worked so long. Sid Bromberg seemed to personify Hollywood and her life there; money, and front, and the heigh-ho-de-ho swingtime existence which she had once thought so grand. She supposed she belonged in it, was an integral part. She sighed, though, at the very thought of it now.

She had four more long distance calls in 15 minutes, and within an hour two telegrams came. She refused the calls, accepted the telegrams. One was not from Sid; it was from a competitive producer wanting to hire her if she was free. The radio speaker in her hotel room presently announced, through a national chain hook-up, that "the lovely Ellen Dale, start of 'Swingtime Sweetheart' and other currently popular cinema releases, has just returned to the U.S.A. after a brief vacation on a haciedna in old Mexico, where she was the reigning senorita at several elaborate social functions staged in her honor, and where it is rumored she became engaged to a young ranchero who is intimate with the president of Mexico himself."

Ellen groaned a trifle; Sid's publicity staff had been working fast. She clicked off the radio, went into her bathroom and steamed for 10 minutes under a shower. There she had a sudden shocking realization; this was the first bath she had had since leaving San Antonio. But then, she had hardly been living normally.

She did a lot of thinking while she dressed. She had had to order fresh clothing from a Nogales store, and some of it did not fit her any too well. But when she was done, she was satisfied. Ellen had never been too clothes-conscious; girls who are genuinely pretty, who have inherent beauty of face and form, seldom are.

She gave a lot of thought to Hollywood during that half-hour. To Bromberg, and the studio, and the apartment where she lived, and the dream home she had envisioned.

Her deam home. She had discussed building one in Arizona, with Bill; and had been interrupted by a strange adventure. California had people, and gaiety, and riches, and rushing madness day in and day out if you were caught in its social maelstrom. The ranch people were isolated from many conveniences and from towns, but they had the incomparable lift of scenic grandeur—the outdoors of which poets sing. "No other living is like this," Bill had said to her. Nevertheless, she was an urban girl, Manhattan reared and projected to fame via Hollywood. She was very confused, and still trying to think her way clear when a knock came at her door.

The hotel boy extended a small package, and hastened away; someone else had tipped him, obviously.

"That Sid,' Ellen muttered, opening the parcel with scant interest. It would be expensive perfume, or a flashy, costly gold ring.

It was jewellery; but it wasn't flashy and it wasn't costly, and it wasn't from Sid Bromberg.

"O-o-o-oh," breathed Ellen, admiringly. She lifted a silver bracelet, hand hammered, with many Indian designs; a three-pronged bracelet edged in silver raindrop balls, topped with three of the most perfectly matched spider-web turquoise settings she had ever seen, an exquisite bit of Navajo Indian craftsmanship.

"Could you wear it to dinner with me?" said a note with it.

Ellen Dale's heart leaped. She had never seen that handwriting before, and it was not signed, but she knew whose it was. She clasped the bracelet to her breast for a second like an ecstatic girl, then ran to her telephone. When the long distance connection was through, she did practically al lthe talking.

"Sid? Don't bother to come for me. No, I tell you, do not come, I won't wait for you, I won't be here. I won't marry you, Sid. I never said I would. I am going to marry somebody else."

She clicked her receiver and turned away humming.

Give Doctors Free Hand

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16 (A.P.).—A high official of the American Medical Association said yesterday that organization had decided to keep its hands off the birth control question except for its purely medical and scientific phases.

"We believe," he said, "that we should not tell a physician whether he should or should not prescribe contraceptives."

DOROTHY DIX

DEAR MISS DIX—I have been married eighteen years and have a darling child. My husband has always been good and kind to me and my family. We have a beautiful home luxuriously furnished. He gives me anything I want and is still deeply in love with me. But here is the trouble: A young man much younger than myself has come along whose company I enjoy immensely, and I find myself planning things that I know will bring us together. My husband resents this. He does not quarrel, but every time I am with the other man he watches every move and I can see that it is like a dagger thrust into his heart, and it is getting on my nerves to see him pout around all the time. He is not at all like his old self and talks very little. Is this because of his jealousy? Or could his love be growing cool? I am entirely dependent upon my husband. Should I stop seeing the other man, or let my husband suffer needlessly and try to cure him of his jealousy?

TROUBLED.

Answer:

Well, lady you can't have your cake and eat it, too. You can't philander with your boy friend and expect your husband to sit around and like it. You wouldn't enjoy the situation if it was reversed and he was having an affair with a pretty young girl about half your age and heft. You'd do some pouting yourself then.

There is no such thing as an innocent and harmless flirtation between a married man or a married woman and a young woman and a young girl or boy. Every one of them is loaded with TNT and, if they don't explode and blow everybody concerned to Kingdom Come, it is just pure luck.

Because the mere fact that when a husband or wife gets a wandering foot and goes forth seeking adventure it shows that he or she has lost his or her taste for his or her mate and is no longer satisfied and happy at home. It is only after a man is fed up with domesticity that he begins to listen to the songs of the gold-diggers. It is only after a woman begins to wonder if some gigolo isn't her soulmate instead of her prosaic middle-aged husband that she begins to wander into forbidden paths, and no matter how much she protests she means no harm—harm and wrecked homes do come of it.

As for you, foolish lady, you need to be incarcerated in a padded cell until you come to your senses, for you are risking a good husband, a good home and luxurious living for a fling with a boy who probably wouldn't marry you if you were free to marry him and who couldn't support you if he did.

What you need to do is not try to cure your husband of jealousy, but to cut out your philandering. And, if you don't, you will be might sorry for it.

* * * * * *

DEAR MISS DIX—I am a married man with a family, but my wife is a cold woman and I am love-starved. Do you thing it would be wrong for me to go about with a single girl of whom I am very fond

H. R. B.

Answer:

You know it would. You know that when a married man begins having an affair with a girl that it starts a fire that nearly always ends in a conflagration that burns up not only his home but their repuations.

I grant you that it is a terrible thing for a warm-hearted man who craves tenderness to be married to a woman who is a human frigidaire. And I can understand his temptation, when he meets a girl who could give him the bread of life for which he is starving, to snatch at it whether he has any right to take it or not. But there are times when something stronger than his own desires must motivate a man and when he must stand up and prove the manhood that is in him by doing what is right, no matter what it costs him.

Perhaps a man does not owe very much consideration to the woman who has failed him as a wife, but his debt to the children whom he brought into the world and to whom he owes a father's influence and guiding and a stable home is one that must be paid in full. And the poorer the mother they have, the less competent she is to rear them, the more they need their father. What divorce of their parents does to children is a matter of common knowledge. No man has a right to evade his responsibility and turn over his helpless little children to a weak or silly or selfish mother to make them what she will.

And then the girl. The most cruel and selfish thing that any man ever does it to woo and win the heart of a girl when he knows he can never marry her. Yet many married men do this just for the thrill of a little adventure, or to prove to themselves that they are still devils among the women, or because they are dissatisfied with their wivs.

Apparently they never give a thought to the fact that they are ruining the girl's life; that they are trailing her name through the dust; that they are filling her heart so full of love for them that she will never have any to give any other man, and that they are dooming her to a life of weary waiting for what she can never have. Have a heart, Mr. Man. Don't do it.

* * * * * *

DEAR MISS DIX—Is a married daughter obliged to help her mother when she knows that her mother is in need of her assistance? I am an only son and support my mother, yet I have a sister who could do her share to aid Mother if she only would. But she thinks that because she is married her obligations to her mother are ended. I only make a small salary and our financial circumstances are desperate, and it would ease the situation so much if my mother's well-off daughter would only make her a little allowance.

A SON.

I think one of the most despicable traits in human nature is the selfishness and the niggardliness that makes so many members of families evade their own responsibility and put the burden of supporting an old mother or father on some one brother or sister.

How this one gets elected the family goat, no one knows, but we have all seen it happen a thousand times. Mary can't take Mother to live with her because she lives in a fine apartment that hasn't a guest room. Tom can't take her because his wife and mother can't get along together. Sally can't have her because she is taking the children to Europe. And so Mother is sent to live with Sadie, who is the poorest of them all and has the most crowded house and the most children. Or Bob, who gets the most picayunish salary, has to support the old people because all the other children are spending their money on their own pleasures and indulgences.

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE SINGLETON BABY

WHEN THE bidding has given no clear clue to the side suits in the declarer's and dummy's hands, a singleton is a pretty risky lead. Isn't that suit more likely to be declarer's side length than any other suit in which you hold more cards? Of course, if you have the ace and another trump, or the king and a couple of others, you may later be able to stop the trump run and then throw your partner in the lead for a ruff. But otherwise, you may be taking an unsound chance with your singleton.

(Dealer: West. East-West vulnerable.)

The opening bid on this deal was made by West. His 1-Spade bid was overcalled by North with a double. East put in a 2-Spade call which West took to 4-Spades. North ventured 5-Diamonds, which East doubled.

East was in the lead and made the mistake of opening his singleton club. Declarer covered with the 10, West with the K and North won with the A. To North's surprise, the outstanding trumps dropped in two rounds. He had surely expected from the double that East held a trump trick.

The diamond 3 was then led to dummy's 6 and followed by the club 5. When West did not cover, North played the 8 and then laid down the club Q, which dropped West's J. The club 4 to the 7 was the next play, and on the club 6 the heart 8 was discarded. Instead of being set, East's defense allowed North to make one overtrick, doubled.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

Down the garden path scampered the whole mouse family. The moon had gone behind a cloud at that moment so that not even the cat saw them. They were moving out of their city house, you see, to stay with their cousins in the country. They were carrying bundles and packages and valises and suitcases. And Knarf and Hanid, the shadow children with the turned-about names, were helping them.

"My goodness!" Papa Mouse said as they reached the hedge at the edge of the garden. He had just glanced at his watch. "We'll miss our train."

"Are you catching a train?" Hanid exclaimed. She didn't think that mice rode on trains.

"Of course we're catching a train," Mother Mouse replied. "You don't think we'd walk all the way to the country, do you? Come children, move your legs a little faster. Don't stop to look at every pebble along the way. The train won't wait for us, you know. Do hurry, please."

"Are you catching a train?" Hanid exclaimed

Got Tickets, Too

Finally they reached the road. There was no one on it at that hour of the night, so they all ran down the middle of it as fast as they could. "We've got our tickets and everything," Papa Mouse said to Knarf and Hanid. "Don't you want to come along with us, too? We can always buy more tickets from the conductor. Ah—we'll soon be at the station. It's just at the turn of the road."

"But there's no station at the turn of the road," Knarf said. "The railroad tracks just pass there."

Papa Mouse smiled. "You'll see."

Finally they came to the turn in the road.

"There," said Knarf, stopping, "I told you there wasn't any station. There's nothing but railroad tracks."

"You can't see it yet," said Mother Mouse. "Its quite a large, handsome station. It's right down this way."

"You'll see it in a minute. Come along, all of you. I can hear the train coming now."

With that they ran toward the tracks. And then, all of a sudden, they saw the station. It was standing close to the tracks. It was really just an empty rain barrel lying on its side with three or four of the staves missing, so that it looked like a barn with the front side open and high, round roof over it.

"Just look!" Hanid cried as she looked inside. "There are a great crowd of others waiting here! Are they all going to the country, too?"

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, June 17.

A particularly active and enterprising day is presaged from the predominant lunar and solar aspects of important planets. Sudden and surprising events may transpire, with probable uprooting and change of environs, business interests and associates. Some subtlety and connivance are involved, with private agreements offering advantages.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a singularly lively, active and enterprising year, with much stirring of a surprising and unexpected nature. This may call for radical change in business plans, also environment and associates.

A child born on this day may be active, versatile, talented in unusual original directions, but may be erratic, changeable and restless. It may, however, have a kindly, sympathetic and friendly disposition, seeking to benefit its fellows by altruistic urges and ideas.

New Constitution For Eire Does Not Permit Divorce

By Dr. Alexander Cairns
An American Commentator on Ireland.

Dublin.—There will be no Reno in Eire.

Divorce will be in the class with snakes and there are no snakes in Ireland.

Article 41 of the new constitution is devoted entirely to the family. It "recognizes the family as the natural primary and fundamental unit group of society." And that is good orthodox sociology. No longer does that fictitious character, John Doe, alias the Average Man, stand as the social foundation on which all society rests and from which it springs. As the family stands or falls society stands or falls. Thus teach the colleges today. There is no average man. Personalities and temperaments have no average. Each man is as distinct and individual as Orion in the heavens.

Writer's View

Logically therefore, under the new Irish constitution, "the state guarantees to protect the family in its constitution and authority." To be more specific the constitution goes on to say "the state recognizes that by her life within the home, woman gives to the state a support without which the common good cannot be achieved. The state shall therefore endeavor to ensure that mothers shall not be obliged by economic necessity to engage in labor to the neglect of their duties in the home." That too is good social gospel. It does not deny to women the privilege of a public career. It refers only to mothers and not to all women married and unmarried. It does not forbid any woman to engage in any industry, vocation or profession she may choose. While leaving that a matter of personal option the state promises to lend a hand to mothers who prefer to be the queen of a home rather than a slave in a linen mill. Undoubtedly many years will pass ere this domestic ideal is realized in Eire.

Any civilized people on earth should rejoice at the enactment of such a pronouncement. It is an old law in the philosophy of greed and exploitation that the father shall be fired and the wife hired because she is cheaper and then the wife shall be fired and the child hired because the child is cheaper. America's long battle for a child labor law is eloquent of that truth. Eire proposes to sprag that wheel of evil industrialism.

When Mother Goes To Factory

The Dail of Eire knows very well that when the mother is driven to the factory the boys often wind up in the alley gangs and marital felicity is shattered beyond repair. As in New York's east side or London's east side. Eire of course will be opportunistic. She will get what social justice she can as the years go by. But her goal ultimately will be the absolute realization of her ideal.

Now listen to the new constitution as it applies to divorce:

"The state pledges itself to guard with special care the institution of marriage, on which the family is founded, and to protect it against attack. No law shall be enacted providing for the grant of a dissolution of marriage. No person whose marriage has been dissolved, under the civil law of any other state, shall be capable of contracting in Eire a valid marriage during the lifetime of the other party to the marriage so dissolved."

There is no beating about the bush in that statement. The intent stands out as clearly as the Empire State building on a sunny day. There will be no Reno in Eire. Gentlemen from America, who have been divorced in Reno, must keep their hearts in leash while visiting Eire and be careful not to fall in love with a sparkling colleen. The Irish girls will have the first Lohengrin or none.

May Separate But Not Remarry.

But that is not the whole story. Married people may be legally separated and will not be obliged to live together in the perpetuation of a living hell. But being separated they must not be married again until the other party dies.

Moreover I have it on the best authority that the constitution will in nowise conflict with the laws of the church. The new constitution will be civil law strictly and only. The prerogative of the pope to dissolve a marriage by declaring it invalid will still remain. The Protestant churches have never exercised such a power and probably never will and have no desire to do so. Nor could this be called favoritism since all churches and religions are equal before the law and provision is made to prevent ecclesiastical favoritism.

Let us be patient with Ireland. Any social experiment is good for all mankind. No nation on earth ever was more desirous of service to the common people than Eire is today. Let us think of her sympathetically and give her credit for sincerity and genuineness. Some day we may take a leaf from her biography to guide us into some path of peace and prosperity.

Twins Get Mixed Up As Claud Plans To Wed

If you're easily confused don't bother reading this. It seems that one twin, already divorced from a twin, will marry another twin, whose twin will be bridesmaid, while the groom's twin, who has twice married and twice divorced other twins, will be best man. Just like that! Getting down to identification on the left is Claud Stroud, of the famous radio and screen pair, who will marry Gloria Brewster (second from LEFT), of Hollywood's up-and-coming Brewster twins. Claud's brother, Clarence, RIGHT, will be best man and Gloria's sister, Barbara (the other one in the picture) will be bridesmaid.

Cordova Students Present Program

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CORDOVA MINES, June 15—Last week Cordova school gave a musical program which was held in the United church, in charge of their teachers, C. Vance, Miss I. Boriand and Mrs. P. Greenly. Wesley Wildman accompanied them on the piano.

The program was started by a speech of welcome by small Murray McCullough, and a large number of chorus by junior and senior rooms were well received. Several drills by groups added to the enjoyment.

A very smart litle speech was given Mary Quinlan when presented with a medal for first prize. A duet by Mr. and Mrs. Wildman entitled "Just A Song At Twilight" was delightfully sung. An extra feature was tap dance by Annie Meyers.

Program concluded with a chorus of twelve by group of junior room and singing of God Save the King.

Weekend visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Billings were: Mr. Bill Tennyson, Timmins and Misses Carmelita and Annie Meyers, also Miss Eva Shannon.

Highball Warms Fingers But 3 Needed For Toes

By Howard W. Blakeslee
(Associated Press Science Editor.)

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16 (AP)—It takes only one highball to warm your fingers, but at least three to warm your toes.

These curious facts about man's "cooling system," the action of the skin of face, hands and feet in regulating his temperature, came to light in medical studies shown today at the American Medical Association's scientific exhibit.

New methods of diagnosis, particularly of troubles often mistaken for varicose veins, have come from this study. The experiments were exhibited by three Mayo Foundation physicians of Rochester, Minn., Dr. Bayard T. Horton, Charles Sheard and M. D. Williams.

In a little more than five minutes after a drink the skin of the face warms up, getting rid of heat from metabolism of the alcohol. In 10 minutes the fingers get warm. That is all the work the "cooling system" has to do for one highball.

Eating a meal has exactly the same effect, except that the time is much slower. The Mayo experimen showed that finger temperatures start a rather sharp, quick rise in about an hour and a half after a meal. What kind of a meal seems to make no difference. There is no more finger heating from a "high protein" dinner than from any other menu.

Blood Pressure Holds.

There is no change in blood pressure accompanying these temperature rises, the physicians stated.

It was suggested that the warming effect of highballs on the feet may be one reason why some people stagger with too many drinks.

Cigarette smoking has one of the quickest effects in cooling the skin of the fingers. Why it causes the contraction of blood vessels is not known; nor have bad health effects been traced to this cooling.

But, Dr. Horton said, in a few susceptible persons blood pressure rises from 130 to 180 due to a smoke. Cigars and pipes cool the fingers like cigarettes, particularly a cigar smoked down short.

$200 Allan Garden Lemons Stir Aldermanic Howl

TORONTO, June 16.—Alderman William Croft charged last night the city was trying to grow lemons in Allan Gardens that cost $200 apiece. The taxpayers were also footing the bill, he declared, for bananas costing $30 each to grow.

Carrying his City Hall economy crusade into the Allan Gardens yesterday, the Ward 9 representative spent nearly an hour in the tropical "jungle" which the Civic Parks Department operates at an annual cost of several thousand dollars.

Standing under the shade of a "dilapidated" palm tree, the Alderman licked his finger and rubbed it along fronds that were caked in dirt. Then he wandered over to a cactus plant and found it wasn't flourishing any too well, either, possibly because dozens of citizens had been allowed to carve their initials in it.

Rows and rows of shrivelled ferns then caught his eye and he let out such a roar of protest that lazy goldfish, in a nearby pool, scuttled for safety.

Moth-Eaten Ferns.

"Just look at those ferns," he called. "Why, when they get that moth-eaten in my house, my wife makes me throw them out."

If the city must have ferns, he added, then Parks Commissioner Chambers could just go down to the market and buy them fresh from the country at about one-tenth the price it cost the city to try and grow them in the tropical "jungle."

On a struggling banana tree were found about a dozen or two little green bananas which the Alderman said looked to him like "gherkins." An employee hastened to explain the fruit, when ripe, was sent to sick people in the hospitals. But the Alderman felt the corner grocery would gladly deliver "a couple of truckloads" for much less than it cost the city to grow its own bananas.

Alderman Croft had great difficulty also in ascertaining just whether the city's lemons were actually lemons or oranges. They already had grown to about the size of oranges and an employee explained that sometimes they even grew to be as large as grapefruit.

In vain the City Councillor hunted for some sign which would advise the public as to the nature of the fruit which Parks Commissioner Chambers was attempting to grow. But there was nothing to indicate the name of any of the tropical plants in the greenhouses.

Watch Goldfish

"But I don't suppose that matters since very few people seem to come into this pitiful Garden of Eden, anyway," Alderman Croft declared. "Only seven people have been in here since I arrived and none of them appears the least bit interested in either the tropical plants or in Commissioner Chamber's lemon tree. They came to look into that pool and watch the antics of half a dozen goldfish, two or three of which have goitre."

Net impression gained by Alderman Croft was the conclusion the tropical "jungle" was a "disgraceful waste of the taxpayers' money." It had no educational value whatever, he believed, and should be abolished immediately. Cost of running Allan Gardens during 1938, which figures includes the upkeep of the tropical exhibition, was estimated at $24,214.

Early Potatoes

BROCKVILLE, Ont., June 16 (CP).—First home-grown potatoes have reached the market here, about three weeks ahead of usual because of an experiment by J. Stannage Webster, a farmer near here. Mr. Webster last year seeded potatoes in cold frames and then transplanted them this year. The attempt was successful.

A Fake Label?

SHEFFIELD, Ont., June 16 (CP).—George Hill owns a violin bearing the label Antonius Stradivarius Cremonensis Faciebat Anna, 1736, but he is not excited about it. On the back of the instrument there is a mark reading "Made in Germany." Stradivarius was the great Italian violin maker. Sheffield is just north of Galt.

Meeting Junior Welfare League

Reports were read by the sewing, knitting and visiting convenors, and the largest balance in the bank ever recorded was reported by the secretary-treasurer.

Thirty families have been visited, one house having been reported to the M.O.H. due to unsanitary conditions, and 14 families cared for, while medical and dental aid was given to children in five of those families. Oranges and eggs were provided, as well as 1500 quarts of milk and three gallons of cod liver oil. Two babies were taken to the Babies Clinic, and one child taken to the Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto.

At Christmas 58 stockings were filled, and clothing, shoes and rubbers were given to needy children, as well as new under-garments, made by the members, six layettes, seven knitted sweaters, two baby pullovers and eight pairs of mittens. The members gave assistance to the T.B. travelling clinic which was in the city, and at Christmas remembrances were sent to many patients in different sanitariums.

A very successful dance was held at the Kawartha Club in April to augment the League's funds for the next season.

Officers elected for 1938-39 were as follows Miss Clare Mason, president; Miss Helen Munro, 1st vice-president; Mrs. G. Munro, 2nd vice-president; Mrs. D. B. Falkner, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, convenor of visiting committee; Mrs. P. Rowen, convenor of sewing, and Mrs. W. Perks, convenor of knitting committee.

Another interesting event of the evening was the presentation of a silver flower basket to Companion Mrs. Fred Dainton, who celebrates her 25th wedding anniversary Monday, une 20, by Companion Mrs. E. Barnes. The address was read by Chief Companion Mrs. A. Simmons.

We Noticed

. . . Someone on Water street wearing a superbly tailored little dress of grey, and for accessories, hat, bag and shoes in that lovely shade, may-wine.

◇ ◇ ◇

. . . A very small young lady looking quite as chic in her gaily patterned little print frock as any of her elders . . . she wore bright hairbows to match, too.

◇ ◇ ◇

◇ ◇ ◇

. . . That bows are everywhere, on lapels, at necklines, at waistlines, scattered on skirts and used as trimmings for hats.

Now Is Time To Buy Dirndl

Yellow percale dirndl with quilted jacket and bonnet

By LISBETH

IF YOU haven't owned a dirndl dress yet, now is the time to buy one. This gay peasant style has been popular for some time and may go out with the autumn. Right now a dirndl is the thing for home and resort wear.

This peasant theme is incorporated into many summer dresses of sheer material. Skirts are trim at the hips, but below that line, skirts are full and often shirred, dirndl fashion. And this is true both of afternoon and evening dresses.

The shirred and bloused silhouette is being used in both coats and dresses, Mainbocher's shirred and bloused coats being used as models for dresses. Blousing more often takes place in the back and sides than in front.

On this wide skirted theme are new shirtwaist dresses with all-around skirts.

Most dirndls are worn for sports, but there are some formal, peasant-type frocks.

The Agony Of Eczema

Eczema, or salt rheum, is one of the most torturing of itching skin diseases. The principal cause is bad blood, aided by inactive skin and inflammation. It manifests itself in small, round pimples or blisters which later on break and form crusts or scales, and the intense burning, itching and smarting are almost unbearable.

To eradicate eczema from the system it is necessary to give the blood a thorough cleansing, and for this purpose we would highly recommend Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mrs. Joseph R. Berger, Millbank, Ont., writes:—"Several months ago I was troubled with eczema on my hands. I could not help with the milking my hands were so sore and itching, and could hardly put them in water.

After I had taken two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters I found my hands were healing very quickly. I have never found a remedy to compare with B.B.B. for purifying the blood."

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Summer Camp Plans Outlined

The June meeting of the Young Women's Christian Association was held this week with Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner presiding.

Following the opening devotions, Miss E. Morrow read the financial report showing a probable balance of $362.00 from the Pageant when all returns are in. The Public and Residence departments also showed a balance for this month.

Reports of the various committees were given, concluding with reports of the recent Y. W. C. A. Girls' Conference in Kingston given by Mrs. J. Forbes and Mrs. F. Gray, members of the Girls' Council.

Plans for summer activities were outlined. Swimming classes for all ages and grades including life saving and stunts are proving popular. The Y. W. C. A. Camp "Inglestane", Stoney Lake, opens July 1st. The camp staff will go up June 27 to have everything in readiness. First campers this year will include C. G. I. T. groups from city and district, including Bowmanville for the C. G. I. T. week, July 2 to 9. New equipment for camp this year includes a Johnston Outboard Motor, and new sleeping cabins.

Mrs. F. M. Somerville presided for the election of officers with names submitted by the nominating committee, Mrs. N. D. Buchanan, chairman. The report was received with expressions of appreciation to the officers for their splendid service during the year, and for their consenting to carry on another year.

Mrs. Somerville expressed special thanks to Mrs. Kenner for the many hours of thought and work during a heavy campaign year.

Mrs. Kenner, returning to the chair, thanked the members for the loyal co-operation, and said that she felt the year ahead would complete a very big step in Association achievement.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"Great men are they who see that spiritual is stronger than any material force." —R. W. Emerson.

Dear Friends:

That sounds like claiming a lot for spiritual force, doesn't it? We say, "money is power," strength is power, a big muscular person can do many things a weaker one cannot do, and it is true about these things to a large degree.

But there is a force stronger than all these, if we only RECOGNIZE it, if we let ourselves become AWARE of it. You must be aware of life if you are to live, aware of sight, of hearing and taste. You have to be aware of your capability to work, to breathe, to act.

And it is through the spiritual side of us that we become aware of all these things. But as far as our use of it is concerned, we use a dipper when we should use a pail, we use a pail when we should have a pump, and oftentimes we will not acknowledge it is there at all.

I still maintain that we are taught wrongly. We are taught from the outside in, when it should be from the inside out. We are shown how to be athletes, to swim, we absorb lots of facts from those who teach us. But we are never taught how to think.

Let us see what the dictionary says of the spiritual: "not material; Of or pertaining to the mind or soul, as distinguished from matter; Opposite to physical; pertaining to the soul or higher nature of man; pure; holy; heavenly minded; etc."

Well, you might say, how can I be heavenly minded when I must think of money, I must earn my living, I must work at my job? Awhile ago I wrote you about "giving" of yourself to certain things before you get any real benefit from it.

So also must you "give" of yourself to learn about yourself. Why you get along, why you don't get along. Remember, our Lord was Divine, but He was also human. When He was on earth, He lived as a human being does. He ate and drank as we do, and the functions of His body had to operate fully, else He would have been sick.

It was not from His manhood as a human that He was able to perform all these miracles, He drew from the spiritual side of Himself to do them. And He told us, "All these things I do, ye can do also, if you have faith as a grain of mustard seed."

His disciples could do them also, after He had been put to death. So many have pictured Him as more or less of a sissy, a weakling. But He was not weak in any respect. He was strong and virile and healthy. Yet He knew the limitations of the body, so when He wanted to do anything extraordinary like a miracle, first He called on His Father, then on His spiritual part, and the miracle was there for all to see.

But we will not believe in that part of our makeup. What lets you think or feel? Why don't your hands and feet have separate brains of their own, but must be guided from the head? And why cannot we realize that God is our head, our brain, our intellect?

Why don't we see that as parts of our body become paralyzed because it cannot get the message from the head or brain, so also are we paralyzed spiritually if we do not get messages from the Head of all humanity.

We were not meant to go it alone, although it often looks like that, and although we try to go alone. It is the spiritual side that causes you to feel, to enjoy, to suffer. You can look at any part of your body, but you cannot look at your feelings. Begin today to use your spiritual side more, learn all you can about it, watch it grow and guide you, then you realize it is more powerful than any material thing you know.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

WEDDINGS

Hall—Gaudaur

A wedding of much interest to Janetville residents, the groom being a former Janetville boy, was solemnized at Atherly, amid a profusion of flowers, at the home of the bride when Clotilde Grace Gaudaur, daughter of Mrs. Gaudaur and the late Jacob Gaudaur, was married to Orland Robert Hall, son of Mr. F. C. Hall and the late Mrs. Hall.

Rev. W. Emmett of Orillia officiated.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. D. Leury and Mrs. H. Snead of Orillia sang "Because" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her brother, the bride wore white satin and a veil that had been in Mrs. Gaudaur's family over one hundred years. She carried an arm bouquet of roses and lily-of-the-valley.

The groomsman was Mr. Lloyd Hall of Janetville.

Part of the honeymoon was spent at Princeton, New Jersey, where they witnessed the sculling race in which the bride's seventeen-year-old brother, Jake, who is being trained by Bob Pearce of Hamilton, sculled for the championship of high students of America.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Hall will reside at Atherley.

O'Brien—Gooley

A very pretty June wedding was solemnized Monday morning at 8 o'clock in Sacred Heart church, Rev J. C. Maloney officiating, when Matilda Eileen Gooley, youngest daughter of Mrs. John Gooley and the late Mr. Gooley, 163 Princess street, was united in marriage to Lawrence Michael O'Brien, Douro, youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. C. O'Brien.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, William Gooley, was charming in a gown of white satin made on long, princess lines, with tiny buttons at the front running from neck to hem. She wore a small white turban with finger-length veil, white suede shoes and lace gloves, and carried a bouquet of pink Premier roses and maiden hair fern.

The bridesmaid, Miss Eileen Hobbins, niece of the bride, was in a gown of blue sheer over taffeta, white off-the-face hat, white kid shoes, lace gloves, and carried a bouquet of pale pink roses and sweet peas. Mr. Clem Garvey was best man.

Following the wedding ceremony dinner was served to about 40 guests at the home of the bride's mother. Among the guests was Rev. J. C. Maloney.

The dining room was decorated in pink and white, and the table was centred with the bride's cake.

A reception was held in the evening at the groom's home, Douro, which was attended by about 300 guests.

Later the couple left by motor for Toronto and Niagara Falls, the bride travelling in an ensemble of navy sheer with grey accessories. On their return Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien will live at the groom's farm in Douro.

Enquiry Column

Conducted by Mrs. MARY MOORE

QUESTION: It is a grand page you run,—good, reliable "useable" recipes, new and old, anything and everything. Were I to try and express my appreciation and admiration words would fail me, so I'll just say thanks for everything and long may you live to conduct it.

Last Fall my small son wanted a recipe for Toffee apples. He wrote you, but got no reply. The letter must have been mislaid in your office—Since then you are "a pain in the neck" to him. Excuse the modern setting. However I still have faith.

I think that is what you call them (toffee apples),—they are dipped in a red syrup and eaten on a stick. How do you make the syrup—or do you?

And Ma wants a recipe for Sultana Cake. I think that is its title. It is of the pound cake family and has nuts and raisins in it—not iced. Does it keep well?

A happy and healthy summer to you, the Doctor, Marianne and Peter. Will be seeing you in our happy hunting ground. "The Cookery Page", "A Reader."

ANSWER: To be a pain in the neck to Master F. your son, is painful to that part of my anatomy—also my face is red.

I searched the files and found under October a note from a T. F. asking for Toffee Apples and the date of my reply was October 25,—while this is fairly evident proof that your son was answered, I am sorry the letter did not reach him and hope this explanation and the following method for making Toffee Apples will re-instate me in his good opinion.

Red Taffy Apples

Firm red apples, wooden skewers, 3 cups sugar, 1 cup water, 2-3 cup light corn syrup, few drops oil of cloves or cinnamon, red coloring.

Wash and dry the apples well. Insert skewers which can be bought from the butcher, into the blossom ends of apples. Cook together the sugar, syrup and water (stir it only enough to dissolve sugar), until 310 deg. Farh. is reached (when dropped in cold water a thread of the syrup will crack without bending). Place syrup over boiling water in double boiler, keeping water boiling while dipping. Add red coloring to give desired shade (paste coloring is easiest to handle), then add flavoring oil and stir barely enough to mix. Holding apple by the skewer plunge it into the hot syrup. Draw out quickly and twirl until syrup runs down stick and spreads smoothly over apple. Stand apple upright so sides touch nothing while hardening. Dip remaining apples rapidly or syrup will become too hard. These should be made the same day they are to be used.

Knee-Length

The model's tied-on mesh sandals have thick cork soles.

Graded CANNED FRUITS and VEGETABLES

THE Canadian housewife may buy canned fruits and vegetables without speculation. Long before the can is opened . . . as soon as she sees it on the grocer's counter . . . she can know exactly the type and quality of the fruit or vegetable inside. The Dominion Government grade mark, printed on the label, is her guide!

All varieties of Canadian canned fruits and vegetables are graded according to standards established by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. There are three grades: "Fancy Quality," "Choice Quality," and "Standard Quality," which indicates third grade. The correct grade mark is printed on the label of each can . . . so, ask for the quality you want by its grade name; then examine the label on your purchase and be sure the grade mark printed on the can corresponds with the grade you requested.

FANCY QUALITY
Produced from a selection of the best fruit and vegetables available, perfectly matured, free from blemishes, uniform in size and colour; canned at the proper time, so that excellence of flavour and appearance may be preserved.

CHOICE QUALITY
Consists of fruit and vegetables selected for tenderness and fine flavour. Not as uniform as "Fancy Quality"; allows slight variation in size, colour and maturity.

STANDARD QUALITY
Third grade; prepared from well matured fruit and vegetables of good quality, but not as carefully selected for uniformity of colour or size as "Choice Quality".

LIST OF GRADED CANNED FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

Apples	Blueberries	Loganberries	Pumpkin
Apple Sauce	Cherries	Mushrooms	Raspberries
Apricots	Carrots	Peas (size not indicative of quality)	Rhubarb
Asparagus	Corn		Spinach
Beans	Currants	Peaches	Strawberries
Beets	Fruits for Salad	Pears	Tomatoes
Blackberries	Gooseberries	Plums	Tomato Juice

Look for the grade mark on the label of EVERY can

THE GUMPS

McCall Sentence Near

MIAMI, Fla., June 16 — (AP) — The evidence against Franklin Pierce McCall, confessed kidnapper of five-year-old James Bailey Cash, Jr., was presented today to a judge who had authority to send him to the electric chair.

Cash, Senior, and Federal agents detailed their story of the crime while circuit Judge H. F. Atkinson listened intently, preliminary to deciding upon the sentence.

Japanese Moves Are Menace India Believes

CALCUTTA, June 16. — (CP) — Not many years ago Japan was the darling of the Indian-owned press. It had been the first Asiatic nation to defeat a great European power; its material progress was Indians' admiration and envy.

The keynote of leading articles now is bitter condemnation of "Japanese Imperialistic aggression" in China and alarm at the prospects before India. The alarm, however, is not too loudly expressed lest perhaps it be used as an argument in the eternal wrangle over the cost of India's defences and Indias chances as an independent nation.

"If Japan succeeds in capturing China there will be a danger to India also," declares Dr. Subbaroyan. Congress minister in Madras. "It is essential that everyone should try to maintain the freedom of this country."

In the Calcuta Corporation debate on military training Subhas Chandra Bose, president of the All-India Congress, said they required a persistent campaign to rouse the Indian public to the dangers it was facing. In view of all this surprise has been widely voiced at the Congress Working Committee's resolution on the eve of the All-India session at Haripura. The resolution said:

"To establish world peace on an enduring basis Imperialism and exploitation of one people by another must end. During the past few years there has been a rapid, deplorable deterioration in international relations. Fascist aggression has increased and unabashed defiance of international obligations has become the avowed policy of Fascist powers.

"British foreign policy, in spite of its evasions and indecisions, has consistently supported the Fascist powers in Germany, Spain and the Far East and must, therefore, largely shoulder the responsibility for the progressive deterioration in the world situation. That policy still seeks arrangements with Nazi Germany and has developed closer relations with rebel Spain. It is helping in the drift to an Imperialist world war. India can be no party to such an Imperialist war and will not permit her man power and resources to be exploited in the interests of British Imperialism. Nor can India join any war without the express consent of her people.

"The Congress, therefore, entirely disapproves the war preparations being made in India and the large-scale manoeuvres and air-raid precautions by which it has been sought to spread an atmosphere approaching to war in India. In the event of an attempt being made to involve India in war, this will be resisted."

Indian Paper's Criticism

It is not the European-owned press alone that has criticized the resolution. A noted Indian newspaper of Nagpur, Central Provinces, the Hitavada, comments:

"In so far as the resolution is understood as the expression of India's ultimate views on universal peace, harmony and goodwill among nations, the theory propounded (regarding Imperialism) cannot be dismissed as entirely valueless. But when it comes to the question of defining India's immediate attitude to war in a world of aggressive nation states, greedy for power and pelf, the resolution is found to be sadly lacking in a sense of realism. . . . If the threat of aggression against India by powers jealous of British Imperialism is real, how can India escape the atmosphere of approaching war? Why should she not train herself in precautionary defence measures? . . . Nationalist opinion looks forward to a day when India will be in a position to defend her frontiers without the aid of British arms. How is she to achieve this if during the transitional period even the spread of a war atmosphere is condemned? The fate of China provides a valuable object for India."

The newspaper observes that Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru has frequently said India cannot escape the influence of world events, and it thinks the resolution reveals on "obsession with Imperialism foreign to the mind of the average citizen of this country."

Answering remarks of The Calcutta Statesman that the resolution limps to a lame and contradictory conclusion, the Amrita Bazar Patrika of Calcutta observes what the committee means is that "war preparations in this country are part of the endeavor which Britain is making along with other military powers to safeguard the interest of British Imperialism. . . . If Great Britain gives freedom to the people of India, or more correctly, if she does not stand in the way of India gaining freedom, the greatest stumbling block in the path of international security may be removed."

Could Bomb Calcutta

The Statesman retorted with a full-page article by an Indian airman showing that Calcutta could be bombed by planes flying from China across Burma and that a strong Indian air force is necessary.

It is generally believed if Japanese troops approach the Burma frontier emphasis in Congress circles will be on increasing defence precautions rather than on following the Working Committee's ostensible policy. As it is, India is 2,000 miles from the scene of fighting.

Even so the public demand for an improvement of India's defence is much louder than it was last year. A Bombay newspaper suggests the case for a defence loan ought to be examined.

The Lahore Congress newspaper, The Tribune, says if England decided actively to support China and so involved herself in a war with Japan, India would be perfectly within her rights in demanding that the consent of her own elected representatives in the legislature must be obtained before the government of India participates in the war. "But if and when that condition is fulfilled, India cannot refuse to participate in the war without reducing her professions of sympathy with China to a mockery. To condemn British foreign policy for its consistent support of the Fascist powers and to refuse to help Britain in war against these powers cannot go hand in hand."

Negro Wounds Five

ROME, June 16.—(CP)—A negro, believed to be an Ethiopian, who was found praying before a statue of the Lion of Judah on a Rome monument today, went beserk when an army captain ordered him away and wounded five persons with a sword before a militiaman shot him.

The negro was taken to a hospital where his recovery was considered doubtful. The captain was reported to be in a serious condition from numerous cuts.

Canned Chimes Draw Crowds, Also Comments

LONDON, June 16 (CP)—They're showing talking films in the beautiful 13th-century Chichester Cathedral. And "the peal of bells" from several belfries throughout the counties is a broadcast from gramophone records.

Not everybody thinks the church should thus keep pace with invention. Ministers have disagreed, bishops of neighboring dioceses have laid down conflicting orders, laymen have written to editors.

Bellringers' Guilds have denounced "canned chimes," but even the Manchester Guardian, which clings firmly to most of England's cherished traditions, suggests that sentiment in this case may be confused with sentimentality.

The films were introduced to Chichester Cathedral early in the New Year when a congregation of 2,000 saw four talking pictures presented in place of the usual sermon.. A screen, smaller than those used in movie-houses, was attached to the chancel screen. Two projectors were placed 60 feet away in the central aisle.

The dean, Very Rev. A. S. Duncan Jones, commended the scheme as suitable for worship in church. "Such films can be of the greatest value in spreading religion. People learn so much more by eye than ear."

All the lights of the church were turned out as the first film appeared: A rendition by a choir of "Praise, my soul, the King of Heaven." The congregation rose and joined in heartily. The second film was a new version of the old parable of the Sower. Next came a new version of Tolstoy's story, "Where Love Is, God Is," revealing how an aged carpenter found God in a beggar, in a woman, and her babe, in an old woman and small boy quarrelling. The last was a short picture of Christmas morning in Sweden.

Further commenting, the dean declared that films could bring things home in a way in which nothing else could and that it was intended to introduce these films throughout the diocese. "In all productions," he added, "the figure of Christ never appears."

Bishops Differ.

The Bishop of Chichester attended this experimental showing. But he would not be drawn into controversy with the Bishop of Winchester who had ordered that no films be shown in his neighboring diocese. The Bishop of Winchester, Dr. Cyril Garbett, wrote that "in the first place there is the danger that people may come to church not to worship God or to learn His word, but to enjoy without charge a picture display." He contended, too, that there was not at present a sufficient number of good films.

Letters to the press indicated varying shades of approval and condemnation. Newspapers themselves, however, were wary of taking sides, with the exception of The News-Chronicle which declared: "The Church, like every living institution, has to adapt herself to changing conditions." The Star was less positive: "Public worship is a social activity and too great a trust in mechanical aids may sap its vitality."

IN THE HYGIENE COURT OF JUSTICE

Typist Accused of Headaches

(Before Mr. Justice Kruschen)

PROSECUTING COUNSEL: This, my lord, is a case of a young woman charged with habitual headaches. It is a sad case, because her affliction renders her unfit for work or play, a misery . . .

JUDGE: What is a headache? (laughter)

COUNSEL: The dictionary defines it as a continuous pain in the head.

JUDGE: (addressing prisoner): Why do you have a continuous pain in the head, young lady?

PRISONER: I don't know, my lord. It isn't my fault.

JUDGE: The question of whose fault it is will be decided by this Court. Do you admit the charge?

PRISONER: Yes, my lord.

JUDGE: What steps do you take to prevent these headaches?

PRISONER: I sometimes take a sedative, my lord.

JUDGE: Sedative? Do you really mean to tell me that a sedative prevents headaches?

JUDGE: Have you ever heard of Kruschen?

PRISONER: Yes, my lord. I used to take it regularly,

JUDGE: And did you have headaches then?

PRISONER: N-no.

JUDGE: Young lady, you may count yourself fortunate in being brought before me. In this court we regard preventable illness as a crime. The complaint from which you suffer is caused by nothing else but neglect—neglect of the very first rule of sane and healthy living. It is caused, like so many other afflictions, simply and solely by constipation—or that even more dangerous and far more prevalent condition of semi-constipation. A pinch of Kruschen Salts—as much as will lie on a ten-cent piece—taken in a cup of coffee, tea, or a glass of water, every morning will help to finally and completely rid you of your trouble. My ruling is that you go straightway and get a bottle of Kruschen and begin this necessary practice tomorrow morning.

PRISONER: (smiling through her tears): Oh, thank you, my lord.

COUNSEL: About costs. . . .

KRUSCHEN SALTS

relieve constipation and rheumatism

Kruschen is a combination of several mineral salts which your body must get, in some way, to keep the blood pure, the inside clean, and the system generally toned up, but which you can't get in Nature's own way without abundant exercise and fresh air. You should have those salts every day; hence the importance of the "little daily dose". Every drug counter sells Kruschen in 25c, 45c and 75c bottles. It's the little daily dose that does it.

Sales Tax On Average Home $200

Removal Of Tax Is Powerful Stimulant To Building Industry

Removal of the sales tax on building materials as announced in the federal government's budget by the Hon. Chas. Dunning Minister of Finance, was regarded here today as a powerful stimulant to the building industry.

"On the average house the sales tax would amount to around $200." Fred J. Overend of the Peterborough Lumber Company commented to the Examiner this morning. "The builder is relieved of the tax by the government's action and when you couple that benefit with the provision of the Dominion Housing Act providing for temporary exemption from municipal taxes, and also the reduced rate of interest, you have a new and attractive basis on which the building industry should show immediate signs of improvement and recovery.

Gov't Pays Taxes.

Under the Dominion Housing Act, the Government pays to the local municipality all the first year's taxes on a new house, fifty per cent. of the second year's taxes and twenty-five per cent. of the third year's.

I don't know whether the public appreciates the full significance of these advantages, but there they are and they offer everything that has been asked for by municipal councils and other bodies in recent years. Personally I think it is the biggest thing that has taken place in the industry in a long time. Payments of Housing loans are extended over thirty-five years, bringing the monthly payment to a comparatively small sum and affording an opportunity to the average citizen to build a new home for himself and own it."

Restore Confidence.

Fred T. Tuggey expressed the opinion that the government's action should go a long way to restoring confidence in the building industry. "When I was in the council," he said "I always advocated striking the sales tax off the cost of building materials. The council on several occasions urged the government to provide this help, and now it has been done. Houses are needed in Peterborough, and if the work that is needed to be done can get started now it would go a long way to helping the employment situation."

Fred Dummitt said everybody connected with the building industry would be pleased at Hon. Mr. Dunning's announcement. "The government has done its part, there has been no increase in the cost of labor this year, and the outlook is more favorable for building than it has been for a long time. The average house costs from $3,000 to $4,5000 and on the lumber alone the saving to the builder should be at least $100." Mr. Dummitt said there was no doubt some citizens had been deterred from building by the cost of supplies, especially the sales tax. "All the industry needs now is the co-operation of those who have money to put into a new house, and the hearty aid of the supply men, and building should show improvement here this season."

30 New Gold Mines Are Expected In Production In '38

Ottawa, June 17 (CP)

NEW production records for the Canadian mining industry this year were forecast yesterday by Finance Minister Dunning in his Budget speech. He described it as giving a greater stimulus to the economic progress of the country than any other industry. In 1937, production was estimated at $457,000,000, an increase of 26 per cent. over the previous year and a new record.

Thirty new gold mines were expected to come into production in 1938, increasing existing capacity by 11 per cent.

United Counties Tax Rate Is 7.1 Mills

(By A Staff Reporter)

COBOURG, June 17.—Opening four tenders for public liability insurance Thursday afternoon, the counties council accepted the bid of M. M. Clancy & Son (Lloyds) of Toronto through their local agent, J. W. Burtt for $384.05 as compared with $1,700 last year. The risks were for $5,000 for one person, $10,000 for one accident and $1,000 property damage for one accident. For double these amounts the premium quoted by Mr. Burtt was $441.62, and for the difference of only $60 in the cost of the larger coverage the council decided to accept it. Last year's insurance was only on the basis of $5,000 for one person and $10,000 for one accident.

The Burt bid was regarded as a surprising bargain. The nearest competitive tender was $754.00 with two others at $1,175.

The 1937 Tax Rate

The general tax rate, exclusive of schools, was struck at 7.1 mills, the levy on the constituent municipalities being as follows: Alnwick, $3,-454.76; Brighton township, $8,889.73; Cartwright, $8,365.42; Cavan, $12,-804.92; Clarke, $16,605.64; Cramahe, $8,992.96; Darlington, $19,813.84; Haldimand, $17,940.69; Hope, $14,315.25; Manvers, $9,804.97; South Monaghan, $5,106.64; Murray, $8,332.72; Percy, $9,481.49; Seymour, $12,074.93; Bowmanville, $16,427.30; Brighton village, $6,517.06; Millbrook, $2,285.54; Campbellford, $10,236.27; Newcastle, $2,748.02; Cobourg, $23,957.20; Colborne, $2,968.52; Hastings, $2,801.42; Port Hope, $20,544.34. Total, $255,-510.76.

The School Rates

The levy for high and continuation schools applies only to those municipalities outside high school areas as follows: Alnwick, $1,022.30; Brighton township, $4,830.35; Cra-

Girl Gets 6 Months

OWEN SOUND, Ont., June 17 (C P)—Miss Eva Lupton of Hamilton was sentenced today to six months in the Mercer Reformatory at Toronto when she pleaded guilty in police court here to a charge of concealing the birth of a child.

She was arrested in Hamilton a week ago after the body of a child was found in the furnace of a Hanover building.

Roebuck Slip Forced Power Move

Hepburn Reveals Cancellation Never Intended

TORONTO, June 17—(CP)—Premier Hepburn of Ontario, testifying before a legislative committee inquiry into the affairs of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, said today it never was the government's intention to cancel outright Hydro contracts with four Quebec power companies. "It was our intention to effect a friendly settlement," he said.

Events leading up to Arthur W. Roebuck's three-day speech in the legislature in 1935, which preceded cancellation of the contracts, were related by Mr. Hepburn. The former attorney-general who resigned in April, 1937 as a result of a policy dispute with the Premier termed the contracts "invalid" and unenforceable."

"I asked him to get all the facts and bring them out in public but not to voice any legal opinion," the Premier recalled. Those instructions were not carried out, he added.

Mr. Roebuck "voiced the opinion they were not legal and unenforceable," the Premier continued. "That put us in the position that we had to support the Attorney-General or demand his resignation.

"I'm not disagreeing with what he said. But the time was not opportune to say it because we were hoping to settle all peaceably."

The act was made subject to proclamation by order-in-council "to give us more time to negotiate with the companies." Settlement was reached with two companies, the Premier added. "The other cases went to court."

Hogg Behind New Deal.

TORONTO, June 17—(CP)—Dr. T. H. Hogg, chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, told a legislative committee today that "nobody else had a finger in the pie" when negotiations got underway last November with Quebec power companies for renewal of contracts cancelled in 1935.

"The responsibility for those deals was mine," Dr. Hogg testified before the committee which is investigating charges Premier Hepburn negotiated the revised contracts before last October's election. "I carried them out. There are no attempts on my part to evade responsibility."

Until the end of October, 1937, the "back-to-Niagara" movement had his "entire sympathy and co-operation," the Hydro chairman said. At a cabinet meeting late in October "we got around to the desirability of cleaning up the power situation." Dr. Hogg, formerly chief engineer, was appointed successor to T. Stewart Lyon Nov. 1. He previously could not act until "the responsibility was mine."

"I felt sure there was a basis for negotiation and cleaning up the situation without working a hardship to anyone," Dr. Hogg said in telling of the cabinet conference. "I had certain ideas and was sure something could be worked out. I was told to go ahead.

Tip From Hepburn

"On Nov. 1. I was appointed chairman of the Hydro Commission. Ward Wright (Toronto barrister) called me and said the Prime Minister had told a Beauharnois contract might be negotiated. Next R. C. A. Henry (Beauharnois general manager) called and I saw him at Ward Wright's residence. We didn't want the newspaper men to know what was going on."

At a meeting Nov. 19 attended by Premier Hepburn and Hon. H. C. Nixon, provincial secretary, "we were told we could go ahead." The decision of the Beauharnois, Light Heat and Power Company to take litigation, successful in Ontario courts, to the Privy Council "brought to a head" the Beauharnois negotiations and change in policy, Dr. Hogg said.

A. H. Beaton, K.C., Toronto, told the committee at the opening of today's session that in April, 1937 Mr. Nixon "intimated" that if Beauharnois could meet a price of $12 a horsepower "the province could take a good jag of power."

Dawn Phantom Shot Was Policeman's Son

CHICAGO, June 17 —(CP)— The "Dawn Phantom" gunman accused of 28 early morning holdups during the past two months was revealed in death today as a policeman's son.

Policeman Ernest L. Keen suspected, from victim's descriptions, the robber was his son, Harold, 23, former convict. He went on extra duty in an effort to catch him.

Seven detectives trapped young Keen last night as he approached the home of a friend. They said he reached for his weapon, so they fired pistols and a machine gun. Eighteen bullets killed him.

Harold's wife, Angeline, 21, an expectant mother, was told of the shooting at the detective bureau where she had been detained.

"I expected it," she said.

Policeman Keen was telephoned.

"The work is done," he said, "as I knew it must be."

8 p.c. Tax On Supplies Lifted To Stimulate Building

No Tariff Changes Made Pending U.S. Pact, 23 Million Deficit Seen Next Year

OTTAWA, June 17 (CP).—Hundreds of Canadian industrial plants supplying the building trades are exempt from the eight per cent sales tax today as a result of the Dominion budget presented by Finance Minister Dunning.

In an exhaustive review of the national bank account, the finance minister yesterday announced most of the products going into construction of homes would be freed from the sales tax.

He left taxation at its present levels, stressed the soundness of Canadian economy and left revision of tariffs until bi-lateral agreements are reached between Canada, Great Britain and the United States.

The treasury, which reported a deficit of $13,775,000 in 1937, is budgeting for a deficit of $23,000,000 in 1938-39.

As a general stimulus to the construction industry, the government excluded from the sales tax all the major products entering home building. Included in the list were bricks, tiles, cement, stone, plaster, lumber, sash, doors, shingles, plaster boards, fibre boards, wallpaper, paints, roofings, plumbing fixtures not including piping, glass, furnaces and builders' hardware.

With the exception of building supplies and such products as harness, feeds for the fur farms and equipment and supplies for fishermen's boats, the sales tax was left where it was.

The only change in the excise tax was to exclude tires and tubes when used as original equipment on cars, trucks, trailers, tractors and motorcycles. Excise duties were unchanged.

Income tax rates, both for individuals and corporations, were not changed. Rates for the gift tax, aimed at wealthy persons who distribute their wealth to relatives during their lifetime to escape income and succession taxes, were increased. The rate on gifts of $25,000 and less were raised three per cent to five and on $1,000,000, from 10 to 15 per cent.

One of the features of the income tax amendments was aimed at tax-dodgers who establish a foreign residence or use a foreign incorporation to beat the treasury. In the future, all transactions with foreign countries which might result in tax-dodging, will be reviewed by the Treasury Board and if it decides evasion was the object, the tax will apply.

For the first time since 1912, the budget made no tariff changes. The reason was the negotiations at Washington between the three nations of Great Britain, Canada and the United States for trade treaties. Mr. Dunning said it would be futile

Conant Has Collapse With Case Of Nerves

OSHAWA, Ont., June 17 (CP).—Hon. G. D. Conant, Attorney-General, "was so tired he had a case of nerves and will remain in bed today before resuming work tomorrow," his wife said today.

"He was up until midnight at a meeting and he was tired," Mrs. Conant said. "I am sure he will be all right tomorrow."

Major J. H. Clark, Liberal member of the Ontario investigation committee at the opening today in Toronto said Mr. Conant would not be present to preside as chairman because of a collapse.

Rothschild Held For 10 Million, Women Are Next

LONDON, June 17.—(CP-Havas)—The Star (Liberal) today said Germany may demand ransom for female members of the Rothschild family now detained in Vienna, as well as for Baron Louis Rothschild, head of the banking family's Vienna branch.

The newspaper said London financial circles were convinced the holding of important Jews for ransom was new evidence of Germany's acute need for foreign currency.

According to the Daily Herald (Labor), the ransom for Baron Louis was fixed at £2,000,000 ($10,000,000), as "compensation" for losses suffered in 1931 with collapse of the Creditanstalt, giant bank of which he was president.

Socialist sources said a close friend of the Vienna Rothschilds, an English captain, had made several trips to Paris and London since the Baron's arrest and imprisonment, and the Nazis expected all branches of the family to contribute to the ransom.

They added that Baron Louis, first sent to a concentration camp, is now held at the Hotel Metropole, Vienna headquarters of the German secret police, and that he has been allowed to see no one, not even his lawyer.

Hail Like Golfballs Rips Crops To Pieces

COLLINGWOOD, Ont., June 17 (CP). — Lightning, rain and hail caused severe loss throughout the Southern Georgian Bay district last night in a violent electrical storm which fired houses and barns and flattened field crops.

Homes and factories were without power for hours as the storm took down high-tension lines and played havoc with Hydro transformers. The main street here was brighter than day when a lightning bolt hit the Town Hall spire, splitting the flag pole and sending the big brass ball bouncing down into Market Square.

Worst individual losses were the razing of John Potts' lakeshore home and Charles Holden's new barn at Banks Settlements, where livestock was rescued with neighbors' help. Numerous barns were struck throughout the district and three houses in the town itself, in one case the lightning travelling down the chimney and through a hole in the wall of William Hindle's house.

Crops were hammered down by hail the size of golf balls in some spots and a cloudburst generally. Five hundred excursionists on the steamer Manitoba were held up two hours by heavy fog which followed the storm.

Four Sudbury Brokers Get Prison Terms

SUDBURY, Ont., June 17 (CP).—Harold A. Pullam, senior partner in the brokerage firm of Pullam and Gerrish, was sentenced to 26 months in Kingston Penitentiary today for forgery of a power-of-attorney and conversion, to which he pleaded guilty.

His partner, R. G. Gerrish, was given 18 months in the Ontario Reformatory for theft of 10 shares of Falconbridge Nickel. D. G. Nairn, company accountant, was sentenced to 15 months in connection with the power-of-attorney forgery, and G. W. Anderson, bookkeeper, was sent to Kingston Penitentiary for two years, for receiving $10 of the proceeds of the 10-share Falconbridge theft.

Military Training Is Urged For All Able-Bodied Men In Councillors' Resolution

Council Of The United Counties Would Conscript All Able-Bodied Men Train Them For Purposes Of Defence

Military training of all able-bodied men in this country for purposes of defense was advocated in a resolution adopted by the council of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham at its concluding session Thursday night. It was moved by Reeve H. Morrow of Murray township and seconded by Deputy-reeve C. G. Morris of Bowmanville and passed without a dissenting note.

The preamble of the resolution referred to the military aggressiveness shown by some of the leading nations, also of the growing menace to the safety of the Empire and the security of Canada, and proceeded to ask the Dominion government to arrange for the training of Canadian men in every community. It also affirmed that such training should be essentially for the defense of Canada, and urged that men qualified in military instruction should be available for this purpose.

The council also purchased large colored pictures of King George VI. and the Queen with instructions to the property committee to have them placed above the warden's chair.

Japanese Fight A Losing Flood Battle

SHANGHAI, June 17—(AP)—A hundred-mile-long blanket of muddy water spread rapidly southeast through Honan Province today as half-naked Japanese engineers, aided by thousands of Chinese peasants, labored desperately in rushing currents to mend broken dikes of the Yellow River.

Continuing rain, however, appeared to doom their efforts as the Yellow cascade pouring through wide breaks in the dikes north and west of Kaifeng reached the walls of Chowkiakow, nearly 100 miles south of the normal course.

An Associated Press correspondent, flying over the flood area, reported the river appeared to be changing its course to join China's other great river, the Yangtse.

The Yellow torrent was flowing into a tributary of the Hwai River, whence it would reach the Yangtse below Nanking, former Chinese capital.

Japanese staff officers at Kaifeng said the task of stemming the flood now appeared to be hopeless. Almost 90 per cent. of the giant stream's water was roaring through quarter-mile gaps into the countryside, 30 feet below the river bed which has been built up through centuries of silting.

It was estimated a full 500,000 homeless Chinese soon would be in flight before the flood, travelling by land and water directly in front of the devastating current, thousands of small boats and crudely fashioned rafts bearing refugees used all available rivers and canals to seek a haven in the market towns of Anhwei Province to the east.

Canadian Tax Dodger To Feel Clamps

OTTAWA, June 17.—(CP)—Finance Minister Dunning yesterday struck a blow at the Canadian tax dodger who sets up residence in another country to avoid paynig income taxes here.

In his Budget statement, the Finance Minister made no changes in income tax rates for individuals or corporations but proposed several changes in the regulations to tighten administration. Rates for the gift tax were increased all along the line.

In the future, when an individual or corporation, ordinarily resident in Canada, makes use of any transaction involving another country, such as setting up residence there or forming a company there, the facts will be reviewed by the Treasury Board at Ottawa.

If the Treasury Board decides it is a straight business proposition, there will be no income tax assessed. If it decides it is an attempt to avoid Canadian income taxes, the taxes must be paid "to the same extent as if the transaction had not taken place."

The Treasury Board, in reviewing transactions of this nature, will look at the substance, rather than legal form. It will be possible to appeal the Board's decision to the Exchequer Court.

All income tax changes announced yesterday will apply to 1937 incomes and, for purposes of administration, will be deemed to have come into operation January 1, 1937.

Nine Executed

MOSCOW, June 17—(AP)—Nine executions for espionage and wrecking in Blagoveschensk, on the Amur River, were reported today. This was the second case in the far east this week. On Tuesday 17 persons were executed as members of a wrecking and espionage group in the Birobidjan Jewish Autonomous Republic.

Heir Divorced, Wed Divorced Picks Another All In Day

RENO, Nev., June 17 — (AP) — James McDonald, third, youthful multimillionaire of San Mateo, Calif. and Boise, Idaho, whose speed in shuffling wives has intrigued even blase Reno, was marriage bent again today.

The 24-year-old heir to a $12,-000,000 oil fortune, who was twice divorced and once married in Reno yesterday, said he would wed June Kerns of Cassels, California, in Carson City today.

Yesterday McDonald was divorced by Mrs. Alecea McDonald, who charged desertion.

Within an hour he married Doris Marie Cunningham of Reno.

A half-hour later she divorced him, charging cruelty. An agreement providing for custody of his 14-month-old son was not made public.

McDonald announced plans for his marriage to Miss Kearns and said they would honeymoon in Yosemite National Park.

District Judge Benjamin F. Curler granted both of the divorce decrees and officiated at McDonald's marriage to Miss Cunningham.

Woman Gets 10 Years

DETROIT, June 17—(AP)—Mrs. Julia M. Barker, once wealthy Detroit Real Estate operator, was sentenced today to serve 10 to 15 years in the Detfoit House of Correction for the fatal shooting of Mrs. Edith Mae Cummings last Jan. 15, allegedly after a real estate despute.

WELLAND, Ont., June 17 (CP).—William Hanson, 52, Toronto, using a razor blade, removed an inch-long piece of glass from his own hand here yesterday. The glass had been lodged there for more than nine months following an accident at Barrie, Ont., where Hanson had his right side crushed.

Quebec Power Line To Cost 11 Million

TORONTO, June 17—(CP)—"Perhaps $10,500,000 or $11,000,000" will be spent by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission on equipment to handle power purchased from four Quebec companies under revised contracts which went into effect last December, Hydro chairman Dr. H. Hogg said today.

Testifying before a legislative committee inquiring into Hydro affairs, Dr. Hogg said additions now being built to the Toronto Leaside plant would cost $3,000,000. One-hundred miles of a new transmission line from Quebec already had been purchased and the cost of the line would be "perhaps another $6,000,-000."

"In addition there would be needed a line passing around Toronto from the north," the chairman added. Asked by a member of the committee what the total cost would be, he said "Perhaps $10,500,000 or $11,000,000."

Fortifying of Ireland's ports is to be started shortly.

Chamber of Forgotten Drugs Yields Epilepsy Cure

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17. — (AP).—From the storehouse of forgotten drugs has come a new treatment for epilepsy, which surpasses anything heretofore known.

The discovery was described to the American Medical Association here to-day by Dr. H. Houston Merritt, and Dr. Tracy J. Putnam, of Boston City Hospital and Harvard Medical School.

These two physicians tried an unusual experiment. They went to the storehouse of rare chemicals, which are manufactured by great chemical firms, and filed away a few ounces of each, mostly as scientific curiosities. They tried about 100 of these on epilepsy. They selected chemicals whose formulas might be effective against convulsions.

One of these was a synthetic drug to cause sleep. It was one of a large batch of sleep-producers and it failed. It had been filed away as useless, under the name of diphenyl hydantoin.

In the Harvard tests it proved to be an anti-convulsant instead of a sleeping potion. It was tried on 142 persons with grand mal, the most serious form of epilepsy. All these patients had suffered for years, Dr. Putnam said to-day.

They had found no relief in any of the epileptics treatments, new or old. Dr. Putnam said today.

But the "forgotten medicine" stopped all attacks in about 80 of the 142. To all outward appearances they had no more epilepsy.

Union Bread Drivers Out To Canvass Whole Of Toronto

Toronto June 17.

UNION bread drivers will ring doorbells at every house in the city next week asking citizens to eat union-made bread. This was the announcement made to the Trades and Labor Council Thursday night by Business Agent Michael H. Nichols of the Bread Drivers' Union.

Dr. Putnam said, however, it is likely they must keep on taking the preventive.

In 32 per cent of these cases there was a great decrease in number of convulsions. A few more were not benefitted.

Triple Wedding

DETROIT, June 17—(AP)—A Double wedding is news, but a triple wedding in which the brides are sisters is sensational, for this city at any rate. The brides — daughters of George A. Spencer, Michigan Manager of a Life Insurance Company, Laura, 21, will marry John E. Kerr, Ferndale, Mich., while Eva, 23, will marry Frank Perry, Detroit. Genevieve, 25 has not revealed the name of her husband-to-be. Date of the weddings is July 2.

Bennett Refuses Responsibility For Webb Letter

OTTAWA, June 17 (CP).—Opposition Leader Bennett denies responsibility for the letter written to him by Ralph Webb, Manitoba Conservative organizer in the 1935 general election campaign. The letter formed the basis of charges last week that Mr. Bennett, as Prime Minister, conspired to bribe three Manitoba constituencies with relief works.

Mr. Bennett returned to patronage charges late yesterday and swung into an answer to the denunciation directed toward him by Prime Minister Mackenzie King last Friday, when the Webb letter was read. He was stopped by a ruling of the chairman when he opened a counter attack.

The letter contained a request the government agree with Manitoba on construction of two roads as a relief project. It would not only provide needed highway facilities and furnish much employment but would be a good political move and ensure Conservative victory in three ridings, the letter stated.

He doubted if he had ever seen the Webb letter, Mr. Bennett said, and had nothing to do with any negotiations arising from it.

"This whole argument proceeds upon the allegation of motives, not upon facts at all," Mr. Bennett declared. "Am I to be responsible for Ralph Webb's letter? Am I to be responsible and charged as a conspirator because Ralph Webb wrote a letter which was marked personal and confidential?

"That may be a good argument against Ralph Webb, but any man who would endeavor to make that an argument in a court of law would soon know what would happen to him."

Not Justifying Language.

Referring to that part of Mr. Webb's letter which indicated the road building agreement would be good politics and might never require any expenditure of Federal money, Mr. Bennett said:

"I am not for one moment attempting to justify that language. If I had written it, it would be something. But I did not write this letter."

Mr. Bennett said he would bring out "cases that do not depend on Calf prices eased off after a strong start. Hogs picked up about 65 cents. Most lambs were $1.50 lower for the week and sheep tended down.

Several loads of cattle of outstanding quality sold at a premium. Good weighty steers brought $7.25 to $7.50, with some exceptionally well-finished cattle going at $7.75 to $8. Eight head reached $8.50. Plain weighty steers sold downward to $6.

Good butcher steers and heifers traded at $7 to $7.35, with several loads touching $7.50. One full load reached $7.50. Common to medium butcher ranged down to $5.50. Best cows made $5 to $5.25. Common cows were as low as $3.25, with canners and cutters from $2.25 to $3.

Milkers Go At $6.00.

Several loads of common light store cattle brought $4.50 to $5.50. Good tested milkers and springers sold at a top of $65. Exporters took 400 head of steers and bulls for shipment overseas.

Good veal calves opened at $7.50 to $8, with choice at $8.50, but no sales were higher than $8 at the close. Common vealers sold downward to $5. A few grassers and common light drinkers traded at $3.50 to $4.50. Some light beef bred calves went as stockers at $5 to $5.50. Exporters shipped about 500 head to United States.

On the light run and strength of other markets, hogs started 40 cents up at $10.75 off trucks for bacons and by Wednesday had advanced $11. Good sows were mostly $7, with others down to $6.50.

The lamb market opened weak at $12, and further losses brought good lambs to $11 by the finish. Culls were $7.50 to $8. A few small lots of fairly good yearling lambs reached $8.50, others going downward to $6.00.

Good light sheep started at $4, but at the close most were at $3.50, with culls downward to $1.50. Heavy sheep brought $2.50 to $3. Light and thin lambs were not wanted, some being returned.

Taxes Provide $86 In $100 Revenue

OTTAWA, June 17.— (CP).—Of every $100 of revenue collected by the Dominion government $86.83 comes from taxation, with the sales tax the biggest contributor at $26.72, Finance Minister Dunning disclosed in his budget speech yesterday.

Income tax provides $23.29 of every $100 collected, customs duties $18.09, excise duties $10.07, manufacturers, importation and stamp tax, etc., $8.28, and other taxes 38 cents. Non-tax revenues provide $11.93 and other receipts $1.24.

Old age pensions require $5.40, subsidies to provinces $4.00, and the combined government departments $31.82.

Raid Good Business For Everybody

TORONTO, June 17 —(CP)— A police raid on the Brown Derby suburban roadhouse, meant good business last night for Fong, Chinese operator of a cafe near the police station where the inmates of the alleged gambling place were taken.

"Big business," said Fong returning from a selling trip in the police station. "Everybody happy. Everybody laugh. Fong sell 45 bottles of pop, just like that, and sandwiches.

"Raids good things. Fong make business. Police make business. Government make business. Judge make business. Only gamblers lose business and gamblers sometimes lose anyway."

200 Civilians Die In Jap Aid Raid

HONG KONG, June 17 (A.P.). — Two hundred Chinese civilians were killed on Sunday in a raid by 40 Japanese planes on Changchow, Fukien Province, Chinese officials said to-day.

Shattered communications with the Fukien Province city, 30 miles west of Amoy on the coast north of here, veiled the news until to-day.

The raiders encountered only "feeble" resistance from Chinese anti-aircraft batteries, accounts of the bombing said.

The air attacks were made as 145 South China educationists, in an appeal to an unofficial British Anti-Aggression Committee, said 1,000 bombs since May 28 had killed an estimated 7,000 persons there. The appeal, sent to Viscount Cecil, a Nobel Peace Prize winner, asked for aid in preventing further bombings.

PRESSURE INCREASES

BERLIN, June 17.—(AP)—Jews in Germany, and especially in Berlin, have become the target of a new wave of Nazi supervision augmented by frequent police raids not only of public places such as cafes, restaurants and theatres but also of Jews' own homes.

Although such action is denied emphatically in official circles, stiffening of the anti-semitic campaign is in evidence in the latest decree which aims at further curtailment of Jewish influence in all walks of the nation's business.

Published yesterday in the official Reichsgesetzblatt, it defines more closely than ever what shops, businesses or other commercial undertakings are to be regarded as Jewish.

Persistent rumors of the intensified drive are met with a shrug of the shoulders by authorities, while police headquarters merely admit a number of regular police check-ups are being made on "criminal elements and undesirable aliens."

Nervousness among Berlin's Jews, however, seems nearing the point of desperation over the continued raids on Jewish cafes and restaurants. Many of the victims of the raids are said to be kept in confinement, especially those who are found to have been on the police record before. Unverifiable rumors place the number thus detained at 1,000.

The Toronto barrister said that in a conversation with Mr. Nixon "I distinctly got the impression there was a distinct shortage of power in sight and that if Beauharnois could meet the price the province might take some power." He said he advised Beauharnois to this effect, that the time was opportune to start negotiations to renew purchase contracts cancelled in 1935.

The committee, investigating affairs of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, was appointed after Leopold Macaulay, Conservative House Leader, charged Premier Hepburn negotiated renewal of the contracts before last October's election. During the campaign the Premier advocated a "back-to-Niagara" power policy and Mr. Macaulay charged he thus "misled" the voters.

Revised Hydro agreements with Beauharnois and other Quebec companies were put into force last December. They succeeded contracts drawn up prior to 1934 and cancelled by the Legislature in 1935 R. A. C. Heney, general manager of Beauharnois, testified before the committee negotiations for the revised agreements opened on November 4, 1937.

Mr. Henry earlier this week told the committee Mr. Beaton "wanted to represent the company in negotiations with Hydro" and that the matter had been discussed with the Provincial Secretary in May, 1937. "That leaves a bad impression." Mr. Beaton said to-day in telling of his conversation with Mr. Nixon.

Mr. Beaton's report of his conversation with Mr. Nixon was contained in a letter to Beauharnois' general manager on April 29, 1937. "From intimations to me I think the time opportune for discussions of the Beauharnois situation," the letter said. "It seems to be a very good idea to get together and have a discussion."

Ward Wright, Toronto barrister, is Beauharnois representative here and Mr. Beaton said "I never asked the company for a retainer on the Beauharnois matter." He said he was unaware that Mr. Wright—"one of the dearest friends I have"—was Beauharnois' agent until the committee inquiry opened.

Mr. Nixon, acting committee chairman in place of Attorney-General G. D. Conant, taken ill at his home in Oshawa last night, left the chair and took the stand to give evidence.

Mr. Beaton visited the Provincial Secretary "and brought the conversation around to Beauharnois," Mr. Nixon said. "I told him we would not buy Beauharnois. I told him we could not buy Beauharnois power for three reasons:

"Because of the clause in the Gatineau contract which prevented us buying more Quebec power until we had used up the Gatineau contract; because Beauharnois could not sell in Ontario cheaper than they did in Quebec; and thirdly, I said we did not need the power."

Job For Beaton.

Mr. Nixon said he saw Mr. Henry of Beauharnois May 10, 1937 and was told it would be a good thing for Beauharnois if Mr. Beaton was retained as solicitor for the company. "I told him it was of no interest to the government who was retained as we were not in a position to buy power." Mr. Nixon said he had no further power conversations with Mr. Henry.

"But the reasons you gave for no deal with Beauharnois soon faded away," Mr. Macaulay interjected. "We took power with postponed delivery," Mr. Nixon replied.

Dr. T. H. Hogg, Hydro chairman who appeared before the committee yesterday, was recalled in connection with evidence previously given by A. Murray McCrimmon, former comptroller of the commission, that he could get no reason for his dismissal. Mr. McCrimmon had quoted Hon. W. L. Houck, vice-chairman, as stating "the order came from higher up."

"He evidently meant my order, though I don't know why he should put it that way," Dr. Hogg said. "The commission had considered the question. The feeling was that there was too much responsibility placed in the hands of one man, as secretary and controller. We agreed the offices should be separated.

"Under those circumstances, it would be necessary to retain Mr. McCrimmon at a reduced salary if at all. We agreed that wouldn't be desirable. The conclusion we came to was that he should be asked for his resignation. The responsibility is on the commission and perhaps primarily on myself as chairman."

Of an exchange of Ontario "three-way" bonds in the Hydro portfolio for Dominion of Canada bonds in May, 1937, a transaction subsequently cancelled by the government, Dr. Hogg said "I agree with the feeling of the government as to these bonds. They shouldn't be used for speculation or gambling."

Asked whether Hydro's financial problem is "perfectly sound," the chairman said "yes, the reserves have been set up on a sound basis and the reserve picture is sound."

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG GRAIN

Canadian export business, estimated up to 500,000 bushels of old crop wheat, including durums, helped bolster Winnipeg wheat futures when they threatened to collapse after opening a cent higher today. At the final bell prices were ¾ higher to ¼ lower, July $1.07⅞, October .86½, November .85¾ and December .84-.84¼ cents.

The trade continued nervous with spasmodic buying or selling moving prices on a two-cent scale. Reports of hedging pressure at Chicago and lower Liverpool prices encouraged minor profit-taking after recent large price gains.

Cartwright Petition Is Refused By Council Of United Counties For Paved Road To Scugog Resort

(By A Staff Reporter)

COBOURG, June 17.—A vigorous petition from Cartwright township Thursday morning for a pavement from Blackstock to the Cesarea summer resort on Lake Scugog failed to alter the "pay as you go" policy of the counties council of several years ago not to undertake any more paving until its debentures have been liquidated.

"We're going to get a permanent road if we have to go to the Department," Rupert Byers of the township deputation declared.

"Can you get it from the Department?" Reeve J. C. Cummiskey, Manvers, acting chairman of the roads committee, asked.

"Any way we can get as much as we seem to be getting here," Mr. Byers answered.

"If you think the Department will pave the road, I don't see why you have come here wasting your time and ours," Reeve Cummiskey retorted.

W. Weatherilt said Cartwright was sending about $14,000 a year to the counties treasury and deserved some consideration of their road problem which was created by extremely heavy tourist and resort traffic. He estimated the summer population along the lake front at probably 10,000.

"You'll have to talk pretty strong to convince me these counties should do any paving at this time," Reeve Cummiskey said.

"We didn't come down here to take an answer of 'no' back," Mr. Byers remarked. He asserted that recent calcium chloride treatment of the road was useless because it was done too hurriedly.

Debenture Background

"Paving of county roads cost these counties more than a $1,000,000 eight or ten years ago," Reeve Cummiskey said. "We have been paying it off at the rate of $90,000 a year, and there is still more than $500,000 outstanding. So, I'm not going to be easily convinced. We are trying to get clear of that debt, we are paying as we go, and asking the people to put up with what they have until we get clear. There's a resolution passed several years ago to the effect that there is to be no more paving of county roads. To grant your petition, we'd have to rescind that resolution, and I don't think any member of the council is in favor of that."

Reeve Reid of Clarke and Deputy-reeve Shield of Cavan said there was no doubt the traffic to Cesarea was heavy, and their resolution authorizing special repair work to be done on the road was carried. The road is about three miles long, and one mile of it is provincial highway.

Decisions Deferred

"If township roads had to be 66 feet wide before being assumed by the counties we'd have fewer petitions for taking them over," Reeve C. Carruthers remarked in a discussion of this proposal by the roads and bridges committee Thursday morning.

Reeve Ennis said it was easier for a minor municipality than for the counties to get grants of land from farmers for road widening. The proposal was left to the December sessions for further consideration.

A Cartwright petition for the assumption of the township road from Nestleton station to the fourteenth concession of Manvers was referred to the special road commission for a report in December.

Reeve J. C. Cummiskey is acting chairman of the committee on account of the indisposition of Reeve Ennis of Seymour who said he did not feel well enough to be chairman.

A Brighton township-Cramahe request that the road from Castleton to Morganston was referred to the road commission for a report in December.

Asphodel Boundary

C. A. Poynton, district highway engineer, suggested that the buildings on the South Monaghan road below Bensfort bridge be removed. "No sooner do you get one pop or hot dog stand down than another replaces it. I am being pestered by Peterborough people to get those buildings out of there, and I wish you'd give your road commission authority to do something about it."

Mr. Poynton also proposed that the commission be increased from three to five members to ensure continuity of knowledge of what was being done from year to year. Victoria has five men on its commission, Mr. Poynton said.

Assumption of about a mile and a half of boundary road between Asphodel and Seymour townships, part of a short cut from Norwood to Trent Bridge, was recommended by Mr. Poynton. He said Peterborough county council had approved assumption, and all that was required now was to obtain co-operation from the united counties.

The road in South Monaghan from Wallace Point bridge to the Peterborough-Port Hope highway, about three miles, was also proposed for assumption by the counties council.

Reeve Roy Whittington of South Monaghan said both these road projects had been considered last year. The Wallace Point road was advocated by Fred Waterman because it provided a shorter route to Peterborough. "If it is taken over, South Monaghan then wouldn't have more than ten miles of county road altogether."

The committee deferred action this year by asking the commission for a report on these two roads in December, and supported Mr. Poynton's recommendation that the buildings encroaching on the road allowance at Bensfort bridge be removed.

Reeve Whittington said he was tired trying to keep peace along the river front. "Either take the buildings off the road or let them make a village of it," he remarked.

The proposal to increase the road commission from its present three members to five was left to the December sessions for action. The committee's experience, it was said, proved that there was no longer any economy in having only three members.

Bylaws were passed assuming the township road from Alderville to Harwood in Northumberland, and in Durham county the road from Kirby to Garden Hill.

Police Swoop Down On Toronto Gamblers

Gambling activities in the vicinity of Toronto were dealt a severe blow when provincial and city police made surprise raids on a downtown hotel and the Brown Derby, on the outskirts of the city. Manny Feder, alleged operator of the gambling houses, lower RIGHT was arrested when he walked into a trap at his luxurious hotel suite. Police were forced to batter down electrically controlled doors to gain admission to the Brown Derby. One of the officers is shown wielding a sledge hammer, RIGHT, on the doors. Police vans were called, lower LEFT, to transport the prisoners to the station house. Part of the equipment seized in the raids is shown, top LEFT.

Anti-Democratic Replace Smutty Films

TORONTO, June 17 (C.P.). — O. J. Silverthorne, chairman of the Ontario Board of Motion Picture Censors, in the annual rpeort today declared anti-democratic propaganda has replaced "smut and suggestiveness" as the board's most complicated program.

"Social, political and economic changes of world-wide significance rather than moral questions are presenting the greatest difficulty," Mr. Silverthorne reported.

The board during the year ending March 31 reviewed 2,476 films. They altered 478, rejected four, and are still considering two. He did not reveal the titles of the rejected pictures.

Mr. Silverthorne said 49.4 per cent. of the British pictures required amendment, but only 18.4 per cent. of the United States filmc were changed. Three rejected pictures were made in the United States, and one in Soviet Russia.

"In the light of these facts the only conclusion this board can arrive at is that the British producer appears to show less inclination to adapt himself to American customs, or he probably prefers to accept the Continental attitude in preparing his productions for presentation in the United States."

The report said the board had been more active in curtailing distribution of 16 MM. films. Most of these "bootlegged" films were obscene, the report noted.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BETHANY, June 17.—Pupils and their parents from four schools, Fallis, Franklin, Galloway's and Bethany, assembled in the Town Hall here on Monday for the annual presentation of the student music festival. The opening number, conducted by the music supervisor, Mrs. Rowe of Bowmanville, was a sacred chorus by the scholars of the four schools, followed by a piano solo by Vivian Rowlan of Bethany. Next came the demonstration rhythm by Fallis School and a folk dance by Franklin School pupils. Galloway's School delighted the audience with their "Slight Reading of Music" and piano solo, "Robin's Return," by Isobel Jackson, Bethany.

The program continued as follows: Song, girls' chorus by Bethany, "I Saw Three Ships"; handcraft woodwork demonstration by Franklin school; rhythm band from Blackstock and Cesarea, wise-cracks and music scores, were all work of those pupils; boys' chorus, four parts, by Bethany and Franklin; piano solo, "Falling Waters," by Norman Lowes, Bethany; choruses by Bethany and Franklin Schools, sacred, "Unto the Hills do I Lift My Longing Eyes" and "Now the Day is Over," followed by "Away For Rio" and "Some Folks Do."

A hearty vote of thanks was proposed by Miss Bailey to all who had so ably contributed and assisted in making this program a record success. It was next proposed by Fallis School, a tribute to Col. Synder, and singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

A very beautifully manufactured reed basket and art flowers, the work of Franklin School, was presented the supervisor, Mrs. Rowe, by the scholars, and the singing of the National Anthem brought a very enjoyable evening to a close.

Doing a Good Work

Farming is becoming a scientific business and that trend will continue. There are organizations among farmers today which are continually seeking to find out what is wrong with present methods and when they find a defect they look for the remedy. A good example of that kind of co-operative work was the field day held by the Central Ontario Ayrshire Breeders' Club at the farm of Clarence Mann in Smith township. Those who favor other dairy breeds are doing similar work.

It is also a fact that what one such organization finds out will be of material value to farmers in general regardless of the breed of cattle which they prefer. Dr. E. S. Archibald, director of Dominion Experimental Farms, told the Ayrshire men plainly that pasture land on the average farm in Ontario was not good enough today. We are certain there will be a number of farmers who will agree with that statement. We recall one farmer who was having such trouble trying to turn his cream into butter on his own premises that he decided it would be better for him to ship his cream to a dairy. That was at a time of year when his herd was on pasture, so the trouble undoubtedly was in the same common problem to which Dr. Archibald was referring. The pasture was not good enough because goodness had gone out of the land which was supporting the pasture.

The truth is that for a good many years few people paid much attention to pasture; their chief concern was that there might be sufficient early rain and warm weather so the stock could go out early and ease off on the barn feeding at a time when the mows and silos were running low. Pasture is the cheapest form of feed and it is also a form of feed to which little attention has been paid.

Fortunately we have made advances and today it is possible to tell with a fair degree of accuracy just what is lacking in the land. It takes just as good land to grow good pasture as it does to produce any other crop. So when any of these breeders' associations come together and study their particular type of animal and hear expert explanation of the need for strengthening their pasture lands they are on the road to something better. A meeting of that kind is actually performing a service to the whole province.

They Had To Drop It

London, Ont., Old Home Week executive has decided to eliminate what was to have been "International Day." It all started over the use of the swastika emblem of Nazi Germany, and there were people in London who didn't like that emblem because they didn't approve of what had been done under its auspices. They overlooked the fact that there was no other flag or emblem which a German-Canadian section could use.

There have been a good many meetings dealing with the incident, but nothing came of them. If the little peace dove fluttered about at any of the meetings then there was no place where it could perch or roost—or whatever it is such birds do.

The decision to eliminate the International Day was regarded as the only possible solution and London's experience in that matter may be profitable to other organizations or communities dealing with a similar problem. The reunion should not suffer in the least because people who will go to London will not be attending for the purpose of carrying flags and proclaiming the country from which they came. Rather will they be bent on a spell of visitation with folk whom they knew years ago and have not seen for some time.

Our Method Is Better

Many times it has been claimed that Russia has the right way of doing business; they run everything by the state there and that is said to be much better than our system. But now and then we read of events in that country which lead to the belief that something is wrong and cause us to suspect that the Russians have not yet got properly on to the hang of their own new way of carrying on business.

A report coming from Moscow says seven heads of the retail trade department of the state stores have been fired, and after more reading we learn that some of them have been arrested, which is not so good.

The trouble was that in the stores customers went and sought in vain for such things as men's socks and bread and much of the fruit being offered was not good. It was old stuff and stale.

They may have a great system in Russia but we have a better one here. One can always secure a pair of men's socks. As we walk through our retail district there are socks to the right of us and socks to the left of us of all sizes and all prices.

Nor do we have any trouble in buying a loaf of bread. One can secure a big loaf or a small loaf, a brown loaf or one with fruit in it, a long loaf, a sliced loaf or a whole loaf; a rye loaf, a wheat loaf or a soya bean loaf. What's more we can buy fresh fruit and if it does not look fresh then we don't take it.

No trouble at all in this land in buying socks, bread and fresh fruit, and that leads of course to the belief that the Russians with all their planning must have slipped up rather badly in their business of keeping stores.

A Chance To Help

On this page there is printed today an appeal from the Neighborhood Workers' Association, 22 Wellesley St., Toronto, and it deals with a situation which people in this district or in the city itself might be able to solve.

There are children in many Toronto homes who are not likely to have any vacation unless some place is provided for them, and it is desired to send as many as possible to the country. We learn that many of the little folk live in disricts where there is no room on the street for play, where traffic is heavy and where smoke from the factories is always present, and many of the homes where they live are on relief.

The directions for helping in this work are all given in the article referred to. In sending word of willingness to help it is necessary to enclose a letter from a local clergyman or some responsible person in the community. It can be readily understood why it is necessary to take such precautions. When people are thinking in terms of summer and holidays it is well to consider these little folk who have to depend on others for their outing. From a crowded city to the open country would be a great change for them.

Serve No Good Purpose

At the annual Toronto Police field day on July 16 there will be a young lady selected who will afterward be known as Miss Toronto. Then Miss Toronto will be shipped off to Atlantic City some time in August to compete with other girls there. We learn that the girl who wins in Toronto this year will have to be something more than merely pretty. She will have to be possessed of that strange quality known as Personality. If she is as pretty as can be but has no personality then her chances are slim.

Contests of that kind have been going on for a long time, and we have not yet been able to find any particular reason why they should be continued. They have proved nothing at all; they have established no great point and we doubt very much if they have made any person happier. Certainly they have humbled a great many vain girls who have entered who would have been much better advised had they remained at home.

Beauty whether in a bathing suit or a full-blown gown is not the last standard by which girls should be judged. When a young man is looking for one he might better do part of his judging by her exhibit of baking powder biscuits and the way in which she can tidy up the house.

The Cure Seems Plain

The Home Owners' Security Act and the Securities Tax Act, both of them passed and placed in operation by the Aberhart government in Alberta, have been disallowed by the Federal Government at Ottawa on the advice of the Department of Justice.

Of the two the Securities Tax Act was the more dangerous because it reached out so far and was planned to bring such great financial returns to the government of Alberta without giving anything in return. It provided that holders of mortgages against property in Alberta had to contribute two per cent. of the amount of the mortgage to the government, and do so before the first day of June. If the return were not made by that time there was a penalty of $10 per day. There was no time limit on the duration of that penalty and if it were allowed to run long enough it would eventually wipe out a good many mortgages.

A good many people in Ontario would say "Well, that does not make any difference to me, as I hold no mortgage against any property in Alberta." But if such an individual possessed an insurance policy then he would be interested. His insurance company has to invest the money he pays in as premiums and part of that money might well be in Alberta mortgages or Alberta provincial government bonds. A good many people who carry life insurance have always made use of the dividends as they come to cut down the size of the premium payments; often enough they have found it necessary to do this. If the man's insurance company had to pay 2 per cent each year on all the mortgages it held in Alberta regardless of whether there was any revenue coming from them, and if his insurance company had to pay a forfeit of $10 per day on each mortgage on which it had not made a contribution to the Alberta government, the holder of the life insurance policy might soon find his company had discontinued allowing him any dividends on his policy, and that would mean just one thing—that the policy itself would cost him a greater cash outlay and it might not be as sound as it had been before. In that way the move of the Aberhart government reached out and made an open threat to holders of insurance policies all over the country, and the Department of Justice at Ottawa has done a good day's work for honest dealing and fair justice to many people in saying this law must not be allowed to operate.

The tendency of the Alberta government to pass such strange laws is sound basis on which to launch an appeal for the strengthening of our Federal government, giving to it greater powers to make laws which are uniform throughout the entire Dominion and taking from the provincial governments powers to pass such strange and dangerous legislation.

We can see no other way to deal with the situation. It makes no difference which way one looks at the situation, the conclusion is the same. For the sake of argument we will submit that a law passed in Alberta by which people of that province are enabled to rid themselves of debt might be a good thing for the people of that province. But it would also be a good thing for the people of other provinces, and if it were a good thing then it should become nation-wide. By the same reasoning if it were a bad thing for the people of Alberta then it would be bad for the rest of the people and should be prohibited on a nation-wide scale.

No doubt it will be argued and urged from Alberta that the Dominion government is seeking to head off the western government in its plans to work out its own financial problem, but the truth is that the Dominion government is merely seeking to keep the Aberhart government from forcibly collecting money from people all over the Dominion who receive no service whatever from the government of Alberta for which they should pay. We are quite certain the permanent cure for this sort of business is by giving greater and wider powers to the central government at Ottawa.

NOTE AND COMMENT

One thing is clear that if these probes continue some of the hide is likely to be taken off the Hydro.

Alberta is getting ready to set up its own banks. But then, of course, you are not forced to put your money into them.

Probably the report of the penitentiary probe was held back to make sure that nothing that could be said against General Ormond had been overlooked.

T. Stewart Lyon, former Hydro chief, says it's time someone let the daylight in. He cannot have heard that Peterborough has been on summer time all week.

It costs Toronto four times as much for the upkeep of sidewalks as it did in 1918. That is peculiar in view of the fact there is not nearly so much walking nowadays.

A correspondent to a contemporary uses some space to prove that twitch grass is a blessing and now we suppose a champion of ragweed will next take the stage.

According to a story from Moscow an anti-Soviet group of 49 has been "liquidated". That is a more effective and a more permanent way than Quebec's famous padlock law.

Perhaps it is the discovery that George S. Henry has been paying all the expenses of an East York church that has caused Mr. Hepburn to take a flying leap at the United Church.

Uncle Sam is paying a man $513—for 243 turkey eggs destroyed by a WPA blast on the ground that the eggs might have developed into fine turkeys. It is fortunate that eggs generally are not sold on that basis.

Mr. Bennett says that the Minister of Labor's idea of an ideal relief camp seems to be the Vancouver postoffice and we fancy the newspaper verdict will be the leader of the Opposition won that round.

Oshawa has decided to allow beverage rooms to remain open an hour later in order to compete with the bootleggers. But wasn't it the argument when sale of beer-by-the-glass was brought back that such action meant the end of bootleggers.

NO ROBBERS

(By A. R. K.)

¶ I asked my friend from Thistleville, the simple place upon the hill, if they had trouble there; if there were robbers in the place, whom armed police might have to chase, disturb the midnight air.

¶ In Thistleville, so I am told, the man who guards the law is old, nor has he much to do; he cuts the weeds along the street, and keeps the village hall swept neat, his hours are short and few.

¶ When people go to bed at night, they know for certain things are right, nor do they bother more; if it is rather close out there, and they desire a little air, they open up the door.

¶ No person has much jewellery there, or things for which the robbers care, so there's no cause to fret; no burglars ever visit them, or try a hold-up on their men, there's nothing much to get.

¶ They never have a court case there, where witnesses they have to swear, no burglar's ever found; most people have a house and lot, and that's about all they have got, there's not much cash around.

¶ So robbers don't ascend the hill, that leads them on toward Thistleville, 'twould be a bad mistake; my friend says if the robbers came, he's sure they'd have their work in vain—there's nothing they would take.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

Mr. DUNNING: It certainly was not my right hon. friend or the Minister of Labour.

Mr. BENNETT: And the answer he gave as his defence, according to the press—and I have verified it as well—was this: He said that if he could secure a job he would take care of his family, but he did not have sufficient funds to provide Moocrs—who was at one time the president of the Liberal association in Kingston, and who is superintendent of the employment agency, the man we were speaking of yesterday—with a beer account at the Prince George Hotel. He said if he could get sufficient funds to provide Moocrs with a beer account he would be all right, but as he could not do so he could not get work. That is a matter of public record; and what is more—

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

Mr. BENNETT: Oh, yes, it was in the newspaper, he appeared before the police magistrate, who adjourned the case advising the man that he would investigate the matter and bring him up again after he had done so. The case stil stands adjourned.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

An hon. MEMBER: Free beer.

Mr. BENNETT: You see, Mr. Chairman; this indicates how little people do care. One of the ministers of the crown says, "Free beer."

Mr. DUNNING: Which one? Who said that?

Mr. BENNETT: I heard it just now; one of the four ministers there.

Mr. DUNNING: I did not hear it, and the ministers sit closer to me than to my right ron. friend.

Mr. BENNETT: I heard the words "free beer."

Mr. DUNNING: No minister said any such thing.

Mr. BENNETT: I say they did; that is the difference.

Mr. DUNNING: My right hon. friend must retract that.

Mr. BENNETT: No, I say they did and the minister says they did not.

Mr. MACKENZIE (Vancouver): I did not say it.

Mr. ILSLEY: I did not say it.

Mr. ROGERS: I did not say it.

Mr. DUNNING: Be a man; retract it.

Mr. KINLEY: When a member asked me what the beer account meant, I said "free beer." I suppose that is what the right hon. gentleman heard.

Mr. BENNETT: The hon. gentleman accepts the position of a vicarious sacrifice for others.

Mr. KINLEY: I said it.

Mr. FRASER: If you had used the phrase "Barnum was right"—

Mr. BENNETT: Now, Mr. Chairman, perhaps you would exercise your powers and direct attention to the fact that the observation just made by the hon. member for Northumberland is unparliamentary.

Mr. DUNNING: What is unparliamentary about it?

Mr. BENNETT: I just raise the question and leave it to the chairman.

The CHAIRMAN: The word "Barnum" is not on the list—

Mr. DUNNING: He was a great man.

The CHAIRMAN: —of unparliamentary words, and in my judgment I cannot rule it as such.

Mr. BENNETT: Very good Mr. Chairman. I am glad you have so ruled, because it gives me a chance to say what I wanted to say but did not for fear of being called to order. I desire to say that Barnum did say, "You can fool some of the people all of the time and all of the people some of the time—"

Mr. DUNNING. No.

Mr. BENNETT: At least that is attributed to him, but it may be that the Minister of Finance has a closer association with Barnum than I. .

Mr. Dunning: But I can read; that was Lincoln.

Mr. BENNETT: It must be a matter of profound satisfaction, Mr. Chairman—

Mr. DUNNING: Mixing Barnum with Lincoln is terrible.

Mr. BENNETT: As a matter of fact Lincoln did not say it; it was Barnum.

THE VOTE OF THANKS.

(Chatham News)

THE VOTE OF thanks is an institution so ancient that it has outgrown its usefulness and becomes a veritable barnacle on public functions.

It should be relegated to the discard.

It might have been allowed to die some years ago when the public held it in some sort of sufferance, if not in respect. At present its appearance is the signal for inward groans. It means nothing and serves no other purpose than to act as a safety valve for the surplus talk-machines of the mover and seconder. The audience invariably respond with hearty applause. Why not? After the tedious nothings of the moving vaporer and seconding reiterator, applause comes as a relief ,and is a fit expression of the secret joy that is felt when the outworn formality is over and done.

If votes of thanks meant anything at all, there might be some excuse for them. Of course, it is always the case that the mover explains wherein this particular vote is different from the ordinary and insincere variety; and the sentiment is duly echoed and elaborated by his partner in the perpetration of it. This artifice might gain some credence if used but once. Occurring again and again with painful regularity, its hollowness dawns even upon the dullest, and no weight is given to the pretension that here at least is the genuine and only specimen of the real and heartfelt vote of thanks.

• These Children Need Holidays

LOCATING hundreds of homes within 150 miles of Toronto where less-fortunate city children would be welcome for a two-week summer vacation is the difficult task this week commenced by the Neighborhood Workers Association of Toronto.

Last year over 1,100 children were provided with a holiday through this method, and according to F. N. Stapleford, General-Secretary of the N. W. A., the need this year will be more urgent than ever. "Many youngsters are still pale and wan from the effects of last-years polio epidemic. There are scores of them who, although completely recovered from the disease itself, require many days in the sunshine and quiet of the country. For this group of children we make a particularly urgent appeal." Mr. Stapleford said.

Evidence that the children are well-behaved and do not tear up gardens; fight with other children; let out the cows; or frighten the sheep, is shown by the number of repeat invitations that come from country hostesses. Many families write each year asking that the same children be sent to them. Seventy-five such invitations have already been received by the country home department of the N. W. A.

Growing much more rapidly than the invitation list, however, is the long list of cases where visiting N. W. A. workers report, "It is absolutely necessary that Johnnie or Mary get away for a vacation this summer." Cases reported to headquarters include such facts as:—

"Mary is a sweet little girl of 13 with blue eyes and fair hair. She is run down and urgently in need of a holiday. She lives in a district where the noise of the traffic and the smoke of the factories gives her no chance to rest. Her parents are on relief."

Authorities of the Country Home Department prefer children to go on holiday in pairs if possible. Each child is medically examined before leaving the city and transportation is provided by the Neighborhood Workers Association.

The real holiday period, of course, commences with school closing—but there are several groups of pre- school children who are waiting to leave town at this moment.

Hostesses writing to the Neighborhood Workers Association inviting a child or two for two weeks vacation are requested to include with their invitation a letter from the local clergyman or some well-known person of the community.

Invitations should be sent to the Country Homes Department , Neighborhood Workers Association, 22 Wellesley Street, Toronto.

• Editors as Deep Sea Sailors

(Ottawa Journal)

WE LIKE THE frank admission of Rev. Mr. Craig, the minister of St. James' United Church in Ottawa, that "some ministers are square pegs in round holes," that the ministry is "cluttered up with men in the wrong job," with unsuccessful preachers who might make good fishermen or farmers or carpenters.

But this is equally true of all professions and occupations. There are lawyers who should have been preachers and preachers who should have been editors. There are journalists who would have been happier and more successful as soldiers or deep-sea sailors. There are farmers who should have been accountants, and carpenters who should have been lawyers and fishermen who might have made great poets, salesmen who should have been physicians and physicians who should be merchants. There are innumerable square pegs in round holes.

And a remedy for the situation is not readily to be found. Seized by what he discovers later was a fleeting enthusiasm, a lad decides he has a mission to preach. Perhaps he discovers his error when he has spent a year or two and some hundreds of dollars at university, but he thinks it is too late to change his mind. He goes through with his plans, and whatever degree of success he may achieve he feels that he made a mistake. He can drift as easily into the wrong trade, and it is just about as difficult for him to retrace his steps when he finds himself a plumber instead of a sailor.

However there is this consolation: that if the preacher who regrets he isn't a lawyer had been a lawyer he might be mourning now that Providence hadn't guided him to the pulpit.

• John Wesley's Way to Cure Sickness

(From the Manchester Guardian)

AMONG JHON WESLEY'S numerous works the most curious is his "Primitive Physic", published in 1747 as "a plain and easy way of curing diseases." "Primitive" was undoubtedly the operative word, and not even his most ardent admirers wolud today care to try some of the recommended remedies.

"The Asthma: Live a fortnight on boiled Carrots only. It seldom fails", was one piece of advice. To prevent nose-bleeding, drinking "whey largely every morning" is recommended, but "in a violent case go into a pond or river. Tried." For whooping-cough the alternative to rubbing hog's lard on the feet before the fire is rubbing the back "at lying down with old Rum. It seldom fails."

Half a pint of tar water, morning and evening, does not sound an attractive cure for cramp. Much more romantic is the juice of marigolds; rubbed on warts "it will hardly fail."

Wesley's remedies are sometimes strongly alcoholic. He records the case of "a middle-aged man in the West of England (who) drank every day five or six quarts of cyder; and without any other medicine, was totally cured in a few weeks time of a dropsy long supposed to be incurable."

For consumption Wesley had fifteen prescriptions, including "every morning cut up a little turf of fresh earth, and lying down, breathe into the hole for a quarter of an hour . . . Or, drink thrice a day, two spoonsful of juice of Water-Cresses. This has cured a deep consumption."

For raging madness: "Set the patient with his head under a great waterfall. . . . Or, let him eat nothing but apples for a month. Or nothing but bread and milk. Tried."

To The Editor

CHALLENGE IN IT

Editor Examiner:

Sir: Apropos of the suggestion I made at the recent meeting of the Children's Aid Board meeting, re the provision of religious training for children of those on relief, an interesting story may be told.

In one of our cities, a Presbyterian elder, a man of humble faith who shunned publicity, conceived the idea of carrying out a noble work. Realising that there were many children of folks compelled by economic misfortunes to go on relief, who for lack of clothing could not attend Sunday School, he started out to interest members of the church to see that such clothing was provided. At the same time he discovered that the large majority of such children had no connection with any church. What to do in such case was the problem. So he went to the city fathers, and arranged for a city-owned room to be used in which he gathered the children together and carried on the work of religious instruction himself. His only thought was to fill a spiritual need, and his work won the commendation of the populace.

It was with this in mind that I ventured to make the suggestion I did. After all there is a challenge here to some fine Christian soul looking for a specific bit of real Christian service. Thanking you for your space,

Yours truly,
A. T. BARR.

TWO NOVA SCOTIAN churches are at present celebrating anniversaries which emprasize the venerable age which these churches have attained and the long service which they have given in their respective communities.

The United Baptist Church at Berwick is holding services and observances to mark its one hundred and tenth anniversary.

In Lunenburg, an even older, church is celebrating an anniversary. St. John's Anglican Church was founded 185 years ago when the Rev. Jean Baptiste Moreau, the first rector of the church, came to Lunenburg and conducted divine services in the church parade.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

AFTER THESE things Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias. . . .

When Jesus then lifted up his eyes, and saw a great company come unto him, he saith unto Philip, Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat? . . .

Philip answered him, Two hundred pennyworth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little.

One of his disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, said unto him, There is a lad here which hath five barley loaves, and two small fishes: but what are they among so many?

And Jesus said, Make the men sit down. Now there was much grass in the place. So the men sat down, in number about five thousand.

And Jesus took the loaves; and when he had given thanks, he distributed to the disciples, and the disciples to them that were sat down; and likewise of the fishes as much as they would. When they were filled, he said unto his disciples, Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost. . . .

Then those men, when they had seen the miracle that Jesus did said, This is of a truth that prophet that should come into the world.— John vi: 1, 5, 7-12, 14.

GOOD STORY SPOILED.

(Brandon Sun)

SOME paragrapher started on its rounds an item saying it cost Canadian banks $25,000 a year to keep up the ink supplies filched by persons filling their fountain pens. Most people with workable fountain pens doubt if public ink such as banks or post offices use would tempt them to purloin that liquid. Beyond this altogether $25,000 would probably buy 75,000 gallons of ink. Of Canada's 10,000,000 people, probably less than 2,00,00 own fountain pens. Of this probably less than 1,-00,000 ever find their way into a bank. Of these, five per cent would be a generous estimate of those filching bank ink. Fifty thousand people using 75,000 gallons of ink, figures 1½ gallons of ink per filcher—a lot of black ink these days.

1282 FEET COVERED.

(Canadian Press)

TOURISTS like to stop at Hartland, N. B., and look at the covered bridge spanning the St. John river. It's the longest covered bridge in the world.

The structure stretches 1,282 feet. Its nearest rival, in Norway is 200 feet shorter. The Government pays a man $100 to $150 every Winter to put snow on it so sleighs can get across.

The bridge also has gained fame because it presents an optical illusion. When a motorist drives across it at 23 miles an hour, small cracks between the board sides of the span appear to run together, permitting a perfect and apparently unobstructed view of the river, as if the bridge had no sides.

Central School Picnic Is Decided Success

The annual picnic of Central School was held Thursday afternoon in Victoria Park. Ideal weather prevailed, and children and parents spent a happy afternoon at one of the most successful picnics which has taken place. Many mothers attended. A series of keenly-contested sports were held under the supervision of the teachers. The senior pupils ran off the races in the school playground, while the juniors held theirs in the Victoria Park. After the sports program the teachers gathered the various classes, and, with the assistance of a mother for each class, handed out a delicious picnic lunch, catered for by the ladies of the Home and School Association, and consisting of cake, sandwiches and lemonade. The mothers too enjoyed a service of refreshments.

A booth at which ice cream and soft drinks were sold was well patronized during the afternoon. Each child in the school was given a free ticket with which he or she could get a cone or drink. Prizes for the races were in the form of free tickets for ice cream. The president, Mrs. J. H. Quirt, was general convenor, and Mrs. Honour and Mrs. Payne, refreshment convenors, who with their willing band of assistants, are all to be congratulated on the success of the picnic.

Young Priest Is Ordained At Maynooth

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BANCROFT, June 17.—On Saturday morning, June 11th, Reverend Gerald Buckley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Buckley was elevated to the holy priesthood in his home parish.

With the grand ceremonial of the Catholic Church His Excellency The Most Reverend Charles Leo Nelligan, D.D., Bishop of Pembroke diocese, conferred upon the Levite the powers of the priesthood, clothed in white vestments and prostrated before the altar the young man renounced the world.

Present in the sanctuary were seventeen priests representing parishes in the length and breadth of the diocese. Reverend T. J. Brady of Maynooth presided at the organ.

Reverend Father Buckley of Kingston diocese, cousin of the young priest assisted him throughout the ceremony. Immediately after the ordination a touching scene took place when the young priest's parents approached the altar rail and received the first blessing from their son's annointed hands. Reverend Father Buckley is the third young man of Maynooth parish to be ordained there in a period of less than three years.

On June 29th, 1935, Reverend Stanislaus Flynn entered the priesthood to be followed by his younger brother, Reverend Adrian Flynn, who was ordained on Dec. 18th, 1937.

A very large crowd of interested and prayerful people attended the ceremony following which all present were invited to an excellent dinner given by the ladies of the parish and served in the parish hall which was beautifully decorated for the occasion with paper streamers and flowers. Yellow and white being the color scheme.

On Sunday morning, June 12th, the newly ordained priest offered his his first solemn mass, he was assisted by Reverend Stanislaus Flynn of Combermere, Reverend Adrian Flynn of Whitney and Reverend Father Buckley of Kingston diocese, with Reverend T. J. Brady acting as organist and choir leader.

Reverend Adrian Flynn delivered the sermon, he and Father Buckley having spent all their school days together from public school in Maynooth to St. Augustine's Seminary, Toronto, where, several years of prayer and arduous study fitted them for the realization of their lives in the service of Almighty God.

After the celebration of the mass an address was read by Mr. Patrick Fitzgerald, and on behalf of the parish, Mr. M. J. Flynn presented Reverend Father Buckley with a beautiful golden chalice as a souvenir.

In his reply Reverend Father Buckley expressed his happiness and gratitude to his bishop, his pastor, his parents, and all who had helped him in any way. He then gave his blessing to about three hundred and seventy-five people who presented themselves at the altar railing.

Relatives and friends were present from Rochester, N.Y., Toronto, Belleville, Read, Whitney, Bancroft and several other places.

52 Apply For Lindsay Post

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, June 17.—Fifty-two applications have been received by the Lindsay Board of Education for the position of principal of the Collegiate Institute, a position made available through the resignation of William MacMillan, who leaves to take an inspectorate at Sudbury. The board considered the applications Wednesday night, and it is expected they will make their final decision on Saturday afternoon.

A young couple, giving their names as Olive and Melville Marling, Toronto, and claiming to be brother and sister, were arrested at the hobo "jungle" in Lindsay by Constable Simmett. Following questioning at the police station they were booked on vagrancy charges. "I don't believe they are brother and sister, because when I questioned them separately their stories didn't agree," Chief of Police R. H. Lawler informed The Examiner. They stated they had spent the previous night in a barn.

The closing of the drinking fountains in the schools of Lindsay during the period Lindsay's water is under suspicion has resulted in the school children bringing jars of lemonade and similar drinks to school with them.

Bookies Favor Champion With 11-5 Odds

NEW YORK, June 17.—(AP)—Jack Blackburn, having tried for a solid month to make a rip-tearing infighter out of Champion Joe Louis, and with some success, has taken off the pressure now and has told Joe to go ahead and make his own kind of fight against Max Schmeling next Wednesday.

At yesterday's workout at Pompton Lakes, the negro trainer told Joe: "All right, Chappie, I've taught you all I know how. From now on you just fight the best you know how, and that'll be good enough."

That is as much as anybody knows about the sort of battle the big amber-colored boy will wage against the cool veteran who knocked him out two Junes ago.

Joe, himself, still says stoutly that he is going to wade into "Smellin' " from the first bell and knock him kicking, no matter how many times he gets cracked by the German's right hand in the process.

The so-called experts who have been gazing at the negro for weeks are, if anything, more mystified than usual. After the champion's workouts it is interesting to watch 20 or 30 of them get together and try to interview each other. Yesterday a group of them got old Johnny Dundee cornered and nearly questioned his cauliflower ears off until he finally confessed that he thought Louis had a good left.

Louis To Hold Back?

The reason everybody is trying to figure out Louis' plan of battle is some of the experts think it could make a big difference in the outcome. There are those who are certain that Schmeling will knock the champ flatter than neglected beer if Joe tries to force the pace. They say the bookmakers would not be laying 11-to-5 odds on Louis if they thought Joe intended to do anything as foolish as that.

The closing days of training are at hand as the advance sale soars toward the $600,000 mark. Louis will conclude his heavy work tomorrow and Sunday, while Schmeling will continue to box through Monday. Tuesday there is to be a special meeting of the Athletic Commission to smooth out the details.

Schmeling finds resting as hard as working at his training camp at Speculator, N.Y.

The German challenger didn't do any real work yesterday; except a 10-mile jaunt over the roads, but three broadcasts, one to the United States, one to England and one to Germany kept him busy all day.

Run Over a Carp

BELLEVILLE, Ont., June 17—(CP)—Harry Semark and members of the crew of the Anne C are telling the season's best fish story. They say they almost caught a record-sized carp. The fish was near the surface of the water when their boat hit it. The carp was dazed and floundered around just out of reach of the hands of the crew.

How He Did It

SPORT SPICE

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, June 17 (AP).—Mike Jacobs doesn't have to sell another ticket to be in the clear on Schmeling and Louis...That doesn't mean he has a sell-out yet, but the fight isn't going to lay an egg...You'd be surprised at the lack of Schmeling money with so many of the top flights experts out on the limb for the German...Odds are 7, 8 and 9 to five depending on where you bet ...That 11 to 5 flurry of Wednesday didn't last.

How about Mr. Scotty Reston, who handles sports in London for the Ap!...All he did was lick two American Walker Cup players on the same day...He took Johnny Fischer, by one hole, drank a beer and polished off Marvin Ward, 3 and 2.

At Speculator the other night, Max Schmeling sat down after dinner and autographed 165 photos which will be included in a souvenir book Moe Annenberg, publisher of the Philadelphia Inquirer, will give away at a party after the fight.... Reliable reports from up that way say a sizeable percentage of the citizens in Yorkville (New York's German section) are pulling for Louis....They are piqued with Schmeling.

By the time the Red Sox got through paying their minor league obligations, player investments and all, the club dropped $160,000 last season...But Owner Tom Yawkey wears the same old grin...Bitterest feud in the majors right now is going on between Joe McCarthy and Jimmy Dykes...Last winter Dykes popped off: "When the Yanks sold him (Tony Lazzeri) they sold their brains"...And in a recent series after the Sox had trimmed the world champs three straight, McCarthy bawled: "For blankety, blank sakes, are you going to let that bunch of semi-pros take you?"...The Sox now are berlin (Brooklynese for boiling) ....Incidentally, since McCarthy threatened them with morning practice, the New Yorkers have won six straight.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

FOR THE FIRST time, we think, since Ashburnham took in the town of Peterborough to make this a city, there will be an organized midget lacrosse match here. That is tonight at eight, an hour before the O. L. A. senior "B" fixture between the Inglewood-Caledon Combines and the Petes. The twin bill will be offered fans at the usual stipend in the local lacrosse arena. Provided it doesn't come a cloudburst. Or maybe even if it does, as gutted-stick players reck not of weather, wounds or woe. Such is the nature of these athletes. Kinsmen and Kiwanis of the City Lacrosse League (midget teams) open their schedule this p.m., and then comes the senior classic. It sounds like a tasty dish to set before the cash customers, and ought to pack 'em in like an auction sale.

• • • • • • •

DUNNO HOW the kids will look but they've been doing okay in practise and should show some fair lacrosse. Mighty good training for future greats of the game. And the combines and Petes will turn in a torrid tussle, without the slighest doubt. That 15-14 win for the Petes in their last clash is a good indication. It'll be just a tossup in a rugged, exciting scrap between two first-class teams of equal strength. The locals will have to be hotter than a fat man wearing heavy underwear in July to cop a nod over the 1937 champs. It'll be well worth taking a sashay down to the arena and seeing, ya betcha.

• • • • • • •

AND OVER in Riverside Park at 3.30 tomorrow aft, an exhibition senior ball game is listed between Toronto Webbers of the Western City Loop and the Petes of the C. O. B. L. To give the locals the practise, the fans a good game, and everyone a chance to note what difference if any there is in the class of ball in these leagues. Likely Lefty Lesurf will get a chance to throw against his old home town, whilst we hear three or four of the local flingers will see action. Jakafby, Whitehill and McNally, with maybe Kitchen too. Manager Cozzi, who catches, promises to have his full team of the Webbers on deck; and Manager Eddie Murphy, who plays second, will trot out most — if not all — of the Petes.

• • • • • • •

THE PETES are on top of their league now and really hustling. It is a mighty fine club when it's clicking — and fans should support it. Some of the good players are on the bench, but that can't be helped in baseball. It is not a strenuous sport like rugby, lacrosse or hockey, where the subs all get into the game. In baseball, the utility guy has to park on the bench till one of the regulars is injured or hits a slump and then he gets his chance. A winning team can't be broken up, despite the fact there are players on the bench just as good as some in the regular lineup. But it's better to be on the club and ready to crash into the lineup, we figure, than not connected with it at all. We'd sooner sit on the bench and travel with the team than pay our way in to see our buddies play. Kearns, Kingdom, Hollingsworth and Mowry are good ball players and will be in there yet if any regular hits a slump. Jakafby will be Pitching his first game of this year tomorrow. Look at fine hitters like Miller and Mathews sitting on the Oshawa bench. Yep, that's the way it goes in baseball. Tomorrow's tussle ought to draw well, and it should be a neat contest.

BILL WALSHE of Kingston wrote of Tuesday's joust: "Peterborough should credit its scout with an assist for its position on the top of the C. O. B. L. triangle as he certainly sent a first-class twirler there when he recommended Frank McNally. The husky Petes' southpaw, from somewhere south, handcuffed the Kingston batters and set an example for his own team by getting a pair of run-scoring hits. McNally helped his mates humiliate two Kingston twirlers and only in two innings was he in any trouble, though the Ponies were close all the time and a few opportune hits might have made it different. Though defeated, the game had its pleasing points for Kingston. It attracted the largest crowd of the season and provided another splendid display of senior ball. The fans could not want much better ball." Nope, we may be outlawed yet by the O. B. A., but fans are getting swell ball games.

NO ONE ELSE but old Knotty Lee was the "scout" for the Petes in the case of McNally. The ex-skipper of the locals knew we wanted a good southpaw and Ogdensburg had enough for the season, so he recommended this quite promising young pitcher to the Petes — probably figuring to keep his eye on McNally's record for the season and putting him into pro ball in a year or two Knotty hasn't any contract with McNally but has asked for first chance with the lefthander if he gets any professional offer. Frank is a well-built young guy with speed to burn, a sharp bender and fine control. His only kick in this circuit is that there aren't enough games to keep a twirler in there throwing. He used to play the outfield when not pitching, being rated a right good hitter. And his early-season mark of .429 to lead the Petes by a big margin shows he is no sucker at the plate.

ALL SAINTS won a couple of Church Softball League games yester gloaming, their bantams winding up the schedule on top with a 19-18 nod over St. John's at Prince of Wales school; and the seniors surprising Mark St. and themselves with a 12-10 smirk over the East City up-and-downers at King Edward. Games tonight, Murray St. vs. Knox at the Oval, umps from Majors and Buzzers of George St.; and the George St. Bantams vs. Knox at King Edward school. Executive meets tonight after these tussles to make arrangements for playoffs. Meeting will be around 8.30 in the "Y".

BORROWING a few players like Frank Shine and Pat Calladine, Herb Payne's Little Harlemites of the Southend Loop gave Westclox a close softball exhibition last eve at the Bowl ere Pat Hayden's bunch won out 6-3. Shine twirled fair ball and the Rocket manufactured a four-cushion clout to chase two in ahead of him, Bill Calladine, who has a softball commuters' ticket between Little Harlem and Westclox, also played heads-up ball. Lorne Batemen pitched a neat effort for the winnahs, getting some good hitting aid from Ellis, Curry and Carlson — and defensive help from Gainey and O'Leary. Motorists beat Omemee, 19-9, the other eve on the O's field. And Omemee and Motorists have a return clash at the Bowl tomorrow eve at seven.

Lacrosse Bill On Here Tonight

Lacrosse fans tonight (Friday) here will see two games for the one admission price, a City Loop midget opener at eight o'clock, and an O.L.A. Senior "B" fixture at nine. Kinsmen and Kiwanis are the midget teams and the Inglewood-Caledon Combines tangle with the Petes in the big game. A huge crowd of gutted-stick sports followers are expected to turn out tonight, if the weather is right, as this senior squabble should be a humdinger. These teams tangled away on Tuesday and the Petes jerked out a 15-14 win in the final few seconds of play. The locals look for a mighty tough battle tonight if they are to hold their own with the 1937 Ontario intermediate champions.

Local lineup is not certain, but Mayette will likely be in goal again, following his fine performance at Inglewood. Defencemen include Miller, J. Creighton, Chute and Dundas or Westonfelt. Among the likely forwards to be used are: Worthy, Whitton, King, Dallin, Crowe, Magee, E. Creighton and Reid. The latter was with Orillia's junior Dominion champs last year and he looks good. The Combines have a husky, classy crew, who play plenty of rugged but effective lacrosse. It will be a battle of nifty teams tonight.

False Teeth In Cod

BOSTON, June 16. — (AP).—Boasting a new high in Fisherman's luck William Mayo, crew member of the New Bedford dragger, Venture II, said to-day he had lost the upper plate of his false teeth overboard on the fishing banks, only to recover them two days later in a fish.

Mayo said that while on the south channel fishing banks he sneezed so violently the plate flew into the water. Two days later, cleaners working on a dragnet haul, found a 10-pound codfish with false teeth —inside. They were Mayo's.

Veteran Golfers In Ladies' Final

TORONTO, June 17.—(CP).— A new champion will be crowned in the Ontario women's golf tourney here to-day when Mrs. E. H. Gooderham and Mrs. F. J. Mulqueen, both veteran campaigners, meet in the final at St. Andrew's course.

Mrs. Gooderham ousted the tournament sensation, 15 year old Jane Fisher, in her semi-final round yesterday. But she had to play par golf to eliminate the youngster 5 and 4.

Ada Mackenzie, a former champion, went down before Mrs. Mulqueen's fine shotmaking 4 and 3. Last year's titlist, Mrs. C. H. Suttleworth, also went down before Mrs. Mulqueen in a Wednesday match.

Guldahl Repeats In the Western

ST. LOUIS, June 17—(AP)—Ralph Guldahl did it again. And he bears the title of the greatest man in golf today after another of his blistering stretch finishes in the Western Open golf championship yesterday.

The burly Texan drew to two pair —successive United States open and western victories—and came up with his third straight western conquest for a full house.

Birdie and eagle feathers fairly flew along Ralph's final 18-hole trail as he boomed in with a six-under-par 65 for a four-round total of 279.

Bucs and Reds In Deadlock For 3rd Place

NEW YORK, June 17 (CP).—The way Bill Terry's Giants and Cholly Grimm's Cubs have been showing signs of hitting the skids, off and on, for no reason at all, things may yet start to pop in that two-hoss National League race.

The rude Reds from Cincinnati and Pie Traynor's rejuvenated Pittsburgh Pirates are virtually tied for third place today, just three games back of the Cubs, and only 4½ out of the top. The Giants have won only seven of their last 17 games, and the Cubs have taken two out of seven.

Take the Pirates. For years they've been famous for getting away from the barrier fast, then falling asleep. They've been famous, too, for being the perfect stooges for the Giants. Yet they've won 11 out of their last 16, the latest a 10-2 beating they pinned on the Giants yesterday. And even more amazing is the fact that they've whipped the New Yorkers five times in nine games, four times in the last five meetings. Last year, they won only four from the Giants altogether.

Then, there are the Reds. Johnny Vander Meer is pitching no-hitters all over the place, Paul Derringer is coming back, and Buck McCormick and Schnozzola Lombardi are finding a "cousin" in just about every pitcher in the league.

The Pirates' rookie, Bob Klinger, skyrocketed into the league pitching lead by handcuffing the Giants with five hits yesterday for his third victory in a row, and his fifth against one setback for the year. It was the second straight loss for King Carl Hubbell.

While that defeat shaved the Giants' National League lead to 1½ games, the American League race remained a neck-and-neck struggle between the Yankees and Cleveland Indians. The Tribe continued half-a-game in front by whipping Washington 4-1, on Bobby Feller's eight-hit elbowing. Monte Pearson and Bump Hadley combined in a one-hit performance as the Yanks trampled Chicago White Sox.

Tommy Bridges pitched a six-hitter and fanned eight to pace the Detroit Tigers to a 12-3 win over the Athletics. The Red Sox finished strong and walloped St. Louis Browns 12-8.

Claude Passeau's six-hit pitching gave the Phillies a 3-2 margin over St. Louis Cardinals.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Bob Klinger, Pirates—Handcuffed Giants with five hits for 10-2 win.

Tommy Bridges, Tigers—Fanned eight in pitching six-hitter, and drove in three runs himself in beating Athletics 12-3.

Claude Passeau, Phillies — Trounced Cardinals 3-2 with six hits.

Bump Hadley, Yankees—Pitched hitless ball in 5 2-3-inning relief trick for 5-1 decision over White Sox.

Joe Cronin, Red Sox—Hit two doubles and two singles and drove in four runs in 12-8 win over Browns.

Start Home Game

JOE JAKAFBY

Big righthander for the Petes who is expected to start on the home mound Saturday at 3.30 when the locals tangle with Toronto Webbers here in an exhibition senior ball game.

Petes Will Play Toronto Webbers

O.B.B.L. standing to date:

Team	P	W	L
Petes	5	3	2
Kingston	4	2	2
Oshawa	3	1	2

The Petes swing into action again tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon at 2.30 oclock in Riverside Park, but this time it will be an exhibition game before the home fans. Toronto Webbers of the Western City League, a strong senior circuit, will be on deck for this fray. It should draw a big crowd of fans.

Manager Eddie Murphy of the Petes is expected to use three or four of his twirlers, and possibly switch his lineup around somewhat. Joe Jakafby will likely start on the home slab with Whitehill, Kitchen and Lefty McNally all seeing action. Lefty Lesurf will probably pitch for the Toronto team, and it shapes up as a fine ball game. The locals are playing winning ball these days and deserve plenty of fans support at home.

Toronto Breaks Losing Streak With 11-5 Win

TORONTO, June 17. (CP).—There seems to be no stopping those Newark Bears in their drive toward another International league pennant, but the fight for the three other places in the post-season playoffs is turning out to be a battle royal.

While the Bears hung up their seventh straight triumph and stretched their league lead over Buffalo Bisons to eight games by defeating Rochester 11-3 yesterday, the rest of the race drew tighter than a drum.

Jersey City Giants nosed out Montreal Royals 6-5, and moved past Rochester into third place, and Syracuse Chiefs advanced into a virtual tie for fourth with the Red Wings by walloping the Bisons 9-5. Even the last-place Toronto Maple Leafs, who broke an 11-game losing sreak by trouncing Baltimore 11-5, are far from out of the contention.

The little Giants came from behind with three run rallies in the seventh and eighth innings to nip the Royals. Successive singles by manager Travis Jackson, a pinch-hitter, and George Myatt drove in the tying and winning runs.

The somnolent Leafs finally roused themselves out of their deep slump, by smashing out 15 hits against four Baltimore pitchers. A five-run splurge in the seventh clinched the game for the Toronto club.

Mark St. Loses To All Saints

All Saints' Seniors took a 12-10 Church Softball League win over Mark Street last night at King Edward School. It was a real upset, as All Saints won their second in 10 stars and put Mark Street in danger of elimination. The latter hit well, but not timely. Mitchell had two homers and a double in three times. G. Hunter also hit a homer and Parsons hit well. Boulter pulled a feature catch. After winning their first five games, Mark Street have dropped four of their last five. two big innings as the losers' defence wobbled gave All Saints the win. They hit timely, including a homer by Platt and nice stick work by Smith and Hill. Fisher pitched well, but his support was just fair. Platt turned in a neat effort. The teams:

JIMMY IN BUSINESS

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Jimmy McLarnin, Vancouver Irishman and former world's welterweight boxing champion who retired a few years ago, plans to go into business for himself here.

Stretch Battle at Delaware

Thundering down the stretch in the running of the Dover States at Delaware Park are El Chico (No. 9) and Star Runner (No. 5). Jockey Nick Wall was up on El Chico and Sonny Workman on his opponent in the thrilling finish, with the former coming home in first place.

Ruby Robert Was At 40 Mark When He Attempted Comeback

Jeff Finished Him In Eighth Round

Speckled Bob Fitzsimmons was 40 years old when he tried to recover the heavyweight title from James J. Jeffries at Mechanics' Pavilion in San Francisco, July 25, 1902.

Fitz had won the heavyweight crown when he was 35 by paralyzing Jim Corbett with the famous solar plexus punch, a wallop to a nerve centre in the abdomen. Two years later he had lost it to Jeff by a knockout in the eleventh round at Coney Island Athletic Club.

Keeps Bowling Them Over.

Lanky Bob went on fighting after Jeff dethroned him. Early in 1900 he knocked out Jim Daly and Ed. Dunkhorst just for practice. Late in the year when Gus Ruhlin, the Akron Giant, was clamoring for a bout with Jeffries, Fitz agreed to take him for a warmup. Ruhlin had beaten Tom Sharkey and was regarded as a No. 1 challenger.

It was a warmup all right — for Fitz. The cunning ex-champion, though 38 years old, outsmarted and outfought the big puncher from Akron, finally knocking him out with a right to the jaw in the sixth round.

Then Tom Sharkey felt the urge. He challenged Fitz, and though Bob had just finished fighting Ruhlin, he took on Sharkey just two weeks after meeting the Akron giant. Fitz knocked out Sharkey in two rounds, and immediately challenged Jeffries. At that time the Horton law, which permitted 25-round bouts in New York State, was on its last legs, and Fitz wanted Jeff to meet him before the law went out. Jeff refused, saying the time was too short to get into shape. Disappointed, Fitzsimmons announced his retirement in 1900 when the law was repealed. He was 38, and had enough to live on comfortably.

Sports Writers Start It.

Fitz remained in retirement for more than a year. But sports writers began smoking up a bout between Jeff and Fitz in 1901. How would the clever Fitz, with his great boxing skill and terrific punch stack up against the apparently unconquerable Jeffries? The question was asked repeatedly on the sports pages and many believed Speckled Bob would be able to outwit big Jeff. Fitz was a middleweight, tipping the beam at about 160 pounds, while Jeff weighed 215.

Jeff was willing, and the talk finally lured Fitz into his comeback attempt, July 25, 1902. Though forty years old Fitzsimmons trained splendidly. He was in fine physical condition when he stepped into the open-air pavilion in San Francisco to meet the grizzly.

Experts had written that Fitz probably would not risk getting close to the powerful punching boilermaker early in the fight, but would depend upon his skill until Jeff was worn down, and then would punch him around enough to win on points.

Ruby Robert Attacks

But that wasn't the way Fitz fought. At the opening gong the challenger rushed out and began to lace Jeffries. Not only did he hammer Jeff's face into a bloody pulp, but he avoided the rushes of the infuriated champion without damage. For three rounds Jeffries was unable to hit the lanky phantom before him.

But in the fourth Fitz slipped. And as he did, Jeff planted a thudding left into Bob's ribs. That probably was the haymaker that won the fight, for it slowed Fitz to a walk, and Jeff began to land regularly.

Fitz fought back with everything he had, refusing to run away from the ruinous puncher who shook him from top to bottom every time one of those bone-crushing blows hit home. In the eighth round, Jeff scored with a left to the body that made Fitz drop his hands. As the challenger's guard went down, Jeff brought the same thundering left to the point of the chin. Fitz swayed, fell to his hands and knees, tried vainly to rise.

Clockmen Beat Little Harlem

In an exhibition men's softball game at the Bowl last night, Westclox took a 6-3 win over Little Harlem of the Southend Loop. It was a neat fixture throughout, with sparkling fielding, and the Clockmen only getting half a dozen runs despite 14 hits to six. Shine pitched for Little Harlem and gave 14 hits and two walks, while fanning five. Bateman on the other slab allowed but six hits and no walks as he struck out three.

A feature play in the third saw Shine and Pat Calladine both chase a pop fly, both juggling it, with Shine finally holding it. Bill Calladine pulled a nice run for a foul in the fifth as he played a lot of first base. The Rocket came through with a homer in the seventh with two aboard. O'Leary pulled off a dandy grab as the Harlemites were rallying once. Good fielding was also shown by Gainey and F. Maloney. Ellis got a homer, double and single, with Curry hitting a homer and single, and Carlson collecting a double and single. The teams:

All Saints Win In Bantam Final

All Saints finished their Church Softball eLague bantam section on top with a 19-18 win last night over St. John's at Prince of Wales School. The Saints almost made the playoffs with a vicious last-inning attack on Kemp, the All Saints' pitcher, but they fell a run short of a tie. Honor and Millen hit homers while Dutton and Howard also belted the ball hard and often. Dyer did some heavy hitting for the winners, as did Miller and Lacey, while Blackwell banged out a four-base blow. The teams:

Don't Be Fooled About Constipation!

Many people, when constipation hits them, just reach for the medicine shelf, dose up with a physic, and try to forget it—till the trouble comes back. And come back it usually does—more and more often—till you get at its cause.

If you eat what most people do—just bread, meat, potatoes—chances are just this fact causes your trouble: lack of "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and aids elimination.

If that's the reason for your trouble, what you need is a good dish of crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains the "bulk" you need plus Nature's great intestinal tonic, vitamin B1. Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and join the "regulars." Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

Brinton Wins By 2-1 Count From C.G.E.

Ideal weather prevailed last night for the first soccer league engagement between the Brinton Athletic and the Canadian General, with the former getting the break in a hard fought engagement that was full of thrills by the score of two to one before a good attendance of spectators at King Edward Park.

Tactics Very Keen.

Within a minute, Keith, C.G.E. centered across the goal for the Brinton fullback to kick clear in the nick of time. From a throw-in the Brinton attack went right through to find Richardson handling when within shooting distance. But he made amends a little later with his brilliant tactics in dribbling the ball towards goal until a long drive was saved by Bolton, C.G.E. goalie. Clever football prevailed at this point, with the halves intercepting at the logical moment to nullify the forward's progress. Jones, centre-half kept swinging the ball from wing to wing until an opening left Richardson in an ideal position which he took advantage of and compelled Bolton to make a spectacular save. On the next raid, Buchan about proved successful as he landed a drop shot in below the bar to witness the custodian frustrate his drive—a great shot and a great save. A free kick against the Electrics caused the down-fall of their charge when ones drove a hard shot over to the left wing where Richardson got the better of a clever tackle and gave the C.G.E. goalie no chance to save. Thereafter the halves were prominent with their intercepting to confine the play to mid-field. Burgess, on C.G.E left carried the offensive against the Brinton without success. Stewart, right half, kept up his brilliant work against a fast moving wing to get the better of the argument on many occasions. He slipped a nice pass up the wing for Keith to let McMaster send a lightning shot into the top corner where Adams pulled the ball down nicely. Just before the interval, Keith about equalized with a shot that was slated for the inside of the upright. Half time—Brinton 1, Canadian General 0.

Clever Combination.

On resuming, the Electrics kept the ball swinging to beat down the opposing defense but Brinton fullbacks were well night perfect in clearing while the Brinton halves frequently indulged in close passing tactics along the ground. Exchanges continued even for a while with Buchan forcing the issue to permit his forwards to make inroads on the Brinton goal, in fact, McMaster deserved credit for his effort from 20-yard range. Ross, on the next visit, brought the Brinton goalie to his knees with a low grounder.

Loose Play Gave Goal.

A set-back was inflicted upon the Electrics through loose play on the part of the defense although Stewart did his utmost to retrieve the mistake but was too late. A Brinton player bulging the twine. With 15 minutes to go, hard luck fell upon Buchan after he had manoeuvered his position and selected the corner of the cross-bar, to find the goalie unbeatable. Later the C.G.E. reduced the lead when Earl centered across the goal to find McMaster picking the inside of the upright. Encouraged by their success they tried hard to get the equaliser. Brinton 2, C.G.E. 1.

Tweed Youth Saves Pal From Drowning

TWEED, June 17.—Jack Beatty, eleven year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Beatty, proved the young hero in a near-drowning at Tweed Memorial Park, and James Ward, a companion owes his life to Jack's quick work in pulling him from fifteen feet of water when he was all but exhausted. Young Ward, who could not swim, dove from the platform on the park dock and was threshing about in the water, trying to reach the wharf when his cries attracted the attention of other young swimmers in the vicinity.

A life preserver was thrown to him, but he could not grasp it and then Jack, racing over the dock, hauled him over where other youngsters assisted in lifting him to the safety of the wharf. Young Ward, whose energy had been spent in trying to keep afloat, was suffering from stomach sickness after swallowing a quantity of water, and Jack applied respiration methods until the arrival of adults.

inferences," and he referred to the "trying days of 1926" when conferences were held at Laurier House, home of Mr. Mackenzie King, with C.C.F. Leader Woodsworth and A. A. Heaps (C.C.F., Winnipeg North), then leaders of the third groups in the House.

Mr. Mackenzie King denied he had ever discussed political program with those gentlemen at Laurier House.

Mr. Bennett retorted it might have been somewhere else, but he would read what Mr. Woodsworth had said of it as reported in Hansard. He was dealing with that period in 1926 when Mr. Mackenzie King did not have a seat and the Liberals did not have a clear majority in the House.

Before he could proceed further 'Arthur Slaght (Liberal, Parry Sound) asked Deputy Speaker Sanderson if incidents in 1926 were not out of order and Mr. Sanderson ruled that Mr. Bennett was not in order. The Opposition leader accepted the ruling and the incident ended.

The House was occupied most of the afternoon with the budget and the patronage debate took two hours of the evening session, after which some progress was made with Labor Minister Roger's estimates on which the whole patronage and Manitoba roads discussion had taken place.

BETHANY

The Women's Guild of St. Mary's Church, held their final meeting at the home of the president, Mrs. W. L. Hannah for the summer season. Nine members attended, and afternoon was spent quilting a beautiful pieced quilt, which will be offered for draw ticket at their next social function.

After the tea hour a short business session was held. The treasurer gave the financial report which was very satisfactory and out-standing items were dealt with. Letters were also read from members of congregation, recently bereaved.

Miss Annie Sisson visited the ladies to meet at her home in the village on Thursday.

The British Government is expected to receive nearly $6,000,000 in death duties from the estate of the Duke of Devonshire, who died recently.

for Canada to give to-day and bargain to-morrow.

At the same time the Finance Minister pinned his hope for world reduction of tariffs on a policy of bi-lateral treaties. The day of the unilateral treaty was over for Canada. This country could not afford to adopt a lone-wolf attitude and reduce tariffs while its two best customers, Great Britain and the United States, pursued a course of moving through trade treaties.

Mr. Dunning continued with these words:

"It would not be proper for me, at this time, to make any statement with regard to the negotiations looking toward the conclusion of new trade agreements between Canada and the United States, and the United States and the United Kingdom, which have been pursued steadily in Washington for some months now.

Large Difficult Tax.

"We have embarked on a big and difficult undertaking which for its successful completion will require the continuing collaboration in good faith of all the countries concerned.

"We believe that all the benefits of the good neighborhood which we in Canada appreciate in our relations with the United States of America can be fully realized only through closer co-operation in the economic field between the United States and all the countries of the British Commonwealth.

"In the present instance, it is clear that if we are to find fair and practicable solutions to the problems involved, Canada must make its contribution towards a general settlement.

"It is perhaps true that in some areas and in some industries we have been enjoying the best of both worlds—and it has been argued, therefore, that our interest is to sit tight and exploit such privileges for what they are worth — while they last.

"Such an attitude is obviously short-sighted; it is certainly not the policy of this government, which is striving, on the basis of reciprocity and fair dealing, to work out trade arrangements with all nations which will serve the best interests of Canada as a whole."

Debate on Monday

Debate on the budget was postponed until Monday when Hon. E. J. Lawson, financial critic for the Conservatives, will lead off. It will be the first time in years that Conservative Leader Bennett has not taken the critic's role.

For the first time since 1929-30, the budget came close to a balance in 1937-38. The deficit was $13,775,000. Revenue, at $516,692,000 was the highest in Canada's history. Expenditures, including specials like relief, drought costs and Canadian National Railways deficit, totalled $530,467,000.

The finance minister budgeted for a revenue of $501,700,000 in 1938-39. He estimated customs duties would increase $10,000,000 to $93,000,000; income tax would increase $18,000,000 to $138,000,000 and the sales tax would drop $13,000,000 to $125,000,000. Minor taxes would bring this net reduction down to $15,000,000 below 1937-38.

On the other side of the national ledger, he calculated having to spend $524,600,000 for governmental services. This would mean a deficit next March of $23,000,000.

Revenue prospects, however, depend on such factors as the western crop, the trend of business in Canada's main foreign customers and world economic factors beyond the control of the country.

Bylaws Suspended

R. Mallory, seconded by Reeve T. A. Reid of Clarke. In the meantime a special committee will investigate fully the details of the agreement regarding the refunding of roads grants and determine whether the sections of paved urban roads are part of the county road system. The members of this committee are: Warden J. F. George; Reeves H. Sirrett of Colborne; R. R. Mallory, G. A. Edmonstone of Bowmanville; R. Innes of Seymour; L. H. Wilson of Cobourg and J. C. CANON C. W. HEDLEY FOUGHT GRIM BATTLE AGAINST BRUSH FIRE

Overcome By Exhaustion, Smoke Anglican Cleric Collapsed Against Rock, Fatally Burned

Coroner's Inquest Held Into the Death Of Cleric At Stoney Lake

(By a Staff Reporter)

Lakefield, June 17. — Evidence heard before Coroner Dr. J. C. Smith and a jury of ten Lakefield citizens in the village council chamber Thursday night threw enough light upon the circumstances surrounding the death of Rev. Canon C. W. Hedley at Stoney Lake at the end of last month to enable a sketchy reconstruction of the tragedy to be made.

Testimony of two doctors as to death being due to shock from burns and as to the diseased condition of Canon Hedley's heart and the story of the men who found the body and examined the scene made it appear almost certain that the 71-year-old Anglican cleric had fought a grim and exhausting battle against the brush fire that in some way had broken out on his property and that he had carried bucket after bucket of water from the lake and saved the buildings from being burned before he was overcome by exhaustion and possibly by smoke and collapsing against a rock was fatally burned.

The verdict returned by the jury was as follows:

C. W. Hedley came to his death sometime Sunday night or early Monday morning May 29 or 30, in Smith township on the north-west shore of Stoney Lake from a weak heart caused by over exhaustion and burns received while fighting a brush fire in the vicinity of his cottage."

Wesley W. Leonard was jury foreman and the other members were Earl Edwards, Judson Hull, Eric Moore, Wm. Morrison, Bert Kidd, Charles Lake, William Watson, Thos. Younge and Fred Young.

The witnesses were examined by Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry K. C.

Dr. A. A. Fraser of Lakefield who performed the postmortem testified to the condition of Canon Hedley's body and described the burns he had noticed. Dr. Fraser said the dead man had been wearing heavy gloves and they had been burned off his hands.

Shock From Burns.

Asked as to the cause of death the witness said that shock from burns would have been sufficient. He said that Canon Hedley had a chronic heart condition, his heart being half as large again as the normal size.

He had seen the body on June 2, he said.

"How long would you say Canon Hedley had been dead" asked Mr. McElderry.

"Three or four days" was the reply.

"Will you fix the approximate date of his death, to the best of your ability" asked the Crown Attorney.

"I will say on the previous Saturday night or Sunday" Dr. Fraser said.

Dr. Herbert Young of Peterborough who assisted in the postmortem corroborated Dr. Fraser's findings and agreed with him in regard to the cause of death being shock from burns.

David Charlton, proprietor of the Kawartha Park store said that Canon Hedley had brought some groceries at his place about 5.30 o'clock on Saturday evening. On the following Thursday, uneasy because he had seen no more of Canon Hedley he had gone over to the cleric's cottage to investigate. He found the canon's canoe tied to the wharf and saw there had been a fire on the property. He could find nobody around the place and afterward when he noticed Canon Hedley's wrist watch on the steps leading up to the room over the boat-house he was afraid there had been a drowning.

Finding The Body.

Accordingly he returned to his store and telephoned Ken Mackenzie at Lakefield and the latter had come up to Stoney Lake and accompanied Mr. Charlton and several others to the Hedley property. In a few minutes the body of Canon Hedley was discovered by Mr. Mackenzie lying on the north side of a rock about 300 feet from the cottage. The dead man was lying with his face on his left forearm and beside him were two water pails. Mr. Charlton said the burned area comprised about three acres.

Ken Mackenzie said that Canon Hedley was his uncle by marriage, and that he had gone to Stoney Lake on the Friday before his death. Mr. Mackenzie said that his uncle had been wearing pyjamas with a sweater, and slippers as if he had been arounsed from sleep by the fire and his wristwatch, found on the steps was full of water and had stopped at 9 o'clock. Witness told of finding the body and said that on Sunday morning Canon Hedley had phoned a relative and said something about burning some slash. It might have been the case that the fire broke out again that night

No Buildings Burned.

David Webster, Lakefield undertaker gave identification evidence and Roger Winemaker, Gilbert Dever and George Chappelle who had visited the scene of the tragedy were also called. The last named said that no buildin had been burned, although the fire had seemed to pass all around them within a foot of the buildings.

Provincial Constable David Silvester who inspected the scene on June 3, said there were all the appearances of a severe and quick-burning fire. Two large trees had been burned through and one of them had fallen on the roof of the cottage knocking down some of the stone chimney. In several places the fire had bruned deeply and there were six inches of ash. The flames had burned the ground on all four sides of the cottage and had gone within a foot of other buildings but there was not a scorch mark on any of the buildings. In the cottage Constable Silvester found a diary, the last entry in which had been made on May 28. The officer produced a number of photographs taken at the scene which were passed round the jury.

Coroner Dr. Smith told the jury before they retired to consider their verdict that the inquest had been held so that the real facts as developed in sworn testimony could be brought out.

Barnsley Seat Goes Labor

BARNSLEY, England, June 17 (CP)—Frank Collingridge today prepared to take his seat on the labor benches in the House of Commons following his decisive victory yesterday in the by-election here made necessary by the death of J. Potts, Labor member.

Mr. Collingridge, a member of the Mine Workers Federation of Great Britain, defeated a London stock exchange member, Seymour Howard, in a two-man fight. Mr. Howard ran as a National Liberal supporter of the Chamberlain government.

It was Labor's first victory in four by-elections and like the other three, made no change in the House standing.

In a total vote that fell considerably short of that cast in the 1935 general election, Mr. Collingridge increased Labor's majority by almost 3,000 votes. He polled 23,556 to 13,052 for Mr. Howard.

The by-election completed the slate of outstanding contestants and left the unofficial standing of the House at 420 supporters of the government and 195 opposition members of all shades. After the last general election the standing was: Government 431; Opposition 184.

Let Someone Sit Up All Night To Watch Boys Magistrate Advises

Langley, K.C., in juvenile court this morning as he remanded two youngsters in the Children's Shelter until Saturday morning when three charges of breaking and entering and theft will be heard.

The magistrate's remarks were occasioned by a statement from Provincial Constable Silvester that the boys had already made one attempt to escape from the shelter by removing a heavy screen from a window.

"The Children's Aid Society is receiving public money and is expected to take care of such cases," replied Magistrate Langley. "If they are unable to do so then the sooner the public knows it the better. Lots of people have to sit up all night to look after sick persons and there is no reason why some one at the shelter cannot do so in the case of these children if they are afraid they will try to escape."

The youngsters, one 14 and the other 12, recently escaped from the Bowmanville Boys' School and they are charged with breaking and entering summer cottages on the Otonabee belonging to Richard Scrace, Ernest Croft and Leonard Vass.

Takes Own Life

Fractured Skull Proves Fatal To Girl Aged 11

Suffering from a fractured skull sustained when she fell from the running board of an automobile at Cordova Mines on Wednesday night, Zella Payne McCulloch, eleven-year-old daughter of Mrs. Wm. McCulloch, of Cordova died in Nicholls Hospital this morning.

An inquest into the fatality has been called by Coroner Dr. J. C. Smith and will be held at Havelock on Tuesday night.

It is understood that there was a baseball game on the property of A. Chard on Wednesday night, and as Lloyd Babcock, one of the spectators, prepared to start his car to return home, the little McCulloch girl climbed on to the running board to get a ride home. Mr. Babcock asked her to get into the car but it is said she refused to do so. At all events as the automobile crossed a bridge over the creek she was jolted off and struck her head heavily.

The girl was rendered unconscious and was still in a coma at midnight with three doctors in attendance. Later it was decided to have her taken to Nicholls Hospital, where the death occurred this morning.

Tuesday's Battle In Court Renewed

Two of the three leading characters in a cause celebre that occupied the attention of Magistrate Campbell for several hours on Tuesday were back in police court this morning when Hugh Given, former reeve of Harvey and Stephen Costello of Peterborough were before Magistrate Langley, K.C., charged with creating a disturbance on Hunter street, Thursday night.

In Tuesday's proceedings a charge against Given of assaulting Costello with intent to do serious bodily harm was dismissed when no evidence was offered by the prosecution. William Barrow who had been with Given on the occasion complained of was found guilty by Magistrate Campbell of common assault and fined $10 and $27.40 costs.

Today both men pleaded not guilty before Magistrate Langley and the cases were adjourned until Monday morning when the Crown was not ready to proceed.

READ THIS FIRST:

Bill Baron, a footloose Texan, has just been rescued from a band of Yaqui Indians, holding him for ransom, through a bold move on the part of Ellen Dale, Hollywood screen star. Ellen and Bill had been staying at the wealthy Montoya ranch across the Mexican border where they found themselves after a lucky parachute jump from Baron's plane during a storm. Ellen, enchanted by the atmosphere of old Mexico, finds herself growing much interested in Bill. Also rescued with Bill was Panola Montoya, the ranch owner's daughter whose invitation to ride with her led to their capture by the Yaqui. As they return to the ranch, Bill and Ellen find Don Julio, their host, and his son, Felix, with a large following of Mexicans, in hot pursuit of the Yaqui. Ellen begs them to desist. Bill drives Ellen to Nogales after they say goodby to the Montoyas, both promising to return later for a fiesta. Suddenly, upon receipt of a necklace and a dinner invitation from Bill, Ellen decides not to return to Hollywood, and telephone Sid Bromberg, her producer who is in love with her, not to come to Nogales for her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 16

The leading hotel in Nogales, Ariz., is believed by many to be the most beautiful building on the entire Mexican-American border. Of simple pueblo architecture it was built in prohibition times by an over-zealous promoter, to accommodate wealthy tourist trade. It is entirely too big for the relatively few strangers who drift that far south of Phoenix, main resort city, now.

But the front door is kept open, and a dozen or so of its hundred rooms. Its luxurious patio is kept lovely, simply because it would be a sin to neglect it. Green shrubbery and gorgeous, exotic blossoms from all parts of Mexico are on display there constantly. A small stream of crystalline water leaps from a four-story boulder around which the hotel was built, plunges into a pool enlivened with brook trout and a genuine, imported, genial old bullfrog as big as a man's shoe.

On momentous occasions the frog croaks; that is, the occasion of his croaking is always regarded as momentous, bringing out hotel employes and guests alike, and sometimes winning mention in the Nogales Daily Herald. They call him El Conquistador—The Conqueror—in honor of that first and most picturesque of all conquerors in the southwest, Francisco Vasquez do Coronda.

This hotel is distinctive for another reason, too. The maids are all hostesses—if you can imagine that. They are not servile, nor are they obtrusive, but you are likely to find yourself in both pleasant and intelligent conversation with one of them down in the lobby or patio. They are hired for their knowledge and appreciation of southwestern lore, as well as for their ability to make up beds and cleanse bathtubs. They wear Mexican costumes, and invariably are pretty. They subtly imbue the hotel and its guests with a democratic atmosphere traditional to the region.

A maid who said her name was Consuela Lilliantino was explaining to Ellen about the bullfrog and his patio kingdom.

"He was alive in Mexico when Coronda come through Arizona," Consuela declared, smiling. "At least so they say. He iss very old, Miss Dale. And very wise. Coronado come 400 years ago."

"Really!" breathed Ellen, impressed.

"Yes, and he was brought here to rule the patio. The frog, I mean. He iss lazy and fat and espoiled now, but still wise. It iss said, if you are single, you will marry the first man you see after El Conquistador croak: Hees noise iss like roaring bull—wahr, wahr-r-r-r!"

Consuela's soprano effort at croaking was so ludicrous that Ellen rocked with laughter. The two girls were still laughing at it when a masculine voice intruded.

"Let somebody croak who really can — WAHR-WAH-RWAHR-R-R-R-R-R!"

"Bill! Hello!" Ellen greeted him. "We were trying to tease El Conquistador. Do you know about him?"

"Who doesn't, on the border?"

"He must be grand, but I can barely see him, he's under the water now. I think you could give him voice lessons."

Bill's expression became stern.

"Is that an insult, Miss Dale? If so, for whom—me or the frog?"

Consuela had tactfully slipped away, and Bill led Ellen back into the lobby. She thanked him earnestly, for the Navajo bracelet.

"I am taking you to The Cave," he said. "We will have to go back across the line."

"The Cave?"

"Yes, La Caverna. It is just over the line in Sonoran Nogales, the most extraordinary restaurant in all of Mexico."

"Will it be another adventure?"

"Synthetic this time, little Miss. Fairy tale. No thunder-storms. No Yaquis. But the atmosphere will be—well, correct."

Ellen's lovely big eyes were made even wider by the reception given her and Bill at The Cave.

"It's all right," Bill comforted, and a dozen other people were laughing. Years ago this really had been a subterranean prison, had held many of Mexico's most incorrigible criminals, Bill explained.

A man of extremely high countenance escorted them through a heavy iron door, then back into a maze of undergdound cells carved in a solid rock cliff.

The man barked harsh commands at them, deep gutteral commands. He pushed them through other iron doors into a small cell and shoved them into chairs at a rough hand-hewn table. Ellen's heart was pounding. The man wore ammunition belts crossed on his chest, two enormous black pistols, a gleaming dagger. He had fierce untrimmed mustachios. When he had seated the couple, he leaned insolently on the table and glared first at Ellen and then at Bill.

"Thanks, senor," drawled Bill. "Bring us the regular prison fare, please."

When the man had gone, Ellen exhaled audibly, a frightened little trembling sigh. Bill laughed out loud. "I told you it was the most extraordinary restaurant in Mexico," he reminded her, smiling.

"O-oh!"

It was all she could say for a moment or so. She sat staring at the walls, floor, ceiling; at the two flickering candles which furnished the only light. Bill noted she was a trifle pale.

"It is all right," he declared, suddenly concerned. "It is all play. Do not be afraid, chiquita mia. You understand?"

"Yes, Bill," Ellen whispered it. She looked exactly like some 10-year-old child who had been hearing a ghost story, Bill thought, and not at all like a renowned actress whom people regarded as sophisticated and mature. "It is all right if you say so, Bill."

"Of course it is all a front, now. But I perhaps should have described it in advance. You have been through a strain lately. I am sorry. I didn't mean—"

"No, no, I love it, Bill! Honestly I do. It wasn't terribly afraid. I was just—I mean—well, it is thrilling, isn't it? It's so real! It's a story place. And what a queer restaurant! Will the food be good?"

"Wait and see," he was smiling happily at her.

"Mr. Baron, I think you are made for adventure, for strange and exciting things! From the moment I met you my life has been utterly changed."

Bill guffawed at that, his deep voice reverberating weirdly in the cave. "I might add ditto to your last sentence, Ellen," he said, finally.

The dinner was as surprising as the surroundings. "Regular prison fare" turned out to be an elaborate spread, centering around two broiled quail which Bill explained were trapped in the wilderness near Fronteras and Cananea. Salad was green halves of avocados, nested in a mass of spicy wild "miner's lettuce" from the banks of shaded mountain streams, brightened by tangy crimson jam made by Papago Indians from wild strawberries. Only side dish was a miniature of a Mexican horseman, a clever caballero whose mount was a baked carrot with spaghetti mane and tail, and who was himself a fresh aromatic young garden onions straddling his horse with green legs. He rode in a pasture of stewed squash.

Even more astonishing was the bread. It came in first—an uncooked dough. With it was served a small Dutch oven set in a container of glowing hot coals which, incidentally, furnished just the right amount of warmth to offset the cave chill. The two guests themselves first kneaded the dough (at Bill's direction) pated it and put it in the iron oven, sat the oven on coals and shoveled more coals on the lid. Before salad could be eaten, the bread was temptingly brown and done! Ellen Dale—she who had been an orphan since childhood, who had never known the beauty of home life despite the wealth and experience she had achieved—sat now at their cavern table helping, entranced.

"You like?" murmured Bill once, gently.

She could answer only with her eyes, which seemed sparkling with happiness tears. Bill reached over pat her hand. "Is good dinner," he ventured, and said no morre.

DOROTHY DIX

THERE is no other human being in the world who so richly deserves to have something drastic done to her as the woman who boasts that she says just what she thinks.

You number her among your acquaintances unless you have been particularly favored by Lady Luck. She is the woman who tells you that you are getting fat or showing your age, or that your new hat that you paid more for that you should is unbecoming, or that your skirt is too long in the back. When you show her your house or garden, she tells you that they are badly arranged and that you should have a landscape gardener or an interior decorator do them for you, because your taste is bad. She criticizes your food even while she is eating it and tells you just how she cooks the dish on which you pride yourself.

If you have a good-looking husband with a foot that is inclined to wander, she never fails to tell you in the midst of a crowd that she saw him lunching with a beautiful blonde and she wondered if all those tales she heard about him were true. She tells you that people say that you spoil your children, and that they are the worst brats in the neighborhood. She asks you if you don't think that the frail little daughter, who is the very core of your heart, isn't tuberculous. She says that she looks that way to her, and didn't your Great-Aunt Susan die of the disease?

Yes, we all know the woman who prides herself upon saying just exactly what she thinks, heaven help us. And, perhaps, the hardest thing about her to put up with is her self-complacency. For, after having trampled our vanity into the dust and stabbed us to the heart by telling us things we would rather die than hear, she has the nerve to camouflage her crimes by representing them as truth and honesty.

That her strictures are often the truth doesn't excuse her for wounding every one she meets. Maybe most of us are repeaters, who tell our favorite stroies over and over again, but why interrupt us just at the point of our best joke by reminding us that that is an old one that she has heard before? Perhaps few of us are Lily Ponses or Lawrence Tibbetts, but why chagrin the maiden and youth who have consented to oblige by calling their attention to their sour notes and the times they went off key? Why tell fond parents that their infant prodigies are just plain, ordinary children, who would probably rate as morons under an I. Q. test. Why in a world that is full of grief and trouble puncture anybody's little pink balloons and take away from them the harmless little vanities that really make life endurable?

If it be a lack of truth and honest to refrain from humiliating and wounding others by not calling attention to their faults and defects then let us cultivate deceit as one of the major virtues, for, as a philosopher said long ago, "Not even the most admired and loved among us could survive if he knew what his friends and acquaintances really thought about him."

One of the strange things about the woman who preens herself on saying exactly what she thinks is that she never seems to have any kindly or admiring thoughts about people. If she thinks you are looking well, or young, or pretty, or that you have on an adorable frock, she never mentions it. Neither does she tell you that she thinks you have made a wonderful president of a club, or that she doesn't know how the church would get along without you. Nor does she ever tell you what a good, wise mother you have been and that your children do you honor. All of her thoughts seems to be pickled in vinegar with never a sweet one among them.

And another queer thing about the woman who is so strong about speaking the plain, blunt truth to people is that she can't stand it when they give her a dose of her own medicine. She wants to be palavered over and flattered and have the truth modified and sugared up before it is handed to her. She doesn't want to be treated as she treats others.

Nothing could be more absurd than the contention that to be truthful and honest we must tell people exactly what we think of them, and that we are being hypocritical when we pass over lightly the things about them that do not hit our fancy and are even civil and polite to those whom we really do not like. We are merely being civilized. And those who do not use restraint are barbarians. It has been said that words were given to us to conceal our thoughts, and the more adroitly we use them the more popular we are with our fellow creatures. Not one of us really wants to know what any on thinks of us. DOROTHY DIX.

SUPPOSE YOUR pair is using the strong original no trump convention, and your perfectly sound call is passed by your partner. Suppose fourth hand kindly keeps it open with two of a minor and that is allowed to ride to your mate. Then suppose he bids two of a major and fourth hand passes it to you. Don't you know from this that your partner has nothing but a bit of length in his suit, with no honor strength? In other words, don't you know enough to pass and let him play the hand?

After passes by North and East, South started the bidding here with 1-No Trump. North passed this and East put in a bid of 2-Diamonds. Having had no response from his partner, South feared making a further bid, so passed. North, however, figured that if his partner had a strong no trump hand they were perhaps being cheated out of a part score, and as South surely held something in spades, a bid of two in that suit could not go wrong. South, however, misread the inference and went on to 2-No Trumps.

A club was led by West and East's club K lost to the A. The spade K was South's next play, and when East won with the A he switched to a club to the Q of West, who returned another to the J. Thereafter South was helpless and was slaughtered, whereas 6 Spades might have been made.

Goodnight Story

"My goodness!" Hanid exclaimed as she glanced inside the railroad station. "Just look at all the other folks who are going to the country!"

Knarf, the shadow boy, looked, too. So did the Mouse family, who were setting out from their city house to visit their cousins in the country. It was a curious railroad

"They're taking us to the country."

It was really an empty rain barrel, turned over on its side. The front part was missing; it had a high, round roof. Inside this station were a great crowd of curious passengers with their bags and baggage all around them.

"Look! Aren't those two caterpillars?" Knarf said in an excited voice as he pointed to two short creatures standing nearest him. They were both wearing long green coats, buttoned down the middle.

"We were born in a little garden behind a house in the city," the first caterpillar said, speaking in a little voice like a very young child. "Our mother and father are standing over there. They're taking us to the country to grow up."

Knarf and Hanid looked over to where the caterpillar was pointing. They saw two very beautiful butterflies. "Are they your mother and father?" Knarf said, looking surprised.

"Of course, they are," Hanid whispered to him. "Caterpillars are always the children of butterflies. Everyone knows that."

Just then Knarf noticed some other creatures. They looked a good deal like the butterflies except that they weer wearing short, white capes instead of the long, colored ones. But the strangest thing about them that Knarf noticed was that they all had dark glasses over their eyes.

"That's because they're moths," Hanid explained in a low voice. "They don't like the sunlight. They always fly around at night."

"Yes," said one of the moths who happened to overhear what she was saying. "None of my family cares the least bit about sunlight although—ahem—there are some kinds of light we care a great deal about."

"He means lamp lights," the butterfly with the yellow cape said. "Mothers are very funny about lamp lights, you know. They flutter about them as soon as they're lit."

Just then Hanid noticed two new passengers who had just come through the other end of the station. She was very surprised to see who they were.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE —with Major Hoople

United Counties Grant Clerk Help In Office

(By A Staff Reporter)

COBOURG, June 17.—The council of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham concluded its June sessions Thursday night with forethought of their next assembly, deciding to advance their December sessions into November as a convenience to the clerk and treasurer, Major E. L. MacNachtan.

Leaving the final work of the year to the second or third week of December creates unnecessary conflict in the office with the preparation of many reports, and as there is no essential demand for convening in December the council assented to Major MacNachtan's suggestion to move the sessions forward into November at the calle of Warden George.

The clerk told the council yesterday that the pruning of his salary four years ago was contrary to the bylaw by which he was appointed in 1928 and could not be defended. The only way of changing a bylaw was passing another as a substitute. Major MacNachtan was appointed clerk and treasurer of the united counties after the death of his father, the late Colonel Neil MacNachtan whose salary had been $3,250 with $1,200 paid to an assistant. On his appointment the present clerk was paid $3,000 a year and the provision for assistance was cancelled. Since then, he said, he had endeavored to carry on the work efficiently, and on the basis of the reduced salary had been a means of saving the counties $14,500, ten times $1,200 for an assistant and also ten times $250 off the salary paid the clerkship.

Subsequently on what was said to be economy and without regard to the bylaw, Major MacNachtan's salary was cut to $2,000, was returned to $2,400 a year in 1936 and for 1938 it was increased to the original $3,000. He said that Hastings county pays its clerk and treasurer $4,400 with an additional $1,250 to the clerk and a free house and $520 a year for an assistant; Victoria county $2,300 to the clerk and treasurer and two assistants are employed. Lennox and Addington council pays its clerk and treasurer $3,260 with $540 for an assistant, and they have only thirteen municipalities as compared with 24 in Northumberland and Durham. Major MacNachtan said he did not wish to embarrass the council in any way or disturb the friendly relations that existed, but he felt the counties owed him at least $1,500.

Reeve Ray Mallory of Percy said the council had understood last year when restoring the salary of the clerk and treasurer to $3,000 that the question of an arrear was thereby disposed of. The council first agreed last night to authorize the engagof a young man as assistant.

Reeve Calver of Campbellford suggested that the council offer Major MacNachtan $800 in settlement of the amount he felt was due to him and provide for an assistant at salary not to exceed $1,000. Deputy-reeve C. G. Morris of Bowmanville seconded the resolution, but Reeve H. Brisbin of Hamilton township moved that no action be taken in regard to paying "back salary" but that an assistant be authorized on Reeve Calver's proposal.

The amendment was adopted, Major MacNachtan bowed to the council's decision and received an expression of appreciation for his fine spirit of co-operation.

A recommendation by the schools committee asked Millbrook school board to refund to the counties part of their requisition which was said to be an overcharge. It was explained that Millbrook's public and continuation schools were under the same roof, and that the debenture forming the basis of part of the claim were assumed to be on the entire building as if it were a continuation school whereas there should be a separation of debentures on the continuation and public school divisions in proportion to the number of rooms.

Agricultural Grants

A grant of $100 each to Northumberland and Durham for the promotion of junior farmer work was passed by the agricultural committee, $100 to the Cheesemakrs' Association of Northumberland and $100 to the Plowmen's Association of Durham. Reeve C. Devitt's committee also proposed to the Hydro-Electric Commission that electric services to schools be charged on the domestic rate instead of on the commercial basis.

The finance committee departed from a custom to which recent councils have adhered when they decided to discontinue the printing of the detailed items in the financial report. The reason advanced was for the purpose of economy in printing expenses.

A grant of $100 was passed to the Salvation Army for social work on the condition that half the sum be spent in the two counties. One of the concluding resolutions embodied the council's appreciation of the thorough manner in which the schools report had been prepared by Reeve Mallory, chairman of that committee. In acknowleding the compliment Mr. Mallory said he had received capable assistance from members of the committee.

And a last refernce to the contentious question of the maintenance of paved roads in the towns and villages that have been regarded as connecting links in the county road system was a resolution that the counties maintain these roads this year until the dispute with the Department of Highways is settled, presumably in November.

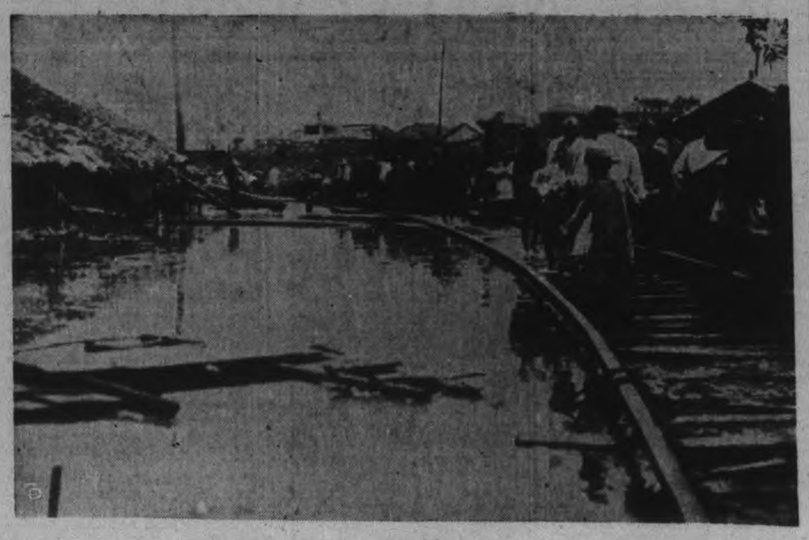
Floods Claim 150,000 Lives in War-Torn China



Invaders can be stopped by shell and bullet, well directed and in sufficient quantity, but China has never been able to curb the Yellow river—that is why the great waterway, at once a blessing and a curse, is called "China's sorrow." Today the Yellow river again is in revolt and already has claimed an estimated 150,000 victims over hundreds of square miles of Honan province. Scenes like the ABOVE, once more are the rule as refugees flee the raging waters. Here you see a railroad rendered useless by the flood. The river plays no favorites, either, for it is reported that thousands of invading Japanese troops may be among its latest victims.

Mother Of Five Who Was Always Tired

Now Awakes as Fresh as a Daisy

A mother of five has a lot to do. Especially a country mother. And this one was "always tired." But Kruschen ended all that—now she gets up feeling fresh, at five o'clock in the morning! She writes:

"I find Kruschen Salts the best thing money can buy for my health. I am the mother of five children, and before taking Kruschen, I was always feeling tired and run down. Now, I am glad to say that I get up feeling fresh—and I get up at five o'clock in the morning. I do my housework, look after my children, and leave the house at 6.30 to start my daily work."—(Mrs.) B.

Tiredness and that run-down feeling can be traced to one root cause. That cause is internal sluggishness; failure to keep the inside free from poisonous, waste matter.

Kruschen Salts is an excellent recipe for maintaining a condition of internal cleanliness. The numerous salts in Kruschen stimulate your internal organs to smooth, regular action. Your inside is thus kept clear of those impurities which, when allowed to accumulate lower the whole tone of the system. —Advt.

We Noticed

....Someone atractively gowned in pale blue figured sheer, with up-turned hat of navy blue, and accessories of cool white.

....That a cool summer afternoon and evening sandal, cleverly woven of multicolor linen stripping, can be had in strong colors or pastels, and is a shoe that can be worn with many colors.

....That jewelry is being shown for hot summer days and nights.. these lovely trifles appear to have a de-lustred surface, which adds to the frosty-cool effect. They come in colors to make sun tan look exciting. We noticed that a cluster of berries with bracelets and clips to match was inexpensive, but very lovely.

Council Of Women Hears Tom Allen

The Local Council of Women meeting was held in the Y.W.C.A. Thursday, with one of the vice-presidents, Mrs. N. Stanger, in the chair.

Following the routine business of minutes, treasurer's report, roll call and correspondence, Mrs. E. Wand gave a very concise report of the semi-annual meetings held recently at Owen Sound. Three convenors presented excellent reports, Mrs. J. Mills for the Trades and Profession for women, also the Pension Board and the Well Babies' Clinic; Mrs. Helson for Housing and Town Planning; and a report for Miss L. Brownscombe, outlining the splendid service rendered girls of the Y.W.C.A., was also read by Mrs. Helson.

The president, Mrs. C. M. Scott, gave the aims and objects of the Local Council, which she described as "a federation of Women's Organizations in a community, which is willing to abide by the constitution of the National Council of Women, and which is desirous of coming into closer fellowship with each other."

The guest speaker for the afternoon, Tom Allen, was introduced by Mrs. C. M. Scott. The Local Council was honored in having Mr. Allen speak to them, as his scholastic achievements and honors are known to all. Mr. Allen took for his subject the various phases of "Can't" as they appear to youth, and with a mixture of satire, humor and constructive criticism, he gave to his hearers youth's impressions of "Can't of their elders," "Can't of society," "Can't of culture," "Can't of religion," "Can't of asceticism," and "Can't of morality," to mention a few.

The musical interlude was supplied by pupils of Roy Rome, Miss Shirley Ashby and Menzie McLaren, whose delightful violin solos were accompanied at the piano by Miss Margaret Rome.

After according thanks to speakers and musical entertainers, the meeting adjourned with the singing of the National Anthem.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Sister Prays As She Paints

CHICAGO, June 17.—(CP).— A genius nun—her foremost ambition is to portray Christ more brilliantly alive in spiritual beauty and expression than He ever has been painted. She has painted many original conceptions of Chirst, but she is not completely satisfied with them.

That is what is written of Sister Stanisia of Our Lady of Longwood, a Chicago suburb, who prays as she paints. She has been called the world's foremost woman painter of contemporary religious art. She has been commissioned to paint religious subjects in Europe and the United States. She has work in hand to keep her busy for years.

As a child she studied under the Polish count, Thaddeus von Zukotynski, in Munich. She fulfilled his dying wish that she complete some of his unfinished Biblical pictures.

She first won widespread recognition when she displayed four paintings at the Eucharistic Congress here in 1926. These were a portrait of Bishop Noll of Indiana, a painting of "Saint Theresa—Little Flower," and two madonas. This exhibition brought her a flood of commissions for church murals, altar pieces, devotional paintings and portraits.

Her first ambition was to paint murals high on the walls of a church. That wish was fulfilled when she climbed atop a 60-foot scaffold in Chicago's Saint Stanislaus church. Fifteen other churches in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan and Idaho are decorated with her life-size pictures of the 14 stations of the cross.

A Zurich, Switzerland, art publisher, after searching France, Germany and England for an artist to paint an original conception of the Sacred Heart—gave the commission to Sister Stanisia.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"The day returns and brings us the petty rounds of irritating concerns and duties. Help us to perform them with laughter and kind faces: let cheerfulness abound with industry. Give us to go blithely on our business all this day, bring us to our resting beds weary and content and undishonoured, and grant us in the end the gift of sleep."

—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Dear Friends:

Were you ever irritable, yet didn't know what made you like that? Work was hard to do, life did not seem so grand, your very soul seemed tired and out of sorts, and all sorts of things cropped up to annoy you further.

Well, I have been like that today, so I thought I would tell you how I laughed myself out of it. I was doing some work I do not like to do, never have liked it, never will. So as I labored away, this is the conversation I had with myself.

"I don't like this job." Myself replied, "Oh you don't? How would you like to have to do it every day?" I replied that I would not do it. Myself told me that many people had it to do, perhaps not liking it any better than I did. I argued back, that I would find some other kind of work, and myself said that I had had to do it for years, so why hadn't I found a way of escaping it before this.

But, of course, I was still working away at the darned thing, and as I worked I laughed at me and myself, getting into an argument over it. Who won? Well, I didn't, so myself must have done so.

And sometimes when you are doing something you do not like either, just stop long enough to wonder how you would like to do it every day. See the humour in it, laugh at yourself for getting in a dither over it, get all the fun you can out of it, and before you know where you are, presto, the thing is finished.

It isn't a bad idea to think of all the nasty things that must be done to keep a town clean and sanitary. You think you would not like to have to collect garbage, yet someone must do it, and maybe they do not like the odor and muss any more than you would.

Sometimes we hear a person say "I hate cooking," but you'll notice they like a well cooked dinner. Another will say they hate doing dishes but they would not like to eat off dirty plates. Someone else hates mending or darning, yet they would not like to go around with a seam that needed sewn, or a stocking with a hole in it.

And so, if there are jobs you do not like doing, just fancy how you would feel doing them every day. You might think it would drive you crazy (or nuts, as the young moderns have it) but it takes a lot of that kind of thing to drive anyone crazy.

We cannot all do the things we like doing, and leave all the rest of the jobs to others. Look what a mother must do for an infant, and don't forget you were once an infant and had to have these things done for you. Besides who are you to think you can escape the ugly things and just do the nice ones?

So, when you are doing them, have a talk with yourself. It's lots of fun, the time passes quicker, you get it done sooner, and its over for another day. But if you go at it rebelliously, the time will drag, things will go wrong, and you will be much longer before you are done.

Sometimes we think how lovely it would be to have nothing at all to do, get up when we like, eat when we like, go out when we like, boy, how grand that would be. But, like everything else it can get monotonous too. We tried it one Sunday, and it was a long long day, we were more tired than if we had worked.

I think it is better as Spenser tells us: "Sleep after toyle, port after stormie seas, Ease after warre, death after life, doth greatly please." So, if you have to do something, do it, then forget it. Your Friend,

ROBERTA.

Artistic Recital Delights Audience At The Lyceum

The program presented by the music pupils of St. Mary's Convent Thursday evening, in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum, was not "just another recital," but a real treat for the lovers of music who were privileged to be there.

The stage, beautiful with an abundance of the season's fairest flowers, was a veritable bower, in and out of which flitted the dainty musicians, each one fully deserving the unstinted applause given by the appreciative audience.

Each number, from the simple offerings of the little ones appearing in public for the first time, to the difficult selections of the senior pupils, who have frequently delighted their audience, contributed towards an artistic program, and once again proved that there is an abundance of musical talent in Peterborough, which is being efficiently developed by the Sisters of St. Joseph, St. Mary's Convent.

(Slater) Under the Eaves, Jack McGrath; (McIntyre) Scale Valse, Teddy Cooney; (Oxenford) The Ash Grove, a song by Lucille Heffernan; (Beethoven) Waltz, Eleanor Grady; (Bach) Musette, Doreen Grainger; (Kennedy) Star of Hope and (Lansing) Serenade, was played by a guitar orchestra composed of: Marie Grainger, Marcelle O'Donnell, Joseph Coss, Edward Geraghty, Bernard Traviss, Barry Shaughnessy, Teddy Cooney and Billie Hayes.

(Slater) John Gilpin, Maureen Gravelle; and "Folk Song" by the same composer, Winnifred Ryan; (Rowe) The Contented Bird, Isabel Hunt at the piano, was sung by Elizabeth Begley and Gladys Williams. (Kern) Song of the Katydid, Dorothy Curtin; (Brow) Pixies Gavotte, Cecile DeChantigny; (Bach) Minuet and (Clementi) Sonatina, Mary Sullivan; (Huse) Valse, Frank Ottney; (Cooke) Birds on the Wing, a song by Adele McMurray; (Oeften) The Doll's Dream, Pauline Fanning; (Sullivan) The Lost Chord, a song by Helen Ross; (Heins) Mazurka, Teresa Sullivan.

(Slater) Mountain Gnome, Rosanne Monahan; (Boccherini) Minuet, Joan Reed; (Heins) Silvery Echoes, Bernice Traviss; (Haydn) Capriccio, Joan Cavanagh; (Slater) Fairy Fingers, Isobel Heath; (Aubry) A Maid Churning, Catherine Ryan; (Ellmenreich) Spinning Song, Teresa Hynes; (Lichner) Tulip, Rosina Fanning; (Bonheur) Frolic and Fun, Yolande DeChantigny; two songs, Tilzer's "That Old Irish Mother of Mine" and Sanderson's "Friend O'Mine" sung by Jack Flagler.

(Heller) Tarantella, Ruth Smith; (Haydn) Gypsy Rondo, Mary Nelson; (Schubert) March Militaire, Jack McNulty; (Bach) Prelude in A Minor and Haydns Sonato "Presto" Marion Downer, violin selection, Braga's Angel's Serenade, Catherine Corkery; (Czibulka) Gavotte, Angeline Burns; Gluck-Brahms Gavotte in A, Noe DeLaplante; Debussy's "Arabesque" and Beethoven's Sonato Op. 10 No. 1 "Prestissimo," Francis Wells; Bach's "Minuet and Gigue" and Beethovens Sonato, "Priests", Agnes Mayock.

Schumann's "Nocturne" and Liszt's "Soiree De Vienne", Doris Strickland; and "The Enchanted Nymph" by Levitzki, Marion Best, concluded the program.

Accompanists were: Veronica Scollard, A.T.C.M., Marion Best, A.T.C.M., Dorothy Whatley and Margaret Corkery.

Divided Skirt Outfit in Celanese Rayon

A divided skirt costume which is smart looking enough to be worn anywhere, June Guptil, the model, wears a white culotte outfit in new celanese rayon suiting fabric, decorated with vari-colored running stitch embroidery. Notice the distinctive features of this dress, the deep, rounded flaps of the pockets, the printed scarf at the neck, the material of which covers the belt buckle. A new catalin pin at the throat is in the shape of an academic cap—very appropriate for this time of year.

2 Years For Kidnap

MONTREAL, June 17 (CP)—G. R. Thompson, 62, convicted of assaulting young women when they responded to his advertisements for a domestic, was sentenced today by Mr. Justice Wilfrid Lazure to three years in penitentiary. Thompson was arrested after girls complained they had been assaulted when they submitted to what the accused termed a "medical examination."

Madoc Bowlers Organize Club

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MADOC, June 17.—The ladies of the Madoc Lawn Bowling Club met on Tuesday afternoon for organization and planning of a schedule of games for the season of 1938.

Officers elected were: President, Mrs. C. I. Ross; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. R. Beatty; Entertainment and Games Committe: Mesdames Beatty, Nickle and Kellar; Refreshment Committee: Mesdames L. Ashley and C. Moon.

The ladies will bowl on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons and other social events will be planned.

The men's organization under the leadership of George West, have been bowling for about two weeks.

The greens are in excellent condition, and have been given splendid care. Rinks have been lengthened to conform to recent ruling. The lights have been improved. The clubhouse has been redecorated and floors, etc., painted, while the seats have been provided to make a very presentable showing. The club is to be heartily congratulated on its increase in membership, and a very successful season is expected.

Personals.

The Ladies' Guild of St. John's Anglican Church held a very pleasant afternoon tea at the close of the working session on Tuesday afternoon.

The Girls' W.A. of St. John's Church held their June supper meeting on Tuesday at the summer home of Mrs. H. Davies at Cottage Cove, Moira Lake. An excellent attendance gave evidence of the popularity of the invitation received. After the supper, several business items were discussed, and a report received of the W.A. conference at Picton, given by Mrs. Davies and those girls who were privileged to attend.

Aberhart Favors Guaranteed Loans

EDMONTON, June 17 —(CP)— Premier Aberhart is "favorably disposed" toward the idea of Provincial government guarantees for federal loans to Alberta municipalities under the Municipal Improvements Assistance Act, Mayor John Fry of Edmonton said last night in a statement issued after he had conferred with the Premier.

The Mayor said he told Premier Aberhart he was speaking for both Calgary and Edmonton in inquiring whether the Provincial government "would be prepared to give the guarantees to municipalities required by the Act."

He quoted the Premier as having replied he "was in sympathy with the objects of the Act and favorably disposed toward the Provincial government guaranteeing loans to municipalities for purposes referred to in the Act."

MR. JUSTICE ARCHAMBAULT

J. C. McRUER, K.C.

Above are shown the members of Canada's Royal Commission on Penitentiaries, whose recommendations, just submitted to the government after months of study of penal institutions in Canada and abroad, urge sweeping administrative changes in the penitentiaries branch. Included in the report is a demand for removal of several senior officials in charge of penal administration. The Justice Department at Ottawa is expected to submit legislation to implement some of the recommendations at once. Mr. Justice Archambault was commission chairman.

"Injected" Meal New Life-Saver

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17 (AP)—A full meal by hypodermic needle—an improvement on the old idea of a meal in a pill—becomes reality under a discovery announced to the American Medical Association here today.

The discovery enables a doctor to inject proteins, the "ham, eggs and milk" of menus, directly into the blood. Heretofore the needle has been confined to injecting sugars, water and salts.

The needle meals will save the lives of persons whose stomachs refuse food. This happens not infrequently after surgical operations. While the patients do not directly starve to death, their partial starvation weakens them so that other complications kill them.

The protein injection leaves only fats and vitamins out to complete the "ideal diet" by needle.

Solution of the protein injection puzzle was reported by Dr. Robert Elman, of Washington University School of Medicine, St. Louis. He injects the amino acids, of which proteins are made.

This amounts to a detour around Nature's own method's. When meat, eggs, milk and other proteins are eaten, the human body does not use them directly, but breaks them into amino acids. These acids it rebuilds into the proteins peculiar to human body.

Harvest Prospects Dim Slightly In U.S.

CHICAGO, June 17 (AP) — The brilliant United States harvest prospects of a fortnight ago dimmed somewhat during the first half of June, a survey of the farm belt disclosed today, but large crop production still is expected by grain experts.

Whereas an all-time record wheat production was forecast officially two weeks ago, most authorities believe now a big harvest comparable with average yields of recent satisfactory growing seasons is more likely, unless further unlooked-for crop damage occurs.

Because of spreading black rust, wet weather and discovery of frost damage inflicted earlier in the year many experts revised June 1 estimates of winter wheat production, some cutting as much as 100,000,000 bushels from their figures. The June 1 government forecast was 761,000,000 bushels.

The changed crop outlook has had little effect on farm income prospects, experts said. Reduction of wheat estimates has been offset by an advance of about 12 cents in the price since June 1. Rye is up five cents, corn two cents and oats one cent.

Profiting by the munitions boom, factory workers of Japan are switching to more expensive cigarettes while the general public is seeking cheaper brands.

Mother Branded Son's Worst Enemy With Father Close Second

Southport, Eng., June 17 (CP)

FATHER of two children, Raymond Henniker-Heaton, noted psychologist, shocked delegates attending the conference here of the British Union of Practical Psychologists by branding as public enemies No. one and two parents of the growing generation.

"It is a pity we have to have parents," he said. "There are songs, 'what is home without a mother,' and 'a boy's best friend is his mother.'

"Yet in spite of all these eulogisms, who is the potential, the most deadly enemy of the boy? The mother is and the father comes a good second."

Mr. Henniker-Heaton attributed the present state of "chaos and unrest" to the faulty upbringing of the individual. The tragedy of the badly-reared child went beyond the individual. It was damaging to the state and to the highest development of the human race.

"Indeed, more children are ruined by parental love than lack of it," he said.

"I haven't much to say on behalf of father, except that he doesn't sail under false colors. No son extols his virtues.

Nazis Going In Red 2 Billion Annually

BERLIN, June 17.— (AP) —Germany's spending for rearmament, public works projects and the four-year self-sufficiency plan is sinking the nation into the red at the rate of 7,000,000,000 marks ($2,800,000,000) annually, according to a reliable estimate.

Despite this, the expenditures are continuing without apparent let-up —and Germany finds itself in the midst of a boom, government-financed through credit inflation, which informed quarters said could continue indefinitely.

The extent of government outpouring of money is reflected at least partially in the cost of rearmament, conservatively estimated by authoritative sources at 15,000,000,000 marks ($6,000,000,000) since the Nazis came to power in 1933.

This trend is further shown by the fact that 80 per cent. of new construction is public. Moreover it is authoritatively predicted that investments under the four-year plan will run into billions of marks, including the costs of new iron works and factories for making synthetic materials such as staple fiber and artificial rubber (buna).

10 Million Scramble

LONDON, June 17 (CP-Havas)—The scramble to buy gold as a result of wholly unconfirmed rumors president Roosevelt contemplated further devaluation of the dollar was the subject of comment in the Financial Press today.

"United States scare causes ten Million Sterling City (London) Gold Scramble" was the headline of the financial page of the Daily Express.

"Overnight rumors that Mr. Roosevelt was preparing a fresh cut in gold value of the dollar frightened holders of dollars throughout the world into cabling instructions to see their dollar holdings and buy gold," the Express said.

May Vaccinate Calves For Bangs Disease

GUELPH, Ont., June 17.—(CP)—Three plans for combating Bang's Disease which costs Canadian cattlemen hundreds of thousands of dollars per year, were outlined to agricultural representatives in conference at the Ontario Agricultural College today by Dr. C. D. McGilvray, principal of the Ontario Veterinary College. Plan A calls for blood testing of the herd with reactors removed and the herd retested at intervals. Plan B calls for developing of clean herds from non-reactors kept in a separate unit and Plan C calfhood vaccination on an experimental basis. This last plan is one in which cattlemen are particularly interested as much work along this line has been conducted in the United States.

A blood test will be made of the entire herd and if badly infected calfhood vaccination may be adopted with vaccination restricted to calves under 12 months of age providing they are negative to the test. No reacting animals will be inoculated. Following vaccination the calves will be tested every 30 days until they show two negative tests or until six retests have been made, if deemed desirable. Blood tests will be made on all vaccinated animals twice a year.

French Reds, Rightists Fight in Chamber

PARIS, June 17—(AP)—An alarm signal summoning guards to clear the hall sounded today in the Chamber of Deputies for the first time in a decade as Communist and Rightist deputies fought over France's policy toward the Spanish civil war.

The two extreme factions mingled in a free-for-all over the Communists' demands that France end her policy of non-intervention and open the way to aid for the Spanish government.

Two Rightist deputies, Fernand Claudet and Francois Peugeot, were injured and were escorted from the chamber with blood dripping from their faces.

2 Car Thieves Crash Killing One

2nd Critically Hurt As Pair Flee Ottawa Police

OTTAWA June 18—(CP)—Attempting to escape from police officers, one man was killed instantly and another critically injured today when the stolen car in which they were racing along the Russell Road, just outside the southern city limits, smashed off a Hydro pole and crashed into a tree.

Roger Pion of Ottawa, driver of the car, was killed and Edward D'Aoust, also of Ottawa, suffered possible fractured skull, fracture of both legs and other injuries. D'Aoust was taken to hospital.

Police officers noticed the stolen car roaring through South Ottawa and tried to block the road. The thieves clipped the bumper of the police car and swerved past. After repairing the damage, the cruiser gave chase and caught up with the stolen car as it left the highway and plunged into the Hydro pole and the tree.

An inquest will be held into Pion's death.

Chas. Stapleton Dies In Toronto

Charles S. Stapleton, 77, sanitary inspector here for more than twenty years, died suddenly this morning (Saturday) at the home of his daughter in Toronto. He had been in failing health for more than a year, and suffered a stroke early this morning, dying shortly afterwards.

Mr. Stapleton worked with the old grocery firm of Elcome and Stapleton on George Street for a number of years, and joined the city's employ as sanitary inspector in 1917. He held that position until last year, when ill-health forced him to retire.

He was visiting at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ralph Carroll, in Toronto, when his death occurred. His wife, formerly Elizabeth Mercer, survives, together with two daughters.

New York, June 18 (CP).

WITH JOHNNY Vander Meer writing baseball history with two successive no-hit, no-run games, Gabe Peterello saw no point hanging around town when he could be having his shot at fame on the Sing Sing Prison ball team. Gabe, a graduate of the Sing Sing team, walked up to a patrolman today, stuck a gun in his ribs and then submitted calmly to disarmament and arrest.

"I want to go back to Sing Sing," Gabe explained. "Down here I'm just a bum. Up there I was on the ball team."

Charge Private M.P's Have Too Little Work

OTTAWA, June 18.—(CP).—Private members of Parliament have not enough to say in the framing of legislation, in the opinion of Harry Leader (Lib. Portage La Prairie). Such things are usually settled in the departments, and he finds it "irksome."

In the House yesterday Mr. Leader made a plea for more work and he urged that members of rural ridings, familiar with the livestock industry and he did not think a special parliamentary committee next year to investigate breeding and marketing conditions.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner said his newly re-organized department was making arrangements for a continuous study of the livestock industry and he di dnot think a House committee was necessary. But he would consider it.

Mr. Leader referred to charges brought several days ago by Hon. H. H. Stevens (Recon. Kooteney East) with respect to operations of Canada Packers Limited.

"He stated some of the packers have been making monkeys out of officers of the Department," Mr. Leader said. "I have sometimes though members of parliament were being treated the same way." Mr. Leader's suggestion came during consideration of agriculture department estimates.

Opposition Leader Bennett suggested an inquiry might be made by the Tariff Board, particularly with reference to lack of competition in live stock marketing and charges that were heard from time to time against the pacers. Mr. Gardiner promised to give consideration to the proposals.

Closing End of Month?

The House dealt with the estimates, the housing legislation and several other items and made considerable progress. On Monday the budget debate will open and the drive will be opened to reach prorogation by the end of the month. Wednesday night sittings will start next week.

J. S. Woodsworth, C.C.F. leader, was given support by Mr. Leader, Bennett, Tom Reid (Lib. New Westminster) and Daniel McIvor (Lib. Fort William) for his bell to so amend the Criminal Code as to force employers to permit their workers to organize without hindrance. But the bill was "talked out" during the hour devoted to private measures.

3,500 Towns Flooded Over China

Japs See Little Hope For 200,000 Trapped Refugees

SHANGHAI, June 18.—(AP). —China's overflowingk Yellow River, which apparently has saved Hankow, the provisional capital, from danger of a northern attack for many months, was declared by Japanese to-day to have trapped 200,000 Chinese eyond all hope of rescue.

The flood waters were declared by Japanese military authorities to have extended over an additional area of 600 square miles in the last 24 hours.

The flood zone covered 1,600 square miles. Two thousand villages and hamlets in the rich agricultural province of Honan were submerged, and 1,500 others invaded by the upsurging currents.

With 700,000 refugees fleeing before the water, Japanese reports said there was no indication whatsoever of the flood abating.

Japanese said they were caring for 200,000 of the refugees but that the plight of thousands, their homes and fields blanketed by mud and water, was extreme. Thousands,they said, were eating the bark of trees in desperate efforts to survive.

Jap Units Cut Off.

Many Japanese units were isolated, but it was believed their situation in most cases was not serious since they were able to commandeer boats.

Some of the isolated units were experiencing a food shortage, it was reported, but a Japanese official said various forms of concentrated food was being supplied by airplanes.

Chinese reports said the area directly east of north-south railway from Hankow to Chengchow had been cleared of all Japanese troops, and that guerrillas were active in the Lunghai area, adding further to the Japanese predicament.

Dunning's Budget Lauded In London

LONDON, June 18 (C.P. Cable).—The Evening Standard (Independent) in an editorial on the Canadian budget to-day said Finance Minister Dunning "has come out with an extraordinarily good statement and he has done better than anyone expected."

"In a year of drought, when relief in the Prairie Provinces had to be three times what it was in the previous year, he was able to announce a reduced deficit." The Evening Standard added.

"What is more, Mr. Dunning denounces pump priming and said it was small use to prime with Government money the pump of business enterprise if at the same time they dried up the springs of private initiative which fed the well.

"That was well said. Canada has got a good Finance Minister, and if the Prairies give crops this year the Dominion will be first from the depression."

No Hydro Graft Suggestion Says Conant After Probe

Hepburn Reveals Atkinson C.I.O. Threat, Says Hogg, Conant Behind Power Deal

TORONTO, June 18 (CP).—Ten days of inquiry into affairs of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission, long a debating platform for the province's two major political parties, were recorded today in testimony that will be reported on by a special committee of the provincial legislature.

As the bristling, often bitter, probe ended yesterday, Attorney - General Gordon Conant, committee chairman, said there "has not been one suggestion of graft in dealing with Hydro affairs." Leopold Macaulay, Conservative leader in the Legislature whose charges led to the committee's appointment, agreed with: "And that goes for Hydro life for years back."

Mr. Macaulay, when the House was in session this spring, charged Premier Hepburn "misled" the voters in the election campaign which resulted in the Liberals' return to power last Oct. 6. The Premier, he alleged, was advocating a "back-to-Niagara" policy while negotiating secretly with the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company and other Quebec corporations for renewal of contracts signed by a Conservative government and cancelled by the Legislature under Mr. Hepburn in 1935.

Mr. Hepburn, testifying most yesterday afternoon, declared it was not until "long after" the election that he changed his mind on purchase of Quebec contracts. Then it was Mr. Conant and Dr. T. H. Hogg, commission chairman who convinced him of the need for a policy change, he said.

The Attorney-General told him the province had no hope of winning if Beauharnois, already successful in Ontario courts, went to the Privy Council over the cancellation o fits contract. The possibility of transferring all Hydro

Czech Warplane Stirs Fresh Berlin Protest

BERLIN, June 18 — (AP) — A Czechoslovak airplane, apparently a military machine, which flew over German territory provoked a new outburst in the Berlin morning Press today.

The Lokalanziger said it was understood the German government would make a "new, sharp protest" and commented, "excuses are useless."

A report from Lam, Bavarian village about four miles from the border, said the plane flew about for 30 minutes, its passengers apparently observing and photographing the roads and buildings of the vicinity.

(The incident came just as Czechoslovakia announced the class of 70,000 reserves, called up May 21 when it was reported German troops were moving toward the border, was being discharged. The Government at Praha said, however, that the army would be kept at its approximate strength of 500,000 by the calling of all conscripts due to begin their training this year.)

Commenting on the border incident at Lam, the Berliner Tageblatt asserted, "Germany watches over the inviolability of its borders with the same energy and carefulness with which it concerns itself about the maintenance of peace."

Chancellor Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter accused Praha of violating "the most primitive regulations of International Law" 'and of using "Bolshevistic methods, thereby playing dangerously with fire."

Ancient Weapons

DRESDEN, Ont., June 18 (CP).—Clarence Breaton, Great War veteran here, has developed a museum of weapons and ammunition dating back to 1780. In his collection is an old bayonet and scabbord of the type used in European wars of last century which was dug out of Lake Erie by a sand-sucker.

Noted Pole Dies

WARSAW, June 18. — (AP).—Stanislaw Car, 56, president of the Sejm (Lower Chamber of Uarliament) since 1935, died last night of uremia. He was one of the principal authors of the Polish constitution in 1935.

Nazis Smear Jew Windows With "Traitor"

BERLIN, June 18 (A.P.). — Huge three-foot high red letters on shop windows across from the City Hall saying: "Jew—whoever buys here is a traitor to his people," greeted Berlin's Mayor when he entered his office to-day.

The inscription appeared on the windows of a Jewish store in the Koenigstrasse not far from the Kaiser's former city palace.

With crowds of curious passers-by watching and enjoying the scenes along a four-mile front, Nazi painting squads worked into the morning hours smearing more than 100 Jewish store windows with anti-Semitic slogans.

Police were conspicuously absent while this manifestation of Berlin's latest anti-Jewish campaign—police raids on Jewish homes, cafes and places of amusement which were said to have been ordered by Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels himself—continued.

Berlin's thickly populated Frankfurter Allee and its side streets were the centre of the Nazi activity.

All branches of business— hardware, drygoods, furniture, clothing, leather, shoe stores—were objects of the smearing attacks.

Warn Girls.

During the early hours last night mobs also smashed numerous shop windows.

In the middle of the Frankfurter Allee one United States-owned chain store stood untouched while to its right and left two Jewish storefronts were demolished beyond recognition. So well was the job done that not a single letter of identification remained to indicate the store's owner or what merchandise was on sale.

A high Nazi source said Goebbels learned a constant stream of Jews was descending upon the capital because they believed the presence of a large Diplomatic Corps and many foreign newspaper correspondents would afford them some protection.

Heads Airlines

Director-General of the British Broadcasting Corporation for the past 11 years, Sir John Reith (above), has been appointed full-time chairman of Imperial Airways Ltd. The position, one of great importance in the British government's plans, has been vacant since March, following the recommendation of the Committee on Civil Aviation that a person be appointed who could devote all his time to it. Reith is 49, and was in charge of Britain's munition contracts in United States during the war.

75,000 Federal Workers Ordered To Prepare For Strike Across France

Embarrassing Situation Seen Looming If Walkout Ties Nation Just Prior To King George's Visit

PARIS, June 18 (AP).—The union of Public Service Workers today instructed France's 750,000 government employees to make immediate preparations for a general strike to force the government to grant blanket wage increases.

The union includes railroad, telegraph, telephone and postal employees as well as the civil service personnel.

The central committee issued its strike threat last night after Premier Edouard Daladier had stifled parliamentary debate on demands of the union by adjourning parliament until November.

A special session of the committee—the third within two days—was called this morning to plan the strategy for the tie-up, which would be particularly embarrassing to the government if it were called just before the arrival of King George and Queen Elizabeth for their state visit June 28.

The government employees are asking a 10 per cent wage increase to meet the rising cost of living caused by devaluation of the franc.

Demands Upset Budget

Daladier told them that their demands would throw the budget out of balance and upset his whole plan for reviving France's economic life. He promised to see what could be done in the 1939 budget.

Government employees, or "fonctionaires," who operate all France's vital services in the smallest villages as well as Paris, usually start out at the age of 21 with an annual salary of 10,000 francs (about $277). This increases according to length of service to a maximum of 150,000 francs (about $4,155).

Australia After Empire-U.S. Three-Way Pact

LONDON, June 18—Negotiations for a new trade pact between Great Britain and Australia now are moving ahead. Delays in Anglo-American trade talks at Washington had delayed the London talks between Great Britain and Australia.

When the Australian delegation, headed by Sir Earle Page, deputy prime minister, arrived in London at the end of May it was hoped that the Washington talks would be sufficiently advanced for the Australian negotiations to get down to something concrete.

But the slow going at Washington meant that the London talks had to be confined to a discussion of general principles. The proposed Anglo-Australian pact will replace the Ottawa agreement which lays down certain fixed margins of preference for Australian products in the British market.

Ottawa Principal Stands.

The Americans are understood to be asking trade concessions in the British market which in some cases would cut across the Ottawa preferences The Washington and London talks, therefore, are closely linked. Despite the delays, however, the Anglo-Australian negotiators are in agreement that the principles of Empires preference embodied in the Ottawa agreement shall stand. The margins of preference, however, need to be changed.

The possibility of a triangular trade pact between the United Kingdom, the United States, and Australia has been suggested. Under such a scheme American manufacturers would be given a better market in Australia. Australian and New Zealand lamb, mutton and butter would be given facilities in the American market. The Australian-American negotiations, however, it is reported, have not advanced beyond the tentative stage.

2,000 Trout Lovers Fish One Pond

KITCHENER, Ont., June 18 (CP). —Three years ago, the Bridgeport dam was stocked with thousands of lusty young trout. Today it was opened for the first time to the public and 2,000 anglers swarmed all over the place, cramming the banks and nudging one another's boats in hectic disarray.

As far as could be learned, 10 trout were caught in the massed attack.

There were hundreds of carp caught, however.

Eire Begins Counting Election Ballots

DUBLIN, June 18 (A.P.). — Checking of returns began to-day throughout Eire following yesterday's general election with prospects that some results would be announced before nightfall and the remainder on Sunday or Monday.

Heavy polling in towns contrasted with lack of interest in the country constituencies as the voters chose between Prime Minister de Valera's Fianna Fail Party ad the Fine Gael headed by William Cosgrave. Labor also sought to increase its representation which reached 13 in the last House of 138 members.

Little change in the standing in the Dail Eireann, the Lower House of Parliament, was forecast. Should the Fianna Fail lose a few seats, the possibility was not excluded of an alliance between Fine Gael and Labor.

At dissolution on May 27 the Government had 68 seats, including the Speaker; Fine Gael 48, Labor 13, and Independents eight.

Lebrun To Visit U.S.

PARIS, June 18.—(AP).—President Albert Lebrun of France tentatively accepted an invitation to-day to attend the 1939 New York World's Fair. He will be the first French president ever to visit the United States.

Budget Silences All Rumors Of Election This Fall

OTTAWA, June 18 (CP). — The Dunning budget apparently has silenced all rumors of a general election this year, but it has revived talk of a fall session to consider trade treaties with Great Britain and the United States.

For six months or more there have been sporadic rumors of an election in the fall, all without official endorsation. But they died—at least in the eyes of political observers here—when Finance Minister Dunning presented his budget Thursday. It was not regarded as a pre-election budget in any sense of the term, making no tariff changes, few taxation changes.

A fall session to deal with trade treaties depends entirely on negotiations now proceeding in Washington.

If new agreements with Great Britain and the United States are signed, it will not be necessary for parliament to approve them before they go into operation.

Logging Tragedy

VICTORIA, June 18 — (CP) — J. Tsumura, injured in a logging camp accident at Fanny Bay, north of here ,which sent five other Japanese to hospital Thursday, died in hospital last night. They were riding a railway speeder when it collided with a logging truck on the track. Five were seriously hurt.

3 Inches Of Hail

CLAYTON, N.M., June 18 (A.P.). —A pelting hailstorm deposited three inches of hail on highways on the New Mexico-Texas line east of here yesterday, hampering rail and automobile travel. Stones drifted as deep as three feet.

No Garages Provided For Occupants Of Low-Rental Units

Ottawa, June 18 (CP).

OCCUPANTS of the new low-cost, low-rental housing erected under housing bill now before the House of Commons are not expected to be automobile owners, Finance Minister Dunning told the House today as the bill was considered in Committee of the Whole.

Denton Massey (Cons., Toronto-Greenwood) had asked if garages wolud be built in conjunction with the housing units, but Mr. Dunning said it hadn't been considered.

Where the Government was subsidizing housing for benefit of people who were unable to pay an economic rent, the Minister did not think garages should or need be provided. Provision could be made for commercial space in such housing projects where stores and shops might be carried on.

Triple Crash Fatal

CORNWALL, Ont., June 18. —(CP).—Gower Fleming, 57, farmer, was almost instatly killed in an accident involving three automobiles four miles north of here to-day.

Fleming was standing beside his automobile which had been in collision with another car when the third vehicle in charge of John W. Grant, Maxville, crashed into the Fleming car. Fleming died before medical aid could be summoned.

Red Deer Showing Surplus Fears Jobless Influx

CALGARY, June 18—(CP)— Red Deer has such a favorable financial position that civic officials are beginning to worry Mayor E. S. Hogg of that town 100 miles north of Calgary with a population of 2,200 told the annual convention of the Union of Alberta municipalities.

"News of our good finances and credit balances bring lots of people to the city looking for work," he said last night. "And we don't need them.

"Just because we record annual surpluses donesn't mean we have no unemployment."

He had to "apologize" to the city council last year, he added, because it was discovered at the end of the year the surplus was $4,000 double that for which he had budgeted.

"There is nothing mysterious about how Red Deer got on her feet financially," the mayor went on.

Revenues from the civic electric light and water plants were largely responsible for the city's good financial position. Most capital expenditures were made from current revenue.

Lock Of Nelson's Hair Brings $55 At English Sale

Dorchester, Eng., June 18 (AP).

A WISP of hair clipped from the head of Admiral Lord Nelson, famed sea dog who gave the signal "England expects that every man will do his duty," at the Battle of Trafalgar, was sold at auction here Friday for £11 ($55).

The lock was among heirlooms of the family of Masterman Thomas Hardy, Nelson's flag captain. It was clipped by Lady Emma Hamilton, Nelson's dearest friend and the wife of a British Ambassador to Naples.

Hardy's nightshirt was knocked down for 32 shillings.

A One-Way Ride

New York, June 18—(AP)—It were a one-way ride that two Brooklyn boys took on top of a speeding subway train. The boys, Donald Munoz, 11, and William Layden, 12, dropped to the top of the train from a viaduct on the outskirts of the city. They clung to the swaying car for two stations, and then the train dipped underground. The tunnel was too low to clear them, and the boys—panic-stricken but helpless—were knocked to the roadbed. Donald died in a hosptial. Physicians said William his skull fractured had little chance to live.

Marmoran Hunts Treasure Off Brighton

BRIGHTON, June 18.—Treasure hunters on Proctor's Island ran up against solid rock yesterday afternoon and were forced to resort to blasting.

Thursday the men reached the sand and thought that they would soon reach their objective, but were disappointed after clearing away the sand to find solid rock.

W. C. Spry, Marmora, prospector, with the aid of two laborers, is digging on Bluff Point, for a $50,000 buried treasure supposed to have been hidden by a greatgrandfather of Morley Snelgrove, who is at present the lesee of the island.

The treasure was supposed to have been buried during the flight of the United Empire Loyalists from the United States. Work slowed up considerably yesterday afternoon because of the rock and was hampered by the many people who visited the island to satisfy their curiosity.

The visitors crossed to the island by motor boat, rowboat and on horseback. The horses are able to cross to the island on a sand bar, which is above the water most of the way, but dips below the surface in four places.

Mr. Snelgrove, whom Spry and his workers say is the instigator of the hunt, still refuses to admit his connection with the treasure hunters.

Baby Lindsay "Vag" Finds Police Home

LINDSAY, June 18. — Without any visible means of support, a wanderer was arrested on William Street early yesterday morning and the police officers didn't know what to do about it all. The "vagrant" was the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Furphy, who decided to make a tour of the town, clad only in a brief shirt.

It was two a.m. and raining hard when Constable Reeves received a call to pick up the infant. He found him walking aimlessly along the street but repeated questioning failed to yield any information as to who he was and where he lived. Constable Reeves, being single and not knowing much about the ways of babies, called in a married member of the force, Constable Simmett. The latter decided to take the three-year-old home with him and put him to bed.

At six o'clock the officer received a telephone call from the frantic mother who said her baby had been kidnapped. She was assured the lad was safe and sleeping peacefully.

It was learned the child slipped out the back door and onto the street. Fortunately he did not go in the direction of the nearby railway tracks, otherwise he might have been killed.

No Loads For Freighters

GODERICH, Ont., June 18—(CP)— Three upper lake freighters, the D. B. Hanna, the Windoc and the Mantadoc, have been laid up at this port for lack of cargoes and about 60 sailors are leaving for their homes, some as far away as Fort William.

A fourth boat was expected to lay up today, it was learned. Several Goderich sailors have come home from other ports.

Snatcher Uses Needle

TORONTO, June 18 (CP) — A purse-snatcher who jabbed an intended victim in the forehead with a needle was sought by Toronto police today. Mrs. Maude Routley was walking with a woman friend about midnight last night when the snatcher grabbed for her purse. Both tugged hard at the purse, Mrs. Routley told police, until the man whirled her around. She suddenly felt a pain in her forehead. Then the blood started to spurt.

Irish Independence Passion Dates Back Over 800 Years

By DR. ALEXANDER CAIRNS
An American Commentator on Ireland

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, June 16.—There are several imposing monuments of great men standing in front of Trinity college in Dublin. They are all sons of the world-famous institution which was founded in 1320. There is Edmund Burke of the golden tongue, and Oliver Goldsmith, who immortalized the little Irish town of Lissoy by calling it "The Deserted Village." There is Thomas Moore, the sweet singer of Ireland, who was a chum of Robert Emmett in Old Trinity. And there is Henry Grattan, "who rocked the cradle of Ireland and stood by its casket."

One of the most tragic and pathetic pictures in all history was that of Henry Grattan in his feeble old age tottering out of the Irish house of parliament after it had been dissolved by order of the British government. He was the one most responsible for the establishment of that legislative body. And he was a magnificent and irresistible orator. One time he closed a masterly address by declaring, "I shall never be satisfied so long as the meanest cottager in Ireland has one link of the British chain clanking to his rags."

Southern Irelands Dream

Those burning words comprehend the dream of southern Ireland. Three thousand years ago, before Rome established on her seven hills or Athens lifted her proud head and became the glory of Greece—back in those dim milleniums Ireland was standing on her threshold fighting back the Viking invaders of the north. And every Irishman south of Ulster would declare that for the past 800 years Ireland has been fighting and struggling for freedom and for independence.

The greatness of any country or nation is measured by her passion or vision of spiritual life. The Italian renaissance, that new birth from the shades of medievalism, was the very voice of the spiritual life of Italy. Plato, into whose brain the whole world still nestles and thinks out, bespoke the immortality of Greece. Go where you will over the broad earth and you will hear men talk of the freedom of America with the stress on individual expression. Just so, the passion of Ireland is independence.

Revival of Gaelic Tongue

The revival of the Gaelic language in southern Ireland is little short of a miracle. A prominent educator in County Waterford told me that there are school where only the old Irish tongue is used and some 80 subjects are taught in that language. It is a part of the genius of Eire. And it is good.

Robert Louis Stevenson said: "If Ireland were a volcanic island and should sink some night into the sea, the world would be bereft of more than half of its poetic and imaginative people. The Irish have as rich and beauteous a harvest of myth and romance as ever flourished among any race." Stevenson is right. There is no more interesting myth, folk lore and history on the face of the earth than that of Ireland. And to recover that genius and give it back to the world is a task worthy of any nation for any length of time. Gaelic music is also in the midst of a revival which promises to do as much for Ireland as the Negro spirituals have done for America.

Back of Erin's struggle for independence is the idetical philosophy that inspired the United States in her revolution and rebellion. It is "the spirit of '76 afire in Ireland." Rousseau, born amidst the liberty-echoes mountains of Switzerland, and perfected in the seething cauldron of French civic strife, became one of the fathers of the French revolution, philosophically speaking. Paine imbibed the spirit of Rousseau's "Social Contract" and wrote it into his "Rights of Man." Thomas Jefferson imbibed the spirit of the "Rights of Man" and wrote it into the American Declaration of Independence. And the very soul of that philosophy was this, that nobody has a right to govern a people without that people's consent. And that is the inspiration and instigation of Ireland's struggle for independence.

With the signing of the recent Anglo-Irish agreement, much of Irelands struggle for independence has been won. Long years of bitter strife and hatred has been ended and a happy relationship between Ireland and the United Kingdom has been started.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"Phillipina"—Thank you for your letter of appreciation. In re your difficulty, I think you would be wise to follow my own rule, "when in doubt, do nothing, say nothing." These things make life very disagreeable, but hold on to your patience and it will surprise you how soon the trouble will blow over. Do write again.

"Bruno"—What can you gain by kicking over the traces? We all feel as if we were beating our heads against a stone wall many times in our lives, but find too, that the wall is stronger than our head. Keep trying and you will not always be the underdog, but will find a way to overcome this. Yes, I will write an article along these lines. Thank you for kind remarks, and do write again.

"Mother"—All you can do, my dear, is what you did when they had the measles or whooping cough. Do your best, don't nag, understand that this is just a phase, and in a little while your heart will be at ease. All mothers go through these things, and they generally come out alright. You have given them a good groundwork, and it will bear fruit. I am so glad to have been of help to you and these others. Thank you and do write again.

"Martha"—Yes, my girl, there are still "Martha's" and "Mary's" and both are right to a certain extent. On the other hand, who asked you to take all this load on yourself? Remember, the willing horse draws the load, so don't be quite so willing. A little dose of the same medicine will work wonders here, and as you were the one to shoulder all this, you are the one to drop some of the load on your sister's shoulders. Thank you for your lovely comments, good luck, and do write telling me how you make out.

"Eileen"—No, I do not agree with you. You are on the wrong track, and the sooner you leave it the better. Many girls have tried this all down the centuries, and they were the losers in the long run. Men like to be unconventional themselves, but they hate it in their women. It is better to be lonely with your self respect, than lonely without it. Think that over before you do anything you will regret. Am so glad to have been of such help, and do write again soon.

"Margot" — Any religion which never doubts will not work. Yours will only make you seek until you find the truth. Right now I have doubts myself as to whether my prayers are being heard and will be answered, for there is no sign at all. But they have been heard and answered before, and will be again if I can hang on to my patience, which is a hard thing to learn. "Search and ye shall find" applies now as it did when He was on earth. Thanks so much and please write again.

To "E.M.F."—If there were anything better I had found in my journey through life, I would tell you. We are all "doubting Thomases" in a manner of speaking. We all want quick results and get impatient and despondent when they are delayed. No one could answer that question, many have tried including my self. Sometimes we do not start our prayers soon enough but wait until a crises arises, maybe that is your trouble. I do thank you for what you say, it is nice to know. Thank you and write again soon. To all others who sent such lovely letters, I thank you all.

Your Friend, ROBERTA

Suggest Abandoning Two Lindsay Lines

OTTAWA, June 18—(CP)—Co-operative possibilities that should be studied with a view to effecting enforced economies and covering a wide field of railway activities are before the senate railways committee Friday which stood adjourned until Tuesday. R. C. Vaughan, vice-president in charge of the Canadian National Purchasing department, presented them.

While it was impossible to estimate the value of the economies embraced in his list, Mr. Vaughan said last night he was confident that even under present depressed conditions "these would be substantial."

The committee's enquiry is nearing its close. On Tuesday representatives will be heard from railway employees. Spokesmen of the Standard Railway Unions and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees will appear, while on Wednesday Sir Edward W. Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific, will again make a submission to the committee.

In addition to elimination of 2,467,307 train miles in duplication of passenger services, Mr. Vaughan's proposals contemplated the following line abandonments in Ontario: (The railway and mileage are in brackets):

Arnprior to Renfrew (C.N. 17); Payne to Eganville (C.N. 22); Glen Tay to Whitby (C.P. 88); Lindsay to Coldwater (C.P. 57); Woodstock to Ringold (C.P. 17); Key Jct. to Key Harbor (C.N. 6); Linwood to Listowel (C.P. 17); Bala to Wanup (C.N. 135).

Biblical Thoughts For the Shut-Ins

By Rev. E. R. James
Toronto

What Do I Know About the Bible?

Jesus said unto His disciples I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. St. John 16:12.

Our Lord's own words to His Apostles. How many a teacher of the faith has sorrowfully, sadly uttered this same statement when he thought of his people and their needs.

Some years ago the writer was privileged to meet a scholarly clergyman of the Methodist Church, minister of an important charge in Canada. The writer congratulated him on the fact that he would be able to teach his educated congregation many things from his fund of modern knowledge. The minister exclaimed: "I have some of the finest business executives in Canada in my congregation. They are very much alive to modern needs and ideas. But when it comes to Holy Scripture they are 30 years behind the times. They are not able to receive the new wine of modern thought."

Four hundred years ago the Bible in the English tongue was ordered to be placed in the parish churches of England—the largest copies published—and the people were encouraged to come to the Church and read it from the lectern. The open Bible has been the greatest treasure of the English race. Untold multitudes have read, marked, learnt and inwardly digested its truths. These truths were as honey in their mouths for sweetness.

Today it is still the open Bible. It is the best seller, more copies published than any other book. Yet it is the book less read by the multitudes.

The writer purposes in a series of articles, by God's help, to pass on to you some of the wonders of the Book. He hopes to open to you some of its treasures so that you will go back to it and strive to discover other jewels. He has many things to say to you but he wonders whether you are able to bear them.

There is a feeling among the young people coming out of our high schools and universities that the Bible is a discredited book and that modern criticism has shattered it completely. Like every other book modern criticism has examined it and it has come through the examination as a still more wonderful book than ever before. The fires of modern criticism has undoubtedly burnt away many of the old ideas —the wood, hay and stubble have been destroyed, but not the gold, silver and precious stones. 1 Cor 3; 12.

The writer has been preaching from the Word for nearly 40 years. That is, he has lived through these years of the intensive examination of the Bible by critical, conservative scholars. They have cleared away many difficulties for him and he desires to pass on some of these new treasures of the Book so that thoughtful young men and women may feel encouraged to read it with fresh enthusiasm and desire, not only as literature unsurpassed for its English, but as containing Divine revelation of God, Who has spoken in divers manners in times past unto the fathers by the prophets and has also spoken unto by His son.

The Book is both human and divine. It is God speaking to man in spite of man's inability and shortcomings to understand, here a little there a little, line upon line and precept upon precept. We see in it God's divine patience in revealing Himself to man according as he is able to bear it. Our character of redemption from the letter of the word is taught by God's revelation to Jeremiah: "Behold, the days come saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the House of Israel. I will put my law in their inward parts and in their hearts will I write it and I will be their God and they will be my people". Jer 31;31. This is our emancipation from the slavery of the letter and makes us free of its spiritual and personal teachings. It is written on the hearts of men. A man's experience is his soul of God's dealing with him and his trust in God. It is a human book. It takes into account man's nature to go to the depths and also to the heights. Have you discovered in your personal experience God speaking to you in the words of the Psalm: "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want". If you like multitudes of men and women in the day of trouble, weakness and ill health exclaimed: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil for Thou are with me", and discovered its truth, you have found the Book both human and divine.

It is a human book—God dealing with you and me in ways we can understand. It is a divine Book also, revealing God to us.

"I did eat the Book and it was in my mouth as honey for sweetness". Ezek. 3:3.

A National Message

Today the Common Law prevails in the Empire and the U.S.A. The civil law in the European countries largely. The Moslem Law prevails in the free Mohammedan States. These two latter systems are giving away before the Common Law.

Again, the language in which the Common Law has been expressed for ages past has been and still is the English language. Every phrase, clause and term of the Common Law has been expressed in the English language and their meaning is known and fixed. To translate these into another language would be to endanger the continuance of the meaning and the spirit of the law. The growth of this language and the spread of this law are two outstanding events in the world's history.

Whence did Britain get the Common Law? Blackstone declares for the Divine origin of the Law. The source of the Common Law was Israel and Britain received it from Jerusalem and Sinai. King Alfred, the Great Saxon Lawgiver, declares emphatically that the Common Law of England came to us from the Law given of God on Sinai. He quotes verbatim from the Books of Moses.

Moses carries the law back to Abraham; saying of Abraham, "Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws" (Gen.xxvi, 5).

Again, Moses carries the origin of the law back to the Garden of Eden. and brings us to that wonderful point in the history of human psychology when for the first time the External law became impressed and imposed upon the life of man. It was a most momentous time of which Moses writes, "And the Lord God commanded the man." This was the advent of the Common Law on Earth.

Thus we find that the Common Law came into the world when the "Lord God commanded the man" in the Garden of Eden. The Law was kept by the Seth line to Noah and Shem to Abraham, as we learn from the book of Jasher and was kept by him as the Bible testifies.

Cathedral Musings

Most of us, at some time or another, are apt to think that life is a grim, hard business. We encounter great difficulties, we meet with sorrows and sufferings that seem beyond our capacity to bear. We ask "Why?" and the heavens are silent. It is at such times especially, that have need of the Sacred Wisdom. It is then we need to realize that was are going through the hard school of experience; that in the end we shall be other than what we now are. We need to realize that God has no use for hot-house people; that we must, of necessity, go through all experience and conquer it. Most of all, we need to realize that we create our own evil by our ignorance. To live this life as easily and pleasantly as possible is the general attitude, but life has a way of revenging itself on those who try to evade its responsibilities. We tend to blame Heaven for the ills that afflict us, yet they are of our own creation. We live high tensioned, artificial lives and when nerves and body rebel in sickness, we piously say it is the Will of God. We look upon death as the greatest evil and so disprove our faith. It all means that we do not understand life in relation to ourselves, nor have we mastered ourselves in relation to life. Think over this last sentence, there is more in it than you realize.

We need breadth and clarity of vision, so that we can put first things first. We need to see life in its true perspective, not in terms of decades but in trems of aeons. We need to realize that we are from eternity to eternity, and that this present garb is but assumed for an instant; that this present personality is exactly what the word implies, a mask, hiding from our gaze the eternal Spirit, the real Self. A living mask, it is true, growing and evolving in the school of life, until it is refined and fitted to merge with the Spirit of God within us amid the rejoicing of the wedding feast. When we come to that point, then will the whole mystery be made clear, and looking back, we shall see that all the sorrow, all the suffering, all the seeming injustice, had a part to play in the shaping of the Man Celestial, and the evils which we have committed against ourselves will have ben transmuted into the eternal good. For God will wipe away all tears.

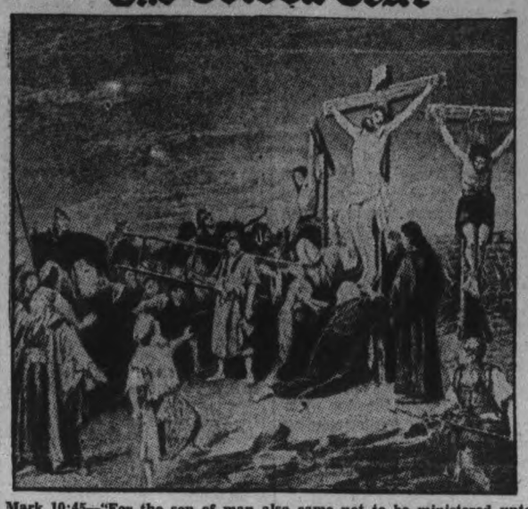
The Golden Text



Mark 10:45—"For the son of man also came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.

The Suffering Servant

"BRASS TOCKS" ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for June 19, is Mark 15:22-39, the Golden Text being Mark 10:45, "For the Son of man also came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.")

"Beneath a Syrian sky, amid a rabble cry, a Man went forth to die—for me! Thorn-stained his blessed head, blood-stained his every tread; cross-laden, on he sped—for me! Lifted up was he to die; 'it is finished,' was his cry; now in heaven exalted high. Hallelujah! What a Saviour."

The Wondrous Cross

Six desperately long hours Jesus hung upon that cruel cross under the prophetic title Pontius Pilate wrote to sting the pride of those who drove him to crucify him. "Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews" was the title which Pilate wrote more wisely than he realized, for Christ was King indeed. The chief priests also spoke as involuntary prophets when they mockingly cried out at him, "He saved others; himself he cannot save." "Let the Christ, the King of Israel, now come down from the cross that we may see and believe." Having come down from the cross by way of the open tomb and a glorious resurrection, even his crucifiers admit that men should believe on him as Christ of God.

The Authority of the Cross

Upon that wondrous cross on which the Prince of Glory died, he exercised complete authority over all the forces of life and death. He had said, "I lay down my life for the sheep; no man taketh it from me; I lay it down, and I have power (authority) to take it again." In this God-given authority he spoke seven authoritative words from the cross: (1) "Father forgive them," a word of authority with the Father for our forgiveness; (2) "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise," a word of authority with us as sinners for our absolution; (3) "Woman, behold thy son," a word of authority to the sorrowing for our comfort; (4) "My God, By God, why has thou forsaken me?" a word of authority with sin for its propitiation; (5) "I thirst." a word of authority with pain to endure it; (6) "It is finished," a word of authority with life to attain its goal; (7) "Father into thy hands I commend my spirit," a word of authority over death to destroy it. In the exercise of this authority our Lord, was not a passive victim on the cross, but supremely active in our behalf.

The Cross and Sin

The battle was at its fiercest point when the loud cry of forsakeness came up from the bottomless pit of spiritual death, "My God, My God, why has thou forsaken me?" How that battle between the seed of the woman and the serpent resulted, all the forces of hell found out when the risen Christ of glory was "made alive in the spirit and went and preached to the spirits in prison," or, as we say in the creed, "descended into hell" and "led captivity captive," heading a great exodus from death's dominion into his presence in paradise, Easter is God's testimony to humanity as to the outcome of that decisive battle of the ages upon which we look in as we hear this agonizing cry of him who was just then being "made sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in him."

The Rent Veil

The effect of the cross is symbolized in God's act in rending the temple veil from the top to the bottom, for thus "the way into the holiest was made manifest" and we "have boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus."

Moral Lessons In Watts' Pictures

George F. Watts celebrated picture "Hope" will be the subject of the address in St. Andrew's Church on next Sunday night. This famous English artist was born in London in 1817. He made a short stay at the Royal Academy schools. His further education was confined to personal experiment and endeavor guided and corrected by a constant appeal to the standard of ancient Greek sculpture. He spent three years in Florence in Italy and thus came in touch with the renowned Italian masters.

His fame in England is revealed by the fact that one of his pictures hangs in the House of Commons, and it was Watts who designed the fresco "St. George Overcomes the Dragon" which adorns the Hall of the Poets in the Houses of Parliament. Many of Watts' distinguished contemporaries sat to him for portraits. Lord Salisbury and Shaftlesbury, John Burns, Tennyson, Browning, Matthew Arnold are only a few of these. Probably he painted the portraits of more distinguished men and women in England than any other artist.

Some of his pictures were clearly meant to teach moral lessons. He never wearies of emphasizing the power of God and exposing the fallacy underlying the fear of death. "Sir Galahad" hangs in the beautiful chapel of Eton College. "Love and Death" was presented by the author to the city of Manchester, and a replica to Tate's Gallery, London.

His picture "Hope" is a paradox and is understood by many people to represent despair rather than hope. The artist's ideas are too deep for a popular picture. Yet this picture has gone around the world, and is probably better known than any other of his works. Its meaning requires explanation however. It has a powerful spiritual message for weary and discouraged people.

A copy of the picture, kindly loaned by Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, will be shown in the front of the church.

Short Hospital Stays

CHICAGO, June 18 (AP) — A Method by which a Rumanian physician puts his patients on their feet directly from the operating table was described today in the journal of the American Medical Association.

"This new method is of inestimable advantage in time of war," the Journal's Bucharest correspondent reported on the work of Dr. Campeanu, lecturer at the University of Bucharest.

"The evacuation of war hospitals thus becomes simplified. By shortening the stay of patients in the hospital.

The Suffering Servant — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By the Rev. Alvin E. Bell And Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Mark 15:22-39.

Pontius Pilate having given Jesus over to his enemies to be crucified, they came to the place of execution, called "Golgotha"—meaning "the place of a skull".

Pilate ordered placed over Jesus' cross the words, "Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews". Two thieves were crucified with Jesus, one on each side.

During the six hours Jesus hung on the cross the mob, including the priests, mocked him, saying, "He saved others; himself he cannot save."

Out of the darkness Jesus cried, "My God, why hast thou forsaken me?". After his death the centurion said, "Truly this man was the Son of God." (GOLDEN TEXT—Mark 15:45)

The Right Thing To Do

Taking the sales tax off the major items needed in building a home as provided for in the Dunning budget is an exhibition of common sense.

The Examiner has stated on several occasions that when people were being urged to build homes in order to get the building trade on the move it was a handicap for the prospective home-owner to know in advance that he was going to be taxed eight per cent. on all material he purchased. If he were going to spend $3,500 on a home there would be a tax of $280 for which he would be receiving no value.

Making conditions such that a man will feel like building a house is better policy than arguing with a man that he ought to build.

The Examiner hopes that conditions in general will soon be such that the eight per cent. sales tax will be wiped out on all classes of goods which people need in order to live and get along decently. The intense search for revenue put that tax in operation, but it is one which has never helped increase the volume of business.

A Few Questions

A place bearing the name of the Brown Derby, some miles north of Toronto, and described as a luxurious sort of spot used for gambling, was raided by police, and it looks as though they had made a rather complete job of it.

The case will be properly dealt with in our courts and it is not advisable at the moment to say much about that part of it. But it is passing strange that such a place could be erected and operated for some time without anything much having been known about it. We take it the operations must have been somewhat secret otherwise the raid would have been staged long ago.

We read there were doors of steel and wood, electrically controlled which took a great deal of chopping and hammering before they yielded to the coming of the officers. And then there is reference to various tunnels in which frequenters of the place sought to take refuge when they became aware of the nature of the raid.

In such a case why should the officers of the law not be admitted at once when they appeared? Why should it be necessary for them to have to chop down doors, and why should an organization or an individual be allowed to construct such barricades in the first place?

Not Smart Enough

It may be we have made a great many advances and in a general way have become a very smart generation of people, but at the same time some of our modern methods and habits have created new problems with which we have not yet dealt in full.

To illustrate: The Board of Health in Toronto is considering issuing orders that bathing shall be prohibited at the Eastern beaches of that city because of the sewage disposal plant.

Before Toronto existed as a great city the lake water at the Eastern beaches would be all right; it would be fit to drink. Today the health authorities consider it is dangerous to use for purposes of bathing. And of course no person would think of drinking it.

Toronto has grown. It is a fair enough example of a place where hundreds of thousands of people have gathered together in one relatively small area. People who live there would no doubt claim they have all the modern conveniences and their claim would be correct enough. But today it is found that a great city is actually polluting a great lake by reason of using a sewage disposal plant which cannot be called anything else than defective. We may be smart today—but we are not yet smart enough.

It May Work

There is a good deal of stuff about people marrying and parting which manages to get on the news wire in the course of a week. Much of it signifies little or nothing, but there was one story telling of a girl dropping a million dollars in order to marry the man she wanted that seems worth noticing.

The bride in this case was Rosemary Webster and her parents are wealthy.

The bride's mother referred to her as "a New York society debutante." The young man she married is Paul Gilson, 23, of Canton, N.Y., and he is a clerk in the St. Lawrence County Welfare Home. His earnings at the moment amount to $21 a week.

It would be nice to end the story by saying that they lived happily ever after. We hope they do, but there will have to be a good deal of adjustment and most of it in the life and outlook of the bride. As things stand at the moment the groom cannot come up to her standing of living, so the only way open will be for the bride to come down to his.

Possibly she knows little about the value of money, as she has never had to work to earn any of it; she has been accustomed to having all the advantages and privileges which are attached to a home and parentage of wealth. Perhaps she is the sort which would have considered all these matters in advance, and it may be she is prepared to knuckle down to plain living and a simple life. We wish them well with their grand experiment, but we are not guaranteeing the ultimate success of this venture.

He Should Be Accurate

The Edmonton Journal says it is wrong to believe that rubbing warts with pennies will cause the warts to disappear. The Journal man says "Everybody knows a wart should be rubbed with a gold ring—or is it a horse chestnut?"

Directions for removing warts should be given with more certainty than that. People who read the newspapers and find an editor halting between a gold ring or a horse chestnut will begin to doubt the truth of what they see in the papers. They will walk over and join with the scoffers who say "Just another newspaper story."

There used to be a way of dealing with warts; perhaps there were two ways—or maybe three. One was to get a hair from a horse's tail. This hair was tied around the wart and pulled into a knot, or perhaps there were two or three knots required. Then there was some sort of a verse repeated, the words of which we have forgotten and the horse hair was then dropped into the first well one could find or it may have been that the pond was used. After being in the water for a week (or was it two weeks) the hair would turn into a snake (or was it tadpole) and then the warts would go away. Or was it just the one wart around which the hair had been tied? We forget which. Whether any warts came off that way we can't recollect at the moment, but we wish that writer in Edmonton would be more definite and specific when it comes to giving directions.

Our Methods Differ

There are some things which we do more openly in this country than elsewhere. When our Finance Minister presented his budget at Ottawa he presented a report of the nation's money matters. He told how much had been spent during the year and how much had been received by way of revenue. Then he subtracted the lesser from the greater and told us exactly how much the government had gone behind. And that of course is the way things ought to be done. We would object to a system which did otherwise.

One financial writer says that according to the most reliable information he can secure Germany has been spending $2,800,000,000 more annually than comes by way of revenue, but at best that is only an estimate. The government in Germany has not published or revealed a budget since 1934, the only figures available being those of public debt and tax revenue. The manner in which the money is being spent is not revealed, although world financiers have a fairly accurate estimate which says that since the Nazis came into power $6,000,000,000 has been spent on rearmament.

No Place For Them

The United Counties Council of Durham and Northumberland when in session at Cobourg discussed a problem which is common to a good many communities, that of placing people who are mentally subnormal in the County homes. Two such folk had recently been transferred from the Ontario Hospital at Whitby to the Home of the United Counties at Cobourg, and the feeling of several of the members was that they should be returned to Whitby.

The policy of shifting such people to County Homes has been going on for several years, and the reason is always the same — the Ontario Hospitals throughout the province, which are equipped for treating such mental cases, are full and there are others applying for admission which must be cared for. On that account patients who have not shown signs of violence are apt to be selected as ones to be sent back to the Homes of the counties from which they came.

The County Home is not equipped for giving treatment or care to such cases, and often enough the bringing of such people to the County institutions creates a problem which is difficult enough to meet. They do not fit in with the general plan of looking after people who are well advanced in years and who desire a place of peace and quietness. The problem is not one which the counties as such have created; it is a condition which is within the scope of the provincial government, and that government cannot remedy matters unless it has adequate room for such people. So those who manage County Homes throughout the province will just have to make the best of it in the meantime—and making the best of it means putting up with considerable inconvenience.

A Strange Case

There are strange cases coming before the courts of our land today and the reason probably is that so many people are wandering about the country.

In London the other day a young fellow was taken to the police station on the nominal charge of vagrancy which may mean much or almost nothing at all. This youth gave his name but that was all about all he knew of himself. He knew as well that he was "about 20 years of age," but he was not certain.

He did not know the date of his birth, nor the place where he was born.

He did not know where he had been raised or who had looked after him when he was young.

He said he had no home and did not know anything at all about his father or mother.

All he had with him was a bottle of pills and police thought they might be narcotics, but the youth said he took them when he had "seizures" or fits, and an examination proved he was telling the truth. There was no apparent reason for holding him so police allowed him to go. Perhaps there was no cause for detaining him, but we doubt whether he should be roaming about alone.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Police have closed in on the Brown Derby in Toronto, probably figuring that this is the straw hat season anyway.

A witness at the Hydro inquiry says that Premier Hepburn has been running the whole show. But surely it did not require a probe to establish that fact.

There is a proposal to have all cats in Ontario belled. In that case the backyard serenades would be given with chimes obligato.

In St. Marys a light coupe ran into a truck carrying 13 tons of cement. One can be impressed by the courage of such a driver without admiring his discretion.

Japan killed 2,000 people in an air raid on Canton, and come to think of it Japan has not yet declared war on China.

One reason why the report of the prison commission fails to arouse much general interest is that the average citizen figures he is not going there.

Folk who are looking for some equipment for the shack at the back lakes are reminded that the furniture in Chorley Park is being sold by auction.

The more you hear about the Quebec power contracts and what happened to them the less easy it is to comprehend the whole affair.

There has been an epidemic of drunken driving in this district lately and the miraculous feature of the record is that nobody has been killed or even seriously hurt.

It is reported that Premier Hepburn was going to fire Stewart Lyon as Hydro Commissioner early in 1935. Then later on he did what he had intended to do earlier.

It is said it costs $200 each to grow lemons in Allan Gardens, Toronto, and from that it is not difficult to see that it is the Queen City taxpayers who are getting the lemon.

Man by the name of Bolt was sent to the reformatory from London, Ont., and the officer who accompanied him on the trip felt uneasy until the door was finally closed on him.

There was a speechless banquet in Toronto the other night and we are not surprised to learn it was held under the auspices of the American Newspaper Guild. We know what newspapermen think of speeches.

London Board of Education is placing insurance on children attending public and secondary schools and already 70 tenders have been submitted for the policy. And that means 69 gentlemen will have to explain how come they didn't land the order.

A woman of 24 years applying for divorce at Media, Pa., submitted the following box score to the court: "Struck in the face 30 times, kicked 12 times, choked 20 times, pulled out of bed twice." If that lady now has to go and earn her living we believe she would do well in some place where they collect and compile statistics.

UNCLE EBEN

(By A. R. K.)

¶ My Uncle Eben always wears, the stiffest sort of shirts he dares, can't be too stiff for him; and when his shirts get put away, they make a glorious array, stiff like a piece of tin.

¶ The collars bearing Eben's name, are fashioned pretty much the same, they are not soft or small; I've often tried to guess the height, and think my answer's close to right, they'd be three inches tall.

¶ And they stand up beneath his chin, they'd choke him if he tried to grin, but he seems not afraid; he wears them when the days are cold, or walks forth easy like and bold, at ninety in the shade.

¶ And Uncle Eben's cuffs I see, are stiff and white as they can be, at them most folk would scoff; when uncle puts his armor on, he like to have his cuffs along, and never leaves them off.

¶ And Uncle Eben goes his way, no matter what the sort of day, he has his work to do; I don't see how he bends at all, with shirts so stiff and collars tall, looks neat when he gets through.

¶ He always walks so neat and trim, and heat it never bothers him, and he stands very straight; I guess when he gets so encased, the heat of summer time's erased—and none can penetrate.

"Hypocrite" Is On Banned List

(From Parliamentary Debates)

Mr. BEAUBIEN: I have listened for a good many days of this session to lessons by the right hon. leader of the opposition on the political morals which should obtain in this country. Also I have very often heard him use the expression "bribery of the electors" either by the expenditures of public funds or the promise of expenditures of public funds, and I have come to the conclusion—and if the term is parliamentary I am going to use it—that I think the right hon. gentleman is posing as a holier-than-thou leader, when I am convinced that he is about the biggest hypocrite who ever entered this house.

Mr. BENNETT: I take it that the Chairman will probably ask that that be withdrawn.

The CHAIRMAN: Order. The word "hypocrite" is unparliamentary, and I would ask the hon. member to withdraw it.

Mr. BEAUBIEN: Well, then, Mr. Chairman, I never saw the practice of hypocrisy to the degree I have listened to it to-day.

Mr. BENNETT: That, unfortunately, is in the same position.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Order.

Mr. BEAUBIEN: Now, what happened—

Mr. ROWE: (Dufferin-Simcoe): I rise to a point of order. That expression is just as unparliamentary as the other.

The CHAIRMAN: The point of order, in my opinion, is well taken.

Mr. BEAUBIEN: Then, Mr. Chairman, I will bow to your ruling, and I withdraw those words.

Mr. BENNETT: Having thought them out very carefully, and feeling better for having said them.

Mr. BEAUBIEN: The right hon. gentleman in 1930 started the game of bribery—

Mr. BENNETT: That again, Mr. Chairman, is unparliamentary.

Mr. BEAUBIEN: — by going throughout Canada and making promises—

Mr. ROWE: (Dufferin-Simcoe): That is just as unparliamentary as "hypocrisy".

Mr. DUNNING: What is?

Mr. ROWE (Dufferin-Simcoe): "Bribery."

Mr. DUNNING: The right hon. leader of the opposition uses it every day.

Mr. BENNETT: The hon. member said I "started the game of bribery."

Mr. DUNNING: The right hon. gentleman can use the word "bribery" better: he is a clever enough lawyer to use it properly.

Mr. BENNETT: That word is not properly used, Mr. Chairman. On a point of order, one hon. member cannot allege that another member of this house started a "game of bribery." I have always voted against lotteries, and thus far I have escaped being charged with bribery. But there are cases in which—

Mr. BEAUBIEN: Will the right hon. gentleman speak louder, so that I can hear his point of order?

Mr. BENNETT: The point of order is that it is unparliamentary to make that observation.

Mr. BEAUBIEN: I have a right to speak on the point of order, have I not? To my knowledge the right hon. gentleman has used the word "bribery" hundreds of times in this house. He used it in connection with the by-election in St. Henry, Montreal. He used it on many other occasions. I leave it to you, Mr. Chairman, whether I have not the right to use the same term as the right hon. gentleman has used hundreds of times in this house.

Mr. SPENCE: In a different way, though.

The CHAIRMAN: On the point of order raised by the right hon. leader of the opposition, I am of opinion it is well taken, for this reason, that it might be inferred from the remark that there was something personal in the way of bribery on the part of the leader of the opposition. I would ask the hon. member to withdraw the expression.

OPINIONS WORTH LITTLE.

(Hamilton Spectator)

JOHN Pierpont Morgan was no doubt joking when he told a reporter in New York that he would not give his opinions on public affairs because they were not worth anything. But it is the sort of joke that might be taken in a good many different ways.

There appears to be a sort of tradition that business men of the Morgan stamp must remain silent in affairs political and social. Although it is a long cry from Vanderbilt's "the public be damned attitude" it has been pretty well maintained. And it was the late George Baker's warning that business men should "cut their talk in half."

Without confining it to the Morgan, Baker group, it is still unfortunate that too many people whose opinions are valuable are reluctant to reveal them. It is equally unfortunate that those whose opinions are of little value are out for every possible chance to advertise them.

That may be human nature, and it may be the reason for our being plagued with an undesirable kind of noisy "politics". Yet as long as a certain type of individual remains aloof—and he is usually the one who is most bitter in his denunciations of public life—those very conditions will be further aggravated.

TACTLESS AT LEAST.

(Letter in Montreal Star)

SIR,—THE telephone is very useful at times and then again there are occasions when it becomes a nuisance. Never a day passes that my wife is not called from her household duties to answer some salesman or woman who have something to sell or some service to offer.

Recently when I was lying in the hospital suffering from typhoid and pneumonia and almost on the verge some enterprising representative of one of our local cemeteries called up my wife and wanted to know if she did not think this an opportune time to buy a grave.

You can imagine the effect this had upon her. She nearly fainted as she hung up without answering.

No wonder I feel like having the 'phone taken out sometimes.

• They Are Not Afraid of Lewis

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

JOHN L. LEWIS may be a czar in the C. I. O. but with Congress he is only a Big Bad Wolf, of whom nobody is afraid. With his usual conceit and high-handedness, he invaded the office of the Speaker of the House of Representatives in Washington and read the riot act to a group of members of the rules committee with the purpose of having them report a bill he came to the Capitol to sponsor personally. But, no doubt remembering that the Pennsylvania primaries recently revealed that Mr. Lewis was not the great political dictator he imagines himself to be, the committee, by an overwhelming vote, refused to report the bill.

It is related that both Republicans and Democrats united to deal Mr. Lewis his crushing defeat. With parties uniting to thwart dictators the latter cannot make any headway. U.S. politics, which sometimes comes in for strong criticism, has apparently not lost its manliness, and this is a redeeming feature. Cowed politics would accomplish far more harm than good. Apparently the politicians across the line are beginning to realize that John L. Lewis does not hold the voters in the hollow of his hand. He may browbeat and bully, but he cannot deliver. When will this would-be-dictator awaken to the fact that his domineering methods are resented by the free and independent electors? The quicker he does, the better it will be for the public he represents, or misrepresents.

• Taste Good When You're Hungry

(By James Park in Stratford Beacon-Herald)

MY FATHER, the late Andrew Park of Cromarty, went to Dakota in 1881 and homesteaded a quarter section of land. The rest of us followed him out the next year. There were my mother, sister and two other boys besides myself. The land was very level and from our doorstep you could see Cooperstown ten miles away. The Skeyenne River ran through our property. The first year we put in only a few potatoes, but the next year we put in a few oats and some wheat. The season was very dry and although we did not know it at the time it was the beginning of what was to prove a long and disastrous drought.

From 1884 until 1887 there was no let-up at all in the drought and we had scarcely more than a light shower during all that time. The wheat at its best during those four years was never more than eight or nine inches high and we couldn't use the binder on it. We cut it with a mower and raked it up. At best it wouldn't go over two or three bushels to the acre.

We ran the wheat (what we got of it) through the thresher, ground it and made it into whole wheat flour. The women made biscuits and pancakes out of it, but no bread. There were quite a few Norwegian settlers in the district and they made a porridge out of the flour by boiling it. They called it 'grout' and it didn't taste too bad. You can get used to anything when you're really hungry.

Each settler tried to keep a couple of pigs on hand for pork, but we couldn't keep many cattle or horses because we couldn't feed them. No one had any money and they had no way of getting any. We had not even a dollar to our names and there was no such thing as credit. You paid for what you got or you didn't get it.

When the men needed trousers the women ripped up grain bags and made pants out of them. They made jackets out of the grain bags too and the women made skirts for themselves out of old bran bags. We had hard scratching to get shoes and they were worn longer after they were worn out than before. The women went barefoot in the summer time.

The Dagota winters were cold and we had to go to the river to cut wood. A St. Paul company owned most of the timberland in the State but the settlers just stole it. It was either do that or freeze to death and we weren't freezing to death. Our house was a one-room board shanty covered with tar paper and the six of us lived in it.

In 1888 we got a bit of moisture and our first crop in five years was comming along. We were beginning to feel jubilant and we saw money in sight at last just before we cut the wheat it was frozen right n the fields. What happened to be on high ground was saleable, but thousands of acres on the lower ground was never cut. It was burned the following Spring. Our entire crop was frozen and we did not sell a bushel of it. We threshed and ground some of the frozen crop and until the next crop came we subsisted on the frozen wheat. Do you know, it wasn't too bad, but as I said before you can get used to anything if you're really hungry.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

FURTHERMORE then we beseech you, brethren, and exhort you by the Lord Jesus, that as ye have received of us how ye ought to walk and to please God, so ye would abound more and more. . . .

But of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. . . . But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness. . . . But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet, the hope of salvation. For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him. Wherefore comfort yourselves together, and edify one another, even as also ye do.—I Thess iv, 1; v, 1, 2, 4, 5, 8-11.

To The Editor

WHY?

Editor Examiner:

Sir: Just a few questions I would like to see answered for the benefit of a lot of tax payers.

Why should the police have their wearing apparel furnished out of the tax money, when they draw from $1200 to about $2000 a year and lose no time and the pick and shovel men that do not draw half that money have to buy their own clothes?

Why does the city allow so many from outside the city to come in and take the work from the unemployed that should be having the work?

Why does the city want to advance a foreman on the Board of Works $100 per year? I, as well as a lot more would consider $5.00 per day would be good pay in this depression.

THE LARGEST TEAPOT.

(Edinburgh Scotman)

AT THE EMPIRE Tea Pavilion at the Empire Exhibition are displayed what are claimed to be the world's largest teapot and the world's oldest.

The former holds 3½ gallons of tea. The latter holds just a cup or so, but from the Hans Dynasty of ancient Cathay, and is, therefore, anything between 1,700 and 2,000 years old.

Among the teapost on view at the stand are two midget teapots one in blue and white, the other white with raised figures. A red glazed teapot is in a unique design. An old English porcelain teapot in Worcester ware, of 1810 or 1820, shows colored pictures of buildings. Another teapot, dated 1174, shows a picture of a lover and his lady. There is, too, a teapot that was made for John Wesley with his own picture on the front of it. Teapot of solid agate presents a mottled effect.

DEFEATS ITS OWN END.

((J. A. McRae, in Toronto Saturday Night)

SEVEN ONTARIO gold mines are paying wages. ETAOINSHRDLUS 000 000 a year at present, as compared with $20,000,000 in 1932. These seven mines are paying taxes at a rate of $5,500,000 a year at present, as compared with $1,760,000 in 1932.

The Ontario Mining Association shows that on a production of $204,853,000 in 1937 the mines of Ontario paid $13,665,000 in taxes.

Taxation amounts to over $1 on each ton of ore treated at many of the leading gold producing mines. This tax, added to cost, has relegated a large tonnage of material to the waste heap, lost to the country forever because of the high costs involved.

Taxation on mining as well as real estate is now considered to have reached the point where it defeats its own end.

Relief Camp Workers Are Not Complaining Despite Heat And Mosquitoes In Bush

Men Show Initiative In Working Under New Relief Scheme

A tiny village of Peterborough people has been established a few miles north of Apsley, in the heart of the northland. It is a thriving community, and if the relief committee continues the scheme it will soon be considerably larger.

For it is to this hamlet, buried deep in the bush, that Peterborough's unemployed are being rehabitated. They have become initiates to the honored trade of woodcutting.

The idea of a lumber camp for unemployed sprang from the new depression, which sent relief costs soaring to such a height funds are rapidly becoming depleted. Each winter the city has bought wood for the unemployed, and has received no work in return.

This year the contract was let to the Peterborough Fuel and Transport Company under a different scheme. By this new plan, the company hired a supervisor for their woodlot near Apsley, and the city relief committee agreed to supply the men who would cut down trees and split them into cordwood.

Rate of Pay.

The relief committee paid transportation of the men to the woods, furnished them with clothing and tools. The company agreed to pay them $1.65 a cord for the wood they chopped, $1.85 where the trees were scattered. Each man may earn up to $5.75 without its affecting his family's relief here in Peterborough. From any amount above that figure a sum is taken each week, usually in the neighborhood of fifty cents, by the relief committee for tools that have been supplied, an additional amount for clothing supplied.

So in actuality an unemployed man on relief may earn nearly $7 a week before his family's relief is reduced. For example, should a man earn $8 in any week, his wife and family here in Peterborough would find that their relief voucher had been reduced by $1 for the following week. Of course the additional dollar, and more, could come from the husband's earnings.

When the relief office first suggested the plan, it was turned down by more than a dozen men. They were immediately struck from the relief rolls. Four more went to the site of the camp, and returned the following day. They have not returned yet, and have been cut from relief.

Not All On Relief.

At the camp are nine men, two women and a girl. They are living in rough shacks, working from early morning until near sundown. Not all are on relief. One couple went to the bush when the man lost his position. They went to avoid relief. One reliefee did not wait to be ordered to the camp, but went of his own accord to Relief Officer Art Metheral and asked for equipment.

At the camp complaints are few. The work is hard, none can deny that. Chief faults the men had to find when an Examiner reporter called this week were that drinking water was bad; that there was no first aid equipment in camp; that it was a poor bush; that mosquitoes were too plentiful.

Drinking Water Bad.

The drinking water was bad, in reality. Three had already become ill, one of them a woman, presumably from drinking the near stagnant pond water. Since no other water is available, the water will have to be boiled in all probability.

Day previous a worker received a gash in his hand from a flying chip of steel. He had to be taken to Apsley for treatment, because there was not even a piece of gauze in camp. Relief Officer Metheral said later that first aid equipment will be sent immediately. All the men are covered by Workmen's Compensation in case of accident, and first aid is an essential by that act.

The bush is undoubtedly hot in the middle of the day; the trees are not of first-class quality, and at night the mosquitoes are bad, this reporter found.

No Real Complaints.

But these men, while they tell of such hardships, are not seriously complaining. They are revealing fellowship, initiative, courage. And they are working hard. One of their number, he who took a job to avoid relief, is a carpenter. With limited tools he turns out axe handles, saw handles, anything of wood that happens to get broken. He sells them cheap. He sharpens saws and axe blades. His tent, stove and pine-covered dining quarters are the tidiest in the camp. His wife cooks meals, at twenty cents each, for several of the men.

Another family of father, mother and daughter have a shack of their own. Each day the mother and daughter pick and preserve wild strawberries. They cook for several more of the men. One young man has a tiny shack of his own. The others eat and sleep in a large, rough bunkhouse, doing their own cooking and scanty housework. One has a mandarin, and plays it in the evening.

It is a rough life they lead in this new hamlet; a life without luxury, sometimes without what people think are essentials. But all are strong and active, and seem fairly content. They work hard, sleep well, eat plenty. At night they sometimes walk over the torturous rocky road to Apsley for entertainment, but usually they sit about the bunkhouse.

More To Go.

On Monday their number will probably be increased by eight, for the relief committee is considering sending that many more men back to work.

The work will probably continue until fall. All of the wood being cut by these Peterborough men is to be used next winter for families on relief. The Peterborough Fuel and Transport Company pays, in nearly all cases, $1.85 a cord to the men, supplies the woodlot, hauls the wood 43 miles over some bad road, and sells it to the city for $6.75 a cord, delivered at the city's woodlot.

OBITUARY

JAMES SCRIVER.

James Scriver, who died at Washago on Friday and will be buried there at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon will be remembered by many of the older residents of this city as one of its nimble-witted pitch men of twenty-five or more years ago. Some of them were Charlie Guy, Randy Fady, the late Billy Bowman and Jim Scriver. They used to set up their stands on market days and holidays and also had a circuit of the towns and cities where they use to ply their trade in can openers, razors, watches, medicine and all sorts of things. Reg Turner was informed last night of Jim Scriver's death, and to the Examiner said that Mr. Scriver would be remembered by many friends as a man of ability and honor and a gift of salesmanship. For years he had an exclusive right at the Toronto Exhibition for which he used to pay $200 for two weeks.

MISS M. J. BARNARD

Prominent in the business life of this city for the past thirty-nine years, Miss M. J. Barnard, 511 Stewart street, died suddenly this morning (Saturday).

Well known throughout the city by a host of friends, she had been employed for nearly four decades in the office of the Porter S. White company, now located on Charlotte street. Thousands of Peterborough people knew her through her work and through her activity in church work.

Born near Ballieboro, on the first concession of South Monaghan, she was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Barnard, life-long residents of the district. He youth was spent on the homestead and she was active in the work of the Ballieboro Baptist church.

She came toPeterborough 39 years ago and immediately commenced work for the Porter S. White company. She was one of Murray Street Baptist church's most active workers, last year being president of the Mission Circle. She was interested in all the church's work and particularly in the work of missions.

Surviving are her brother, Howard C. Barnard, Ballieboro; her sister, Mrs. Porter S. White, Peterborough; her niece, Mrs. T. A. Bertois, London, Ont., and Mrs. Harold Bebee of Baileiboro, and her nephew, Roy B. White of this city.

Caught In The Act

BELLEVILLE, Ont., June 18 (CP)—Police caught a criminal stealing produce from a garden here. A special problem arose when they decided to lock him up, for they knew no ordinary jail would hold such a prisoner, a big white rabbit.

REPORTED HIS ESCAPE

DARWIN, Australia (CP)—In jail here awaiting trial for maliciously damaging government property, a man escaped, borrowed 50 cents from a constable, bought himself drinks and gave himself up. He was then freed.

Code Appears On Tombstones

Henrietta and Susanna Bean probably never thought they'd have a tombstone like this one erected over their earthly remains, but there was no explaining the mental gyrations of husband Dr. Bean. We hasten to explain that Henrietta and Susanna were successive, not simultaneous, wives of Dr. Bean, and when both passed away, the good doctor had them buried in the same grave, over which he erected this tombstone extolling the virtues of both in code. The grave is in Union cemetery at Wellesley, near Kitchener, Ontario.

Jack Dempsey Almost Regained His Lost Crown In The Battle Of Famous Barry Long Count

Forgot Neutral Corner Rule After Flooring Tunney in Seventh

Jim Corbett came close to recovering the world's heavyweight championship when he beat Jeffries for 22 rounds, only to run into a haymaker and take the count in the twenty-third.

But of the heavyweight champions who tried to come back, Jack Dempsey came closest of all. He missed by only a few fleeting seconds.

Dempsey, maker of melodrama at Toledo, where he massacred Jess Willard; at the Polo Grounds where he pounded Luis Angel Firpo into the earth after being hurled out of the ring at the end of a flying fist, and at Boyle's Thirty Acres, where he toyed with the Orchid Man of France, did not fail the 104,000 who packed into Soldier Field at Chicago to see his last magnificent gesture.

That was 11 years ago. In the previous year, the Man Mauler, then 31 years old, had met his master when Gene Tunney slashed him into a gory pulp in ten rounds on a rainy night in Philadelphia. Yet there thousands who refused to believe that Tunney could do it again, thousands who strung along once more with the man with the killing punch.

Neutral Corner Rule

It was his own failure to comply with a rule that Dempsey can blame for his failure to become the first heavyweight to win back the title. One of the regulations the Illinois boxing commission imposed for the fight was that, in event of a knockdown, the man scoring the knockdown was to go to the farthest neutral corner. The referee was not to begin his count until the fighter scoring the knockdown complied. Referee Dave Barry explained the ruling to both fighters at the start of the bout.

In the first round at Philadelphia Dempsey had came out fighting. But at Chicago he started more cautiously. He was wary of that snaky Tunney left, and try as he would to manoeuvre him into a position to make him a target for a good right, Tunney was unable.

Tunney threw a flock of wild right hands in that Chicago fight, but it was not until the fourth round that he finally hit Dempsey with one. It landed high on the temple, but staggered the ex-champion. Jack covered up.

Though Dempsey was bleeding from cuts on his face when the fifth round started, he seemed fresh, and the action began to pick up this round. Tunney kept trying to rcoss with a long straight right, and was careful to stay out of reach of Dempsey's left hook. In close Tunney inevitably tied Dempsey up.

Momentous Seventh

Barry began his count, but at "three" turned and saw that Dempsey had not gone to "the farthest neutral corner." He signalled to Jack to do so, but Dempsey, confused, did not comply. Barry rushed over to Dempsey and pushed him toward the corner. Then he returned to Tunney and started the count all over again at "one." Gene rose at "nine."

Just how long Tunney was on the floor is a disputed point. Certainly he was there 14 seconds. Some ringsiders said 20 seconds. But when he got up, his head was clear. He knew that his only safety lay in flight. As Dempsey tore out with a murderous left, Tunney picked it off and retreated, starting to circle to Jack's right. They went around and around, Dempsey swinging at the fleeing target, not landing a punch. Then, suddenly, Tunney stopped and flung a right into the Mauler's face. Dempsey buckled.

The Telling Blow

Then Tunney circled to the left, followed by Dempsey, who shouted, "Come on and fight!" Tunney kept skipping backward. Then, suddenly, again he stopped and planted a vicious right under Dempsey's heart. That was the blow that won the fight for Gene, in the opinion of many writers at the ringside. It stopped the Mauler instantly.

The crowd seemed to sense that Dempsey had "shot the works." When the Mauler went down before Tunney in the eighth, there remained little doubt. The next two rounds saw Tunney in complete mastery.

After the gong ended the tenth, and the formality of a decision had been enacted, Dempsey went over to the ex-marine and said, "Congratulations, Gene! I did the best I could!"

Canadian Legion Notes

The painting and varnishing of our front hall, floor and staircase has been completed and the new matting has been laid. The whole thing has a very fine appearance, and when the auditorium has been decorated we will have the finest looking hall in the city.

The transient ex-service man is fast becmoing a very real problem tothe branch as not a day passes without a call upon us of one or more men looking for assistance, for boots, clothing, food or shelter, and our Comrade Loomis has no sinecure as relief officer. Some of the cases are beyond help and it would be folly to try but a great many are really genuine and deserving of sympathy and help. Some of the stories we hear are very pitiful. With many calls we have from our own local people the problem of the transient is a matter of real concern to us.

It is with great regret that we have to report the death of our comrade Jack Coppock in Nicholls Hospital on Wednesday, June 15th, and his burial this (Saturday) afternoon. Our departed comrade was the first caretaker of the Legion Hall in the days of the G.W.V.A. and was later caretaker of the City Library from which position he retired a year ago. Our deepest sympahty is extended to the bereaved family.

The secretary of the local branch of the Imperial Veterans has requested us to state that a much increased interest was evinced by local Imperials in the second meeting of their organization on Wednesday last and that a number of new members were accepted.

We beg to remind all members that the regular monthly meeting of the branch will take place on Monday next June 20th, and they are urgently invited to attend. After the meeting a light lunch will be provided and games will be held. So come along if you are not too busy catching the elusive fish to enter in our largest fish competition. Before the meeting a horseshoe pitching contest will take place at the rear of the hall at 6.30 p.m. so come along and take part in the game or watch the fun.

A quoram board will sit in the council chamber of the city buildings on Monday and Tuesday next June 20th and 21st. Any ex-service man wishing to consult the pension advocate will have the opportunity.

Debt Paid Off

The final chapter in one of the Kiwanis club's books of good deeds was read at the club's weekly luncheon on Friday by the secretary-treasurer.

A few years ago the club paid for the tuition of a young man attending business college here. On his graduation the youth left the city tendering his note for an amount in excess of $100, to be paid back to the club when he reached financial security.

Yesterday, the club received a cheque for $32, last payment on the account. His note fully paid up, the young man thanked the club, wrote its members he was succeeding in business thanks to their generosity. It was an example of the spirit of Kiwanis.

Doe Fawn Added To City's Zoo

The animal population of Peterborough's zoo at the filtration plant has been augmented by the addition of a very pretty little doe fawn, the gift of the Ontario Department of Games and Fisheries through Overseer I. J. Lyons.

The baby deer was picked up in the bush in Belmont Township a few days ago by a man who said the fawn was sound asleep when he came across it, and did not waken until it had been carried a hundred yards. When Overseer Lyons heard about the affair, he immediately took possession of the little animal and informed Manager Dobbin of the Utilities Commission who applied to the Department to have the fawn turned over to the zoo here and the request was promptly granted.

The baby deer is now comfortably housed at the zoo, although the yearling deer already at the filtration plant has not yet made up his mind whether he is happy about the whole affair or not.

"CONQUER FEAR"

SAYS DALE CARNEGIE

Author of the famous book "HOW TO WIN FRIENDS AND INFLUENCE PEOPLE"

● "Fear defeats more people than any other thing in the world. To conquer fear is an important step towards success. If you read the biographies of great men you will find that some were go-getters and some were dreamers.

"But there is one quality they all had in common — they all had COURAGE."

● "You can't buy courage and you can't get it just by wishing for it. But you can develop it as you would develop a strong right arm. How? Simply by doing the thing you fear to do.

"Don't say: 'I'll do this next week'. Do it now."

● "Is there someone you are afraid to call on? All right. Call on that person tomorrow. You may be so scared that you will have to walk up and down outside half a dozen times. But don't let your fear lick you again. Walk in and tell the other man what a struggle you had with yourself to get sufficient courage to call on him.

"He won't laugh at you. He will like you better for your frankness and respect you for your courage."

Have You Smoked a Turret Lately?

A TURRET is more than ordinarily welcome, at those difficult times when you are trying to screw up courage to do something which you have always been afraid to do. Smoking a Turret gives you confidence—helps to put you at your ease. Turrets are made from choice Virginia tobaccos blended to an original and unique formula which gives them a delightful taste—shared by no other cigarette. GASKILL FAMILY CAPTURES HONORS IN SCHOOL SPORTS DAY

Events Keenly Contested School Picnic

The Gaskill family, Jack, Louis and Ruth set the pace in school athletics at Nicholls Oval yesterday when Queen Alexandra School held its annual picnic, and these pupils won every race they entered. Jack Gaskill, age 11, clad in gym suit and running in his barefeet finished ten feet ahead of the field in a fifty yards dash.

A downpour of rain interrupted the races but the program was completed before the afternoon was over. J. E. R. Munro and E. Frost, principal and vice-principal set a new record in running off the program, hurrying because rain was imminent. All pupils entering races who failed to place took part in peanut scrambles and Miss A. Gillespie tossed the peanuts in generous quantities to the pile of boys. Two booths erected beneath the maples catered to the youngsters and parents alike, and at five o'clock supper was served on the long tables. Mrs. V. R. Henry, president of the Home and School Association was general chairman of the picnic committee, and women of the teaching staff who assisted in running off the sports program were Miss S. Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

WELL, ANYWAY our lacrosse and ball teams can lick last year's champs in the early summer, whatever about at playoff time. Last eve at the lacrosse arena, the Petes poured so many counters by Goalie Chambers in the Inglewood-Caledon Combines' cage that the goal judge had to be relieved. Got a stiff arm, they say, hoisting the flag. Score was 19-6, not counting a goal that came a split second after the final gong. The Petes thereby won their third O. L. A. senior "B" tilt in four starts, and sure rubbed it in to the Combines. The latter were without their best man, Puckering, but even at that they were made to look bad. The Petes played in championship form and were clicking in all departments like a new cabin plane. Zooming in repeatedly to rattle the hemp.

* * * * * *

THEIR PASSING plays were pretty and they shot extra well in this fray. Also checked the Combines to a fare-thee-well. Had it over 'em all the way, including penalties! It was a speedy, rugged and fairly good game but one-sided throughout. The Inglewood gang thought we were on standard time and the game was half an hour late starting. The work of Worthy, Whitton, Reid and Meyette deserves special mention — these players being really brilliant all the way, with the others also going good. A few of the losers looked good but the team went just so-so.

* * * * * *

CROWE HURT himself scoring a counter late in the fourth. He takes chances tearing in close, and not infrequently does he knock the goal for a row of chicken coops and sometimes ye goalie too! Did that little thing early in the contest and accidentally cut the net-minded over the head. It drew blood so both had to go off — the goalie for repairs. As lacrosse rules call for a penalty when blood is drawn, here was a case of a guy scoring a goal and getting a penalty at the same time. His first lacrosse penalty in two years. Big Smith got a rough passage from little gees like Shorty Reid and Buster Whitton, much to the delight of the fans. Seems public sentiment is still with the Davids and against the Goliaths. Two midget teams, Kinsmen and Kiwanis, put on a good game before the main one and at half-time with Kinsmen winning 5-2.

* * * * * *

KEENE copped a 7-6 nod over C. G. E. at the Bowl last eve to move into second place in the Girls' Softball League. One of the best gals' games of the season. Bea McDowell and Marilyn McCarthy both twirled fine ball and sent a flock of femmes back for a drink of water after swinging at the third strike. Something about catching an armful of ozone on the third swing that makes ball players hit for the water bucket for a swig — it is an established custom. We hear H. Cameron of C. G. E., who was hurt sliding into third against Lindsay here Wednesday, is in the hospital with a side injury — possibly even requiring an operation yet. We don't know when the next game is; ought to get the dope over the weekend.

* * * * * *

BATTING averages of the baseball Petes to date are listed tonight. They show Frank (Lefty) McNally, locals' new hurler on top in hitting as well as twirling. Has a mark of .429 for two games and another pitcher. Russ Kitchen, is next with .333. Then comes Bob Doll with .316. In the .200 or better class are Cliff Cadd (with a good mark), Bill Calladine, Bun Kingdon and Chuck Kearns. The rest aren't clouting the apple at a rate worth wiring home about. Not even a collect wire. Club hitting average is .217, and most of it was piled up in the 11-0 win over Kingston. Yeah, the Petes are getting good pitching and fielding, but can stand quite a bit more hitting.

* * * * * *

LOT OF INTEREST by ball fans around town in the C. O. B. L. executive meeting this evening in Oshawa. On account of the loop moguls and club officers will discuss the matter of ball imports who are playing in Kingston and Peterborough without benefit of O. B. A. transfers. As they arrived after the March 15th residence date, Oshawa will string along with the Ponies and Petes. General feeling of fans is: "We want good ball games whether the league is affiliated with the O. B. A. or not — and we're getting good games this year." Of course, there has always been a lot of skull-duggery pulled secretly with players arriving late but the O. B. A. apparently ignorant of it. And it's a fact that when Cobourg was in the old C. O. B. L., opening day on May 24th there would see two or three U. S. players get off the boat and hurry to the park to play — without knowing the names of their own teammates. Ah, yes, indeed.

* * * * * *

CHURCH Softball League standings are in tonight. Likewise the playoff arrangements in the four sections, the loop executive having a huddle at the "Y" yester p.m. and coming up with this layout. Final scheduled fixtures will be early next week, with the various playoffs getting underway within a few days. Murray St. Seniors took a nifty 4-3 win over Knox at the Oval last night to give the Baptists a chance to join in a three-way tie for the second Slot, if they win their next joust. The loss shook Knox out of first place to climax a week of upsets i nthe senior series. George St. Majors roosting comfortably, if surprisingly, in first place. It's been quite a season to date in the Church Circuit and everything can, and probably will, happen during the playoffs.

* * * * * *

A BIT ON the new changes in cage rules for grownup basketeers around here, and there are plenty of guys and gals who play the game and lots who follow it. Games may be played in quarters with time off betwixt quarters (not halves) two minutes. Jump ball must be placed at least six feet from the nearest boundary line. A gee may stand in the outer half of his free-throw circle indefinitely but, as soon as he gets the ball, he is subject to the three-seconds rule to evacuate. Teams can take five time-out periods, additional ones being at the expense of a technical foul—and these can be taken even if there is no injury, etc. A player with the ball who is touching or straddling the division line is rated in the back court, no matter where the ball comes from to him. If he dribbles from the back court the 10-second count continues as long as he touches the floor on or back of the line. That is, on the line is in the back court. Jim McClenaghan of the "Y" has the complete list of cage rule changes for next season.

* * * * * *

UP AND DOWN Sports' Rialto: Herb Ralph has applied to the O. B. A. for a transfer here of a young North Bay southpaw twirler, Lefty Mogridge . . . If okayed, the Young Petes will get a husky junior pitcher, the big lad having a lot of speed and fair control . . . Bill Corbett, ex-Oshawa junior ball manager, has resigned as coach of St. Catharines' senior team . . . Bucko MacDonald and his Orillia Terriers will be here next Tuesday for an exhibition lacrosse match with the Petes . . . Omemee and Motorists have a men's softball struggle tonight at seven in the Bowl . . . It'll be Biddle against Pollar or Paczkowski when the Ponies play in Oshawa today . . . The Quaker Oats Co. has a good shop softball operating this year on its own diamond . . . Jack Withers, who with Jack Dundas was timer at the lacrosse game last e'en, told us his Brinton soccerites were unbeaten so far this year . . . GM-men are at Kingston next Wednesday and the Ponies here Sat'day . . . Three of the Oshawa ballsters, married a year ago, have become poppas in recent weeks, so we expect an Oshawa win today — this being the eve of Fathers Day!

Reds and Indians Are Factors In Major Baseball Upheavals

Tribe Regains Lost Pace By Defeating Athletics 8 To 1

NEW YORK, June 18 (C.P.). — Step right up to baseball's sideshow, boys and girls, and get a load of as queer a pair of pennant races as the bigtime has seen in years.

In the American League, you have the world champion Yankees playing virtually the same brand of ball as at this time last year. Then they were 12 games over the .500 mark; now they're 11. Yet last June 18 Murderers' Row was 2½ games in front of the Tigers, with Cleveland Indians five games back. And to-day, Gehrig and Company are in second place, a game behind the Tribe, while the Tigers are in fifth place.

Then shift your glance over to the National League, and you get another freak that would warm the heart of a Barnum. At this time in 1937, the Cubs were in front of the Giants by one game, with the Cardinals close up in third place and Cincinnati Reds hopelessly bogged down in the cellar from which they never emerged.

Right now, however, the Giants are showing the way to Cholly Grimm's gallopers by three full games, the astonishing Reds are breathing hot on the necks of both, and Frankie Frisch's gasless gashouse gang is doing its darndest to stay out of cellar territory.

The chief reasons for the upheavals are the Indians and the Reds. Both have been absorbing a philosophy of fight under new managers.

Back on Top.

The Tribe, after a temporary tailspin last week, has won three straight, the latest an 8-1 whipping handed the Athletics yesterday as Johnny Allen chalked up his eighth win of the year with a five-hit performance. Since the Yanks' game with the Browns was rained out, this boosted the Indians' American League lead by half a game.

Over in the National League everything happened at once. The Giants snapped out of their batting doldrums, fired a 16-hit attack, including three homers, and trampled the Cards 10-3 behind Slick Castleman's steady flinging.

Since the Cubs were rudely humiliated by Boston Bees in both ends of a doubleheader, this added a game and a half to the Giants' league lead. Jim Turner pitched a five-hitter to top Bill Lee, 1-0, on Ray Mueller's homer in the opener, and Johnny Lanning and Ira Hutchinson combined in another five-hitter for a 3-2 decision in the nightcap.

Hard on Cubs.

The Reds, meantime, walloped Brooklyn Dodgers twice, and pulled up to two games back of the Cubs. Jim Weaver's four-hit pitching and homers by Ernie Lombardi and Ival Goodman produced the Reds' 4-3 opener win, while an 18-hit bombardment clicked for a 12-10 edge in the afterpiece.

The Pirates went 10 innings to overcome the Phillies 4-3. The Tigers and Senators wound up all even in a twin bill, Washington, with ancient Al Simmons socking two homers, took the first game 12-10. Roxie Lawson came through in the nightcap for a 4-3 Tiger win. Jackie Wilson's eight-hit elbowing gave Boston Red Sox a 5-1 victory over the wilting White Sox at Chicago.

Kinsmen Win 5-3 Midget Lacrosse

Kinsmen opened the local midget lacrosse season last night at the George St. arena with a 5-2 victory over Kiwanis. The two kids' squads played pretty fair lacrosse, showing considerable promise. They played part of their game before the O.L.A. senior "B" fixture and the rest at the halfway rest period. Hubert Legros and Rowan Chute acted as referees, and the large crowd of fans seemed to enjoy the tussle. The winners had a slight edge on play but there was little to choose between the rivals. The teams:

Kiwanis: Goal, Anderson; defence, Roberts and Foster; centre, Hodson; wings, Cooper and McBain; rover, Maudsley; alternates, Parnall, Mason and Damon.

Kinsmen: Goal, Lacheur; defence, Vitarelli and Roberts; centre, Cavaretti; wings, Crowe and Maloney; rover, Moore; alternates, Detlor, Menzies and Kinmond.

Double Ball Games Watercraft Loop

Two snappy Watercraft Softball League games were run off at the Ex. on Thursday when Venetians beat Comets 28-13 and Admirals got a 20-18 win over Falcons. Fair pitching was seen but the batters banged the apple hard and often while the fielding was poor, accounting for much of the high scoring. The second fixture was tight and showed the teams evenly matched. Richardson banged out three circuit clouts for the Admirals. Lineups:

Inside Sportin' Dope

BY A. WISE CRACKER

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, them birds looking down at you from the dizzy heights of the Central Ontario ladder is none other than Mister Eddie Murphy's Petes which has, since my last epistle, took theirselfs to the top of the heap the hard way, that is, by beating both Oshawa and the Kingston Ponies away from home. That, neighbors, is a nice week's work no matter which way you look at it and while the home talent aint exactly developed anything what looks like a wrecking crew with the willow, their good pitching and nice defensive work is making them tough opposition for any man's ball team.

Kitch Comes Through.

Our Mister Kitchen was the hero of the win in Oshawa for the big boy got that foot up in the air and poured in his Sunday ball all afternoon with the result that the GM-men couldn't bust through his service when they was customers on the runways. They could get people on the cushions all right but when it come to delivering the blow that meant transportation to the pay-off station Mister Kitchen had all the numbers and the result was a flock of Oshawa runners got nothing but a chance to look over the pretty girls, if any, in the stand. On top of that super-fine flinging Mister Kitchen showed the boys how to put a little punch in their attack for he cashed in with 2 safe blows and 1 of them helped not a little to win the ball game.

This Was Enjoyable.

Down in Kingston Tues. nite the boys give the Ponies another chance to look over our Massachusetts southpaw and once again Mister McNally's speed and effective curve proved mighty discouraging to the majority of the Pony hitters. Six blows is all they could collect off his delivery and 12 of the enemy went down by the strikeout route so the figgers goes to show the lefthander turned in a de luxe performance and like Mister Kitchen he also contributed a coupla timely singles for the good of the cause.

The best thing about that win in Kingston was the fact it was earned at the expense of Mister Tony Parkyourkarkas or what have you, the college flinger, which last year was poison to our birds most of the season. Tony, as we call him for short, went to the rescue of Mister Poller and when he stopped the Petes cold after they had the bases all loaded up it looked like the old jinx was still working.

They Trim Tony

However the lads had the satisfaction later of nicking the righthander for the tieing and winning runs thanks to timely raps by our Mister Deadey and our Mister Clark, the latter smacking the double that sent in the winning run. It was a nice performance all the way and it showed the Petes is strictly in the hunt and strong enough to make every game a battle.

But I Gotta Say It

As for the big leagues Mac I hate to keep on saying I told you so but the fact remains the Giants what I call to win the National loop is out in front in that league and the Yanks, my other selection, is at present leading the American, only ½ a game behind the Indians. I for 1 don't think that slender lead will last very long and if Mister Feller's arm don't show a improvement not only the Yanks but the Boston Red Sox will go whizzing by the Cleveland outfit before long. The Sox had a great home stand and if they make a good showing on the present western trip then you gotta put them down as real pennant threats. Right now they're a tougher menace to the Yanks than the Indians is.

Well that seems to be about the right quantity of hay down for now so here's a fadeout.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER

PETES RACK UP SOFT LACROSSE WIN OVER INGLEWOOD TEAM

Locals Secure Third Victory Over Combines

The Petes swamped the Inglewood-Caledon Combines by a 19-6 score here last night before 800 fans in an O.L.A. Senior B fixture. It was a fair lacrosse game, but one-sided most of the way. The losers were minus their ace, Puckering, and played an indifferent brand of lacrosse, while the Petes were in top form and turned in their best all-around display of the season.

Dominating play from the start, the locals passed almost perfectly, shot with deadly accuracy and checked their rivals almost to a standstill. The game was rugged in spots, with the Petes drawing plenty of penalties, but still looking superior throughout. They had a 5-2 edge in the first quarter, were in front 9 to 3 at half-time, and had a 14-6 margin going into the fourth. They blanked the Combines 5-0 in a soft final stanza and scored another one, which wasn't counted, at the last gong.

Meyette Shines.

While all the Petes looked good in this showing, the work of Meyette in goal and Worthy, Whitton and Reid up front fairly sparkled. To a little lesser extent, Crowe looked good. The latter was hurt after scoring a neat goal in the fourth frame. The rest of the gang were close behind in effective all-around work. Chambers had some neat saves in the losers' net, but had little defence in front of him. Jones, the Nelson brothers, and T. Patterson went best for the Combines. It was the third O.L.A. win in four starts for Coach Frank Randle's bunch.

The teams:

Combines — Goal, Chambers; defence, Wilson and Petch; centre, E. Nelson; wings, Jones and O. Nelson; rover, T. Patterson; alternates, Smith, McCammell, S. Patterson, Erskine, Raeburn, and McEachern..

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

The heavy downpour of rain that hit the northwestern part of the city yesterday afternoon left our bowling greens in such a condition that the committees thought it advisable to cancel the open mixed tournament scheduled for last night.

In addition to next week's schedule games we hold our second local twilight for men's doubles. It will be run under the same conditions as the one on Wednesday, June 1—3-10 end games—$2 per pair fee.

There will be the usual mixed tournament at 7.30 this evening.

Matter Of Principle

"I dont see how anyone could be expected to support an entourage to participate in such a country as Japan, when you consider the policies she stands for today" was the way Wm. J. Bingham (above), director of athletics at Harvard university, expressed his opinion when he resigned from the International Olympic Committee, of which he had been a member for United States.

Toronto Gets Second Win From Orioles

TORONTO, June 18 (CP).—Almost lost in the shuffle among the great collection of minor league stars on the powerful Newark Bears of the International League is 25-year-old Jimmy Gleeson, who, despite the lack of fanfare accorded him, plays an important part in the Bears' success.

Obscured by the batting feats of clouting Charley Keller, and by the home-run slugging of veteran Bob Seeds, Gleeson, who rounds out the Bears' outfield with that duo, is a much better than average ball player.

Though he generally hovers around the .300-mark in batting, Gleeson is rated a tough customer in the "clutch." Take last night's game with Rochester Red Wings. Gleeson made only one hit, but it was a homer in the sixth with the bases loaded and the Bears trailing. It climaxed a seven-run uprising that gave the Bears a 9-4 victory.

The Bears' win—their eighth in a row—boosted their league lead to 8½ games over Buffalo Bisons, who were rained out in Syracuse. The Chiefs, despite their idleness, moved past the Red Wings into a virtual tie for third place with Jersey City Giants, who were defeated 6-2 by Montreal Royals. The third game of the night saw Toronto Maple Leafs score their second win in a row over Baltimore Orioles, 3-1.

Bob Scott Wins City's First Soap Box Derby

Bob Scott, 497 King Street, won Peterborough's first soap box derby on Friday evening in championship style. The 13-year-old youngster drove his home-made car down Armour Hill, past a thousand or more cheering spectators, in the record time of 43 seconds, faster time than in any of the heats.

Douglas Butcher finished second in 44 seconds, Gordon Wallace was third in 48 seconds. Credited with being the fastest car in the race, Henry McIsaac's speedy waggon lurched from side to side down the hill, crashed into a wall of spectators when its driver lost control, and injured one spectator.

A squad of nearly half a dozen police had difficulty in keeping under control the huge crowd that lined both sides of Hunter Street. Mostly children, they darted in front of the racing cars, seethed forward at the finishing mark.

The race was run in three heats, with ten entrants in all, winners of each heat competing in the finals. Bob Scott won the first heat in 44 4-5 seconds; Doug. Hill was second; Jim Ferguson, third. In the second heat Gordon Wallace romped in first in one minute, one and a half seconds after Henry McIsaac's car was disqualified when it hurtled into the crowd. George Leeming was second. In the third heat Doug. Butcher came first in 45 1-5 seconds, with Jack Whittaker and Alex. Craig placing second and third.

Full Professional Style.

The race started near the top of Armour Hill on Hunter Street, across from King George School, ended near the railway tracks at the foot, a distance of about one-sixth of a mile. In full professional racing style, the race was started by the fall of a red flag in the hands of Starter Bud Bartlett, after Announcer Graham Eastwood had cleared the track, and as the winners crossed the finishing line they were called down with a checkered flag. Timer was Ron Knox; Walker Jones and Cook Munro were mechanical judges; Roy Lewis, Jim Goldie, Fred Shaw were finishing judges. Wally Davidson, Hunter Coleman and Bill Hillier were posted along the course, assisting police.

Members of the Y's Men's Club supervised the entire derby, gave the first prize of a handsome trophy. Other prizes were donated by Warne's Jewelers. All prizes were presented last night at the Peterborough-Englewood lacrosse game by Jim Goldie, president of the Y's Men's Club.

Success of the city's first derby, and the interest it aroused among young and old alike, will possibly mean the continuance of the sport. Y's Men's Club officials said they were hoping to sponsor a second derby and will in all likelihood send representatives from this city to the Canadian championships in Belleville.

Keene Girls Win From C.G.E. 7-6

Keene climbed into second place in the Girls' Softball League last night at the Bowl with a 7-6 victory over C.G.E. A large crowd saw the tightest game of the season with both squads turning in a good brand of softball and the issue decidedly in doubt till the final out in the last of the ninth. B. McDowell pitched fine ball for Keene, fanning 12, walking one and giving nine hits. M. McCarthy also twirled a good game, striking out 11, walking three but being nicked for 13 safeties. Their fielding support was fair. T. Stalter pitched to but one batter.

M. Belle of Keene had three hits, Mary Miller two, H. Nelson two doubles, and T. Mills a triple. For C.G.E., A. Doughty got four bingles, G. Mann two, P. Bigelow a homer and M. McCarthy a double. Neat fielding efforts were turned in by E. Craig, A. Clarke, Mary Miller and R. Wood. There were two C.G.E. double-plays, catcher to first to catcher, and second to short to first. The teams:

Cubs Cop Nod 11-8 Over Greyhounds

The Cubs nosed out the Greyhounds 11 to 3 last night for their third straight win in a Junior City Baseball League fixture. Kirby, Cubs' starting hurler left the mound in the third inning with a sore arm. He was relieved by O'Dette who struck out nine of the ten men to face him. When O'Dette left the game for a pinch-hitter, Conroy took over the hurling duties and was credited with the win. The feature of the game was a mighty home run from the bat of Weir, Cubs' classy second baseman.

Round Up Of Female Turtles To Fill Order For Six Tons Bought By Dealer In Ohio

Twenty-Pound Reptiles Net Catchers About 50 Cents Each And Start Boys To Work At Dawn

With an order for six tons of turtles to be filled for export across the border, young men living along the South Monaghan water front are up with the robins and the balckbirds these mornings combing the plowed fields and the sand hills for females of the reptilian species testudinata.

These youths don't bother about such immaterial aspects as scientific names. They are simply grabbing mud turtles by the tails and dropping them into gunny sacs for delivery to Lorne Harris of Jubilee Point. And they have to be abroad when the dawn comes up silently on Rice Lake and the lower reaches of the Otonabee River because for all their slothful reputation, the female tortoises are nocturnal in their prolific egglaying, and are likely to be back in the water again by the time the sun is mounting in the sky.

Six-pound turtles are about the minimum limit, and at the other end of the scale the biggest will weigh around twenty-five pounds, although one was caught in a trap last year that went forty pounds. The young men engaged in this dewy round-up are paid 2½ cents a pound, and at that rate if you get your hand on the tail of a twenty-pounder and toss her into a jute bag you count up fifty cents and look around for the next one.

Female Mortality Higher

Presumably the male turtles play safe by staying in the water, and probably grow to huge size. At any rate, maternity in the turtle communities takes a heavy toll when some buyer in Ohio, so it said, sends over to Rice Lake an order for 12,000 pounds of them. And to help fill the order, several of the youths at Bailleboro have recently made three trips in the Ouse River, which runs through Westwood, in Asphodel township, and brought back 1,200 pounds of live turtles, and returned for more.

Mr Harris motored up to Wallace Point (Hales) Bridge Friday and bought 100 pounds from Jack Bonner. Percy Henry has been camped since about the first of the month at Kent's Creek between the two bridges over the Otonabee River, and 148 turtles were recently bagged in the neighborhood of the Bensfort Bridge.

Somebody may say that it is nice work if you can get it, but it is one of those temporary harvests that simply would not even be thought of by youths in the city.

Lorne Harris lives in the old resort at Jubilee Point, the Examiner was informed, and has been supplying some dealer in Ohio for a number of years. The meat of the turtles used to be sent over packed in ice, but some of it spoiled last summer, requiring a change in the method of delivery. In fact, it is said the Ohio man drives a truck over to South Monaghan for the stock to take back with him.

Bites Youth On Back

Slinging a bag of turtles over your back evidently has its hazards as one of the Bailieboro youths somewhat painfully discovered a few mornings ago. One of the females he caught wasn't going to be hauled off to an eventual soup pot without some kind of fight, so she nipped him in the back through the bag and his shirt, and they say a bull dog has nothing on a turtle when it comes to hanging on and refusing to let go.

Probably it is news to most city people that the female turtle lays her eggs during June. She waddles out of the water at night to a nearby sandy slope or a plowed field, and in a couple of hours fills a sandy loamy nest with nearly as many eggs as a hen, especially the lazy type of boarder as the poultrymen clas it, would lay in a year. One of the South Monaghan youths counted seventy-three eggs in one nest, and that was an interrupted and unfinished performance. And when the eggs are deposited the turtle leaves them to the June sun as a natural incubator, and crawls back to the lake or river. Some times eggs are laid on a dull day when the light is comparatively dim, but generally it is night work, and that is why the turtle round up begins each morning with the first twilight of dawn.

Turtle's "Testudo"

The turtle catcher has to get up between two and three o'clock standard time, and experience directs him where to look. That bit of scientific nomeclature above, referring to the turtle as a reptile of the testudinata order, simply means that the turtle is classed as a reptile and the specific order relates to the turtle's protective covering armor, its boney back resembling the "testudo" or shield of the soldiers of Caesar's time.

Sportsmen will give their blessing to the South Monaghan youths who are getting out of bed earlier than usual these mornings to fill that order of six tons. They wish it was sixty tons, because the mud turtle is known to be the enemy of frogs, tame and wild water fowl, and muskellunge. Some farmers along the river have often seen their flocks of ducks and geese depleted, chiefly by turtles. They swim up from the mud or wherever the hang out below the surface and grab a tame or wild duck by the foot, pull it under the water and drown it.

In fact some of the guides in the Kawartha district have told the Examiner the Ontario government would be well advised to grant a bounty for turtles, in the same manner but not in the same amount as for wolves, as a practical means of reducing the number of one of the most dstructive natural enemies of game fish.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, June 19.

Sunday's horoscope holds testimonies of great enterprise and initiative. It is a time when highly-stimulated energies and practical plans and programs should carry through brilliantly, with position and probably honors following. It is auspicious to seek these from superiors and those in authority, with the confidence born of work well done.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is will find themselves deep in a year of very active programs, with the faculties and forces under high stimuli for achievement, gratification, and probably honors or tokens of appreciation from high places. Creative ability, sound methods and well-directed efforts should spell success to ambitious projects.

A child born on this day may be energetic, aggressive, enterprising, and not averse to taking chances in a big way. It may also be public-spirited, humane, kindly and disposed to help its fellows forward on a sound basis.

For Monday, June 20.

Monday's astrological forecast is for a day of rather conflicting conditions, with many events undertoned by peculiar, secret or even sinister situations. There may be much perplexity and anxiety owing to these subtle situations, which may bring sorrow to some. Young persons may give concern. There are signs of duplicity or fraud, and intrigues in intimate associations may not be pleasant.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of contradictory conditions, with some joys and successes, but much anxiety, doubt, perplexity, intrigue, and treachery, although there also are signs of friendly circumstances. Safeguard the health, be careful with writings and not overanxious about youthful problems.

A child born on this day may be lively, versatile, probably crafty, and more or less irresponsible, being changeable, adventurous, and romantic. Yet it may have a serious side and may have a brilliant mind.

Father and Son Entombed For 48 Hours.

Soft cots in Ashland, Pa., State hospital must be their idea of heaven as Peter Shinkowsky, Jr., and his father, RIGHT, congratulate each other after being rescued from the "bootleg" mine shaft in which they were entombed 45-hours. Rescue crew worked two nights, finally reached them almost 300 feet underground and brought them to the surface. An iron pipe, driven through the debris supplied them with food and air. Examination proved them little the worse after their experience.

Business Hails End Of Tax, 'Building Boon'

TORONTO, June 18 (CP)—Canadian business generally welcomed today the budget of Finance Minister Dunning that featured removal of the eight per cent. sales tax on two score items used in the building trade..

The budget, making no provision for tariff changes in view of negotiations towards a new Canadian-United States trade agreement, was likewise given approval for its comparatively small over-all 1937-38 deficit, placed at $13,775,000.

From the construction industry, through which tax removals are expected to reach the general public most effectively, came the widest acclaim. Building men saw in the government's action a positive move toward stimulating construction throughout the country. Fishermen, tire manufacturers and breeders of fur-bearing animals also gave general approval to tax deletions aimed at helping their industries.

The Minister's statement on the country's present financial condition drew commendation. S. H. Logan, general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, pronounced the budget "a good one—if Mr. Dunning can balance his budget at $13,000,000 and include the Canadian National Railways deficit and relief expenditures he is doing a marvelous job."

Long-Needed Move.

Gordon West, Toronto, president of the Canadian Construction Council, said elimination of the sales tax from building materials "is a very constructive, long-needed move, and I am sure the building trades as a whole will be delighted by this change." He estimated the sales tax cost in a building at about four per cent. of the entire cost.

From the laborer's viewpoint came approval of A. Lyon, general secretary of the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada, who termed the change as "a move likely to mark the beginning of the end of eight bad years for the construction workers."

In Kitchener, John A. Martin, general manager of the Dominion Rubber Company, said removal of the excise tax on tires and tubes, used as original equipment on Canadian-made automobiles and trucks, was "a move in the right direction," but believed there would be little effect on the general tire market.

A. G. Partridge, president of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, said in Toronto the move "should be of assistance to tire manufacturing."

Two outfitters of fishing schooners at Lunenburg, N.S., Captain Henry Winters and E. F. Zwicker, said sales tax exemption of certain equipment used for commercial fishing meant "money could be saved."

Opinion that exemption of company contributions to pension funds from income taxes, provided in the budget, would not prove satisfactory, came from Sydney Parsons, vice-president of the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council. An equitable proportional contribution from all companies, would not necessarily result, he said, whereas pension funds should be operated entirely by the Federal government as a charge against companies "exploiting" the country's resources.

The budget provision for co-ordinating Dominion with Provincial tax on a share of stock at $1 or more will mean little change in actual revenue, said Norman C. Urquhart, president of the Toronto Stock Exchange, but will simplify making out tax sheets and save a tremendous amount of work. Each share will be taxed one-quarter of one per cent. The Federal tax was one-tenth of one per cent.

Find Few Newshounds Anxious To See Quints

TORONTO, June 18 (CP) — It would seem the American newspaper men and women—at least insofar as they are represented by the current convention of the American Newspaper Guild—don't care much about the Dionne quintuplets. The Toronto local of the Guild, as the highspot of its convention entertainment program for the visiting delegates, alternates and waves, had arranged a "bargain day" visit Saturday to Callander to see the famous "Quints." Railroad fare and three meals—all for the small sum of $8.50.

Ralph Foster, president of the Toronto Guild, mounted the rostrum at the convention yesterday and announced the trip was cancelled.

"Those who signed up to go," Foster said, "hardly outnumbered the Quintuplets."

Only 20 persons, he said, made arrangements for the trip, and the Toronto Guild expected at least 100 persons to take advantage of the "bargain day."

"I guess too many of you," Foster said, "have been fed up with the stuff you've had to write and edit about the Quintuplets."

Beauty Is Theme Roseneath W.A.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, June 18.—Mrs. Arthur Braithwaite and Mrs. Elizabeth Braithwaite were joint hostesses to the members of the United Church W.A. and a number of visitors, at the former's home, Robin's Landing, Rice Lake, on Thursday afternoon.

The program: A reading, 'True Beauty," by Mrs. W. Robins; a solo, 'This is My Father's World,' sung by Mrs. L. W. Scott, and a poem, 'Vestigia,' read by Mrs. C. Sandercock, were featured during the opening exercises.

During the business period it was decided on motion to repair the lock on the church alcove door, the parsonage committee to attend to this matter.

The society decided on motion to co-operate with the W.M.S. regarding a method to raise funds, and the president and Misses Irene Brown and Mary Braithwaite were the committee named to meet the W.M.S. committee to arrange details.

Mrs. M. Davey and Miss Mary Braithwaite were appointed to purchase material for an applique quilt, now on order, with power to add to their committee to prepare material for sewing. Mrs. W. Robins offered her home for the July meeting, and Mrs. L. Tucker and Mrs. S. Thackeray form a program committee.

A varied program was much enjoyed. Mrs. C. Payne read "Looking For Trouble," Miss Mary Braithwaite read, "For People Will Talk," Mrs. M. Davey arranged a musical novelty act, Mrs. C. Payne winning out in this number; Miss Irene Brown read, 'The Exchange,' and Mrs. L. Tucker recited a poem, 'Old Violin,' written by Premier Aberhart of Alberta, and Mrs. C. Grigg tested the riddle solving ability of the gathering with a series of riddles.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, and following this, many of the company gathered on the lake shore to enjoy the sunset.

Mrs. L. W. Scott presided over the devotional period, the president, Mrs. A. Nill, presided over the business session and Mrs. C. Sandercock, program convenor, arranged and announced the numbers.

WARSAW

Miss Helen Tedford entertained the members of Warsaw Baptist Church at her home recently in honor of the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Walker. The groom's parents, Rev. Mr. Walker, pastor of Warsaw Baptist Church, and Mrs. Walker were also present.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thresher, Belleville, were Tuesday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Latta.

Mrs. George Weller and other members of the Women's Institute executive were invited by Mrs. Latta to hold the executive meeting at her home on Tuesday evening. The following business was discussed: There will be no picnic this year. During the year demonstrations in needlecraft will be given, when members will be asked for the roll call to bring samples of needlecraft of any kind, old or new, which they may possess. It is hoped to arrange for a visit to some of the industrial plants in Peterborough.

October is Thanksgiving month. November, peace. Roll call, my own share in making peace. December will bring the report of and any discussion on the area convention. Roll call, gift for the children. Deaf Mute Runs Amok To Get To Calgary

GODERICH, Ont., June 18. — (CP)—Mrs. Salomia Cole, pretty young Goderich township deaf mute, is still determined to go back to Calgary after breaking 21 windows, a set of dishes and the family fruit jars.

Salomia, already on suspended sentence for smashing things in her father-in-law's farm house, was in court again yesterday for running amok. She was told in various ways that the next outbreak means jail, but the father-in-law just shook his head and said if she was to be left at large he would put up the money to send her back to Calgary.

Tired of the farm, Salomia wants to leave her husband and go back to her mother and city life in Calgary. Refused the money to go, she has broken just about everything in the house where she lives with her husband, two children and father-in-law.

Salomia, her husband—who is also deaf and dumb—and an interpreter went through the antics of the sign language as Magistrate Gordon Longman looked on bewildered.

The interpreter interrupted long enough to explain that the woman, Russian-born, knows very little English and perhaps did not realize the seriousness of her acts. She can read and write Russian though.

So another interpreter was obtained. This one, however, could only speak — not read or write — Russian.

About the only English Salomia could read or write in previous court appearances was "I want to go back to Calgary." Yesterday she couldn't write Russian or English, because her index finger, cut when she took to smashing glass again, was swathed in bandages.

Claim Building Tax Shifted To Raw Product

OTTAWA, June 18 (CP).—In only a few instances has there been a transfer of the sales tax from finished raw products under amendments proposed by the Dunning budget, officials of the Department of National Revenue said here last night.

They were commenting on a circular issued today by the British Columbia division of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association which claimed the result of Finance Minister Dunning's exemption of construction materials was to transfer the tax from the finished to raw materials.

Before the sales tax was changed, a manufacturer could escape it on his raw materials by means of certificate to the department. That certificate has been discontinued but an exemption list has been compiled which covers practically all the raw materials used in manufacturing the goods enumerated in the budget.

For instance, Brick was exempted from the sales tax but the raw material, clay, also is exempt so the manufacturer will pay no tax whatever. The same is true of the following products, tile, building blocks, building stone, plaster, cement, stucco, fibre-board, paints, white lead and paint oil.

In plumbing products, the steel will be taxable but if clay is used, it will pay no tax. In the case of steel plumbing products, the tax has been transferred from the finished product to the raw material because manufacturers heretofore were able to exempt their primary goods by certificate.

The same thing is true of such products as locks, hinges, pulleys and window fasteners—the steel used as a raw material will be taxable but not the finished product.

Warkworth Branch Institute Hears District Report

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARKWORTH, June 18. — The June meeting of the Percy Women's Institute was held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Stanley Brenton. As it was visitors' day a large number of visitors as well as a full attendance of members made a very large and interesting meeting. After the opening exercises and business, Mrs. George Helson, the president, gave a very interesting talk on the motto, "For Home and Country." This was fololwed by a splendid report of the district directors' meeting which was held recently in Codrington and given by Mrs. Alexander Merrills. Miss Orletta Gummer and Miss Clara Helson gave a very full account of their trip to Guelph. A short program, which consisted of community singing led by Mrs. Charlie Puffer, and a reading entitled "Emergency Meals" by Mrs. Peter Jones, concluded a very enjoyable program. Mrs. Brenton and her assistants served a dainty lunch and the singing of the National Anthem brought to a close a very interesting meeting. Mrs. Lorne Hutchison will be hostess for the July meeting, and weather permitting, it will take the form of a picnic.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Zufelt spent Wednesday the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ryckman at Codrington.

$5000 INSURANCE and $25 a Month Pension at Age 60 for $11.60 a Month

The Mutual Life of Canada has a special plan for the young man who wants to provide adequate protection for his family during the years when the children are growing up, and under the same policy create a fund that will guarantee him a monthly income at age 60.

This is the "Security at 60" policy, and the protection provided for the annual premium required is particularly attractive. For instance, if you are age 30, a monthly premium of $11.60 gives you $5,000 insurance to age 60, when you will receive an income FOR LIFE of $25 per month. (Should you not live to receive the payments for at least ten years, the income of $25 per month would be continued to your beneficiary for the balance of the ten year period.) Annual Dividends are paid on this policy.

Any of our representatives or Head Office will be pleased to give you complete details regarding the Security at 60 Policy, which can be obtained in amounts of $2,000 and over.

Skin Tells Death

SAN FRANCISCO.—Ability of the human skin to stretch is a newly discovered prognosticator of death or recovery in several serious diseases. The skin, which doctors call "the outer defence of the body," changes its elasticity during disease and is used to foretell the course of illness before the patient himself feels a change.

A Roosevelt Wedding

NAHANT, Mass.—John Roosevelt and Anne Lindsay Clark turned toward the altar today for a wedding ceremony destined to mark the end of an era for the first family of the United States. The marriage was underscored at the minute when the last of their five children had grown up and stepped from the immediate family.

Stuffed Quail Relic Of Plan To Stock Island

A quail in Tom Armstrong's collection of stuffed birds at Bensfort should be of special interest to Chris Graham, Herb Routley and the other local sportsmen and skeet shooters who planned some years ago to stock Long Island, George Nurse's expansive farm between the South Monaghan and Hamilton township shores of Rice Lake.

"I think they put out thirty-six pairs of quail," Mr. Armstrong told the Examiner yesterday afternoon at his store, "and of course they thought that within a few years there would be lots of these game birds for shooting. No doubt they expected the quail would be confined to the island, but when winter came and the lake froze over they disappeared to the mainland on both sides of the lake, and that was the last that was seen of them.

While it lasted, the Peterborough men must have had a lot of fun shooting the quail that stayed on the island. You can be walking along thorugh the underbrush, and a quail seems to wait until you are right beside them. Then they take to the wing with a whirr, and as they are only small birds, you've to be mighty quick with the trigger to bring one down. I think the Peterborough men emptied a lot of shells in their sport, and it was just too bad their plans did not carry out as they had imagined."

Once Valued At $500

Mr. Armstrong has quite an extensive collection of birds, most of them native. The late Edwin Elcome, Peterborough taxidermist, valued them at $500, and Mr. Armstrong would sell them for half that sum. They should be of interest and value to some institution like the Normal School. The collection includes a perfect specimen of the blue heron, a male crane as it is commonly called. Some one found it in a muskrat trap years ago, and gave it to Mr. Armstrong. His wild ducks include a pintail, hooded maganzer, drake Buffalo head, whistler drake, wood duck and "coween."

Other specimens are a cormorant shot at Rice Lake, three or four varieties of the owl family, a "flying" squirrel, a Manitoba gopher and jack rabbit, and a South American humming bird which Mr. Elcome gave him.

Mr. Armstrong was born in South Monaghan seventy-nine years ago, September 17, 1859. His father died in the following June, victim of a minor accident on the farm. He was struck on the side of his body by the handle of a plow, causing inflammation that became fatal. Mr. Armstrong was only a baby. His mother died sixty-five years ago, and at thirteen he was an orphan. He has carried on the store at Bensford, four miles east of Centreville, since 1892. Alex D. Galloway was one of those who preceded him. The store is on the farm owned by the father of Joseph F. Morrison of Dalhousie Street, Peterborough.

"If I were a young man again I think I'd move the store down the corner and probably have a garage with it,' Mr. Armstrong remarked. "Or perhaps I'd have a garage with the store as an annex. There'd be a lot of business here on Sunday, for anyone who would keep open that day. Cars fly by down to the lake and out to the highway."

A Grayson Character

Mr. Armstrong is a friendly man of good humor, the kind "David Grayson" used to mention in his stories of little excursions into quiet country places and of the men of fine human qualities he used to meet along the way. Since his wife died he has been alone at the store, and that is one of the reasons why he is thinking of disposing of his collection of birds to any one who wants them. He doesn't look his seventy-nine years, and evidently they rest lightly upon him, in spite of the losses and disappointments time brings to most men.

Community of Peteborough People Live in Bush North of Apsley

A few miles north of Apsley, in the heart of the bush land, is a tiny settlement of Peterborough people. Most are on relief, cutting wood that will be sold to the city for use by persons on relief next winter. These pictures give some indication of the kind of life they lead. TOP LEFT is a 15-year-old girl, daughter of one of the workers, picking wild strawberries. She and her mother cook for some of the men, preserve strawberries each day. TOP CENTRE is Ralph McQuaig, foreman of the woodcutters, an employee of the Peterborough Fuel and Transport Company. At TOP LEFT one worker plays on a mandarin after working hours. MIDDLE LEFT shows two of the workers sawing down a tree in a scattered portion of the woods. Men say the bush is not a good one, that the wood is knotty, and they have difficulty making much money. In MIDDLE CENTRE three men are standing beside a pile of not more than a cord and a half. It represents the work of the three of them for the entire day. Some logs they were unable to split at all. One man and his wife went to the bush to avoid relief when he lost his job. They erected the tent shown at MIDDLE RIGHT, are the most industrious workers. At LOWER LEFT is the interior of the bunk house for men. One man, his wife and daughter, built the shack in LOWER CENTRE. The wife cooks for some of the men. Wild roses bloom in thousands about the camp, lending a bit of beauty to the rough, outdoor life the men lead. This young girl, only unmarried woman in camp, cuts some each day, brings some to her house, some to the men's bunkhouse, which she tidies up in their absence.

S.A. Official Is Speaker Kiwanis Lunch

"We are crusaders under a new banner but in an old cause," declared Colonel G. W. Peacock, chief secretary of the Salavation Army in Canada, Newfoundland, Bermuda and Alaska. He was speaking at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis club at the Empress Hotel on Friday on "Ten Commandments for Service Club Members."

"As we render service we but emulate the example of Him of whom it was said, 'He went about doing good'," the speaker said.

A Kiwanian himself, Colonel Peacock said he regarded it "a high privilege to have had intimate acquaintance with the men who have laid the rails that the great service runs on." For many years he was a member of the Chicago club, from which many International presidents have been elected.

His first commandment was that members should be present at weekly meetings. "Kiwanis is a spirit. It cannot be taught, it must be caught. It is at the weekly luncheons that you will catch that spirit," he said. "Thou shalt be punctual," was his second commandment. "The man who can be counted on to keep an appointment on time is a man greatly appreciated," he said, claiming the great of English and United States' history have been men of punctuality.

Patience and tolerance was his third order. "The fact that Kiwanis knows no politics or creeds is a distinct advantage," he stated. "Here Jew or Gentile, Grit or Tory, Roman Catholic or Protestant, can meet in harmony. All classes gather under the umbrella of Kiwanis." If the world has one lesson to learn today it is that of patience and toleration," he said.

"Life is something to be enjoyed, not something to be endured," he said, citing "Thou shalt be pleasant" as his fourth commandment.

His fifth was that members should be progressive. "Kiwanians should be known as men of initiative. Be a modernist in methods, but a fundamentalist in principle. Keep out of the ruts. The groove leads to the grave."

Be men of authority; know what you are talking about, he urged in his next commandment. "Thou shalt be positive."

"Thou shalt be prepared," he claimed as the next order. Eighth in his list was that members should be producers. "Kiwanis has no place for members who are merely book entries. Members should be lifters, not leaners," he said.

"Enthusiasm is the greatest asset in the business world. You can't stop the man who is enthusiastic," he said after urging as his ninth commandment that men be "peppy."

His final advice was to be practical. "This is not a mere luncheon club, a social gathering, but an organization charged with tremendous responsibilities," he told members.

'Lunge Season Opens Monday

The maskinonge season opens on Monday, and while that is an awkward day for a good many folk to get away, there will be plenty of activity around the favorite 'lunge sectors nevertheless.

The question has been raised as to whether or not, in view of the fact that the bass season does not open until July, plug baits can be used during the ten days in which 'lunge fishing alone is legalized. The answer according to Fish and Game Overseer Lyons is that there is nothing in the regulations to say that such baits cannot be used, even if that may increase the danger of hooking a bass.

As to the latter, Overseer Lyons points out that anybody who happens to get caught with a bass before July 1 is liable to a substantial fine, and the excuse that the fish was accidentally hooked during the 'lunge-fishing operations and was so badly injured that it could not live would not avail.

She leaves to mourn the loss besides her sorrowing husband, one daughter and one son, Mrs. A. C. Brown (Pearl) and Garnet Fletcher, also one sister, Mrs. George Buller, of this city.

The burial will take place in Vancouver.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

THE WATER PROBLEM

Problem of supplying their camp at Jackson Park with running water is still baffling Kiwanians. At a recent meeting with the Public Utilities Commission they were informed the cost of laying pipes to the park would be high.

A DOUBLE EGG

Mrs. Eugene Young, 50 Ware street, told the Examiner this morning of an egg that was doubly interesting. It was unusually large, seven by eight inches, and when it was broken a smaller but perfectly formed egg was found inside.

VISITS KIWANIS.

A visitor at the Kiwanis weekly luncheon on Friday was Harry Rush, who once lived in this city, later in Windsor, and who is living here once again. He was for many years the manager of the Prince Edward hotel in Windsor. In Peterborough more than three decades ago he was clerk in the Dominion bank.

ANNUAL CHURCH PARADE.

Under the command of Col. J. A. Dewart the Prince of Wales Rangers will hold their annual church parade to St. John's church on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Orders call for the assembly of the regiment at the Armouries at 10.15. The preacher at the service will be Rev. T. Brain, chaplain of the Rangers.

MUSKIE SEASON OPENS

The muskellunge fishing season opens Monday at daybreak, and from all accounts there is going to be a general desertion of downy couches at much earlier hours than usual by local sportsmen who are promising themselves and any friend who will go along a muskie for breakfast, or not later than dinner. Bass must not be caught until July 1. The legal catch of lunge is two a day for each person.

TO MEET BISHOP.

Louis Yeotes, president of the Ontario branch of the Greek Orthodox Church, left early to-day for Toronto where he and prominent Greeks of Toronto will meet Bishop Athnagoras of Washington, D.C., when he arrives at the Union station. The head of the United States and Canadian members of the Greek Orthodox Church will officiate at the opening of the new church on Bond street. Members of the Greek community of the Province will join in a six-hour ceremony to mark this opening.

NIGHTS OF FRAGRANCE

The flowers and fragrance of the year reached their peak this week. Driving up from Port Hope about 11 o'clock at night was a rather strange and transporting experience accentuated by the sweetly scented air, a bouquet of June clover, red and alsike, the flowers of the locust trees and basswood, the hay and grasses, all the ingredients of fairy land and the place of magic casements conceived by the poets. It was vastly different from January nights when the thermometer was shivering at 20 below zero, and the air was harsh and arctic.

OVERSEAS MAIL.

Mail for Great Britain and countries via Great Britain, letters addressed via New York, to connect with the steamer Queen Mary, sailing from New York, June 22nd, closes at the local Post Office, June 20th, midnight. ROTARY'S OFFICERS

The directors of the Peterborough Rotary Club met this week and elected James Dutton as president of the club for the twelve months commencing July 1. Rotarian Dutton will thus be eighteen months in office as for the past six months, since the resignation of Art Runions, he has been at the helm. E. L. Sackville was elected vice-president for the next year.

HE'S GOING FISHING

R. J. Moore of the Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs will be the guest of Bruce Johnston, municipal clerk of North Monaghan over the week-end and on Monday he and his host will embark on a fishing trip in the Buckhorn district. Clerk Johnston met Mr. Moore when he was taking a refresher course at Queen's Park recently and invited him down to show him what kind of lunge this district produces. Incidentally he probably figures it will do North Monaghan no harm to have a few friends in the municipal department of the Ontario government.

Cottagers Fed Up On Taxes At Stoney Lake

The Examiner learns that a number of Stoney Lake and Clear Lake cottagers, indignant at what they feel is exploitation on the part of township taxing authorities, are investigating the possibility of having the whole lake district incorporated as a separate municipality and have it elect its own municipal government and do its own taxing.

There is a feeling among summer visitors that they are being treated as milch cows by the townships and that their taxes are out of all reason when compared with what farmer taxpayers in the same municipalities have to pay. They point out that while they get no benefit from schools and in many cases very little from roads, they are quite willing to pay a reasonable amount of taxes, but The Examiner's informant states that they are fed up with being called upon to pay more than their share.

"The townships are killing the goose that lays the golden eggs," one owner of Clear Lake property said to The Examiner, "and this policy of piling on to the summer cottager all the traffic will bear is a mistake. People will only stand so much and then they will kick over the traces and that is what is happening right now, and explains why there is a move to have the lake district become a separate municipality."

The Rambling REPORTERS

A DECEMBER TOURIST

The Examiner was reasonably sure that its Mail-It-Away edition would bring rich returns in the way of summer business for Peterborough but we were not expecting that the results would continue until Christmas. Yet apparently the edition is having that effect. The local Y.M.C.A. had an advertisement in the special issue and the other day a letter was received from a man in Chicago who had read the Y's display and who wrote to say that he proposed to visit Peterborough next December and he wanted accommodation reserved for him at the Y.M.C.A. for four or five days.—F.D.C.

CARS CRACKED UP

The boy who went on a diet of watermelons in preparation for a watermelon-eating contest, has two imitators in Peterborough.

For two boys here found themselves without cars to drive in Friday night's soap box derby because they decided to get in some practice during the afternoon preceding the race. They started off down Armour Hill toward the Lift Locks, cracked up one after the other before they reached bottom.—P.

S.S. Stoney Lake Ends Service After 30 Years

The decision of the Stoney Lake Navigation Company not to operate the excursion steamer Stoney Lake this summer definitely means the end of a period over which older citizens can look back with fond memories of something that was romantic and colorful.

With the Stoney Lake not in commission, the company steamer Islinda remains the only passenger boat operating on the whole Trent Waterway system. She will shortly commence her regular run on Stoney Lake.

The steamer Stoney Lake has been plying the Trent waters for over 30 years, most of that time in command of the veteran skipper Captain William Scollard, and she and her captain are known from one end of the waterway to the other. She dates back to the period when the steamboat played a very important role in the district during the summer months, the period when the Rainbow and the Water Lily, the Geneva and the Sovereign, the Otonabee and the City of Peterborough run on the Otonabee and the Empress and Majestic were popular Stoney Lake craft, and in the Lindsay-Sturgeon Point sector there were the Sunbeam, the Grandella, and the Ogemah, to name a few.

Those S. S. Picnics.

Hundreds of Peterborough people, now with children of their own, can hark back to the days of the Sunday School excursion on the Stoney Lake down the Otonabee River to one of the Rice Lake points or up the canal to South Beach or Sandy Point.

Recalled, too, in the light of the annoucement that the popular excursion steamer is tied up this season, and possibly for good, will be the highlight excursions of the years that are past, the jaunts of the Olympic Club to Stoney Lake, the annual excursion up the canal on Civic Holiday for the Juniper Island Regatta, the picnics down the river of the doctors and lawyers, the Masons, and the business men, the famous excursion run by Billy Batten to Bobcaygeon every year, an event that usually wound up the season, and the scores of other outings.

The Stoney Lake has carried hundreds of excursions and many thousands of passengers in the more than three decades she has been in operation and from Trenton to Orillia there will be regret at the annoncement that her day is apparently over.

FICTION AND FEATURES

FIESTA.

By OREN ARNOLD

RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Bill Baron, a footloose Texan, has just been rescued from a band of Yaqui Indians, holding him for ransom, through a bold move on the part of Ellen Dale, Hollywood screen star. Ellen and Bill had been staying at the wealthy Montoya ranch across the Mexican border where they found themselves after a lucky parachute jump from Baron's plane during a storm. Ellen, enchanted by the atmosphere of old Mexico, finds herself growing much interested in Bill. Also rescued with Bill was Panola Montoya, the ranch owner's daughter whose invitation to ride with her led to their capture by the Yaqui. As they return to the ranch, Bill and Ellen find Don Julio, their host, and his son, Felix, with a large following of Mexicans, in hot pursuit of the Yaqui. Ellen begs them to desist. Bill drives Ellen to Nogales after they say goodby to the Montoyas, both promising to return later for a fiesta. Suddenly, upon receipt of a necklace and a dinner invitation from Bill, Ellen decides not to return to Hollywood and telephones Sid Bromberg, her producer who is in love with her, not to come to Nogales for her. She and Bill dine at a romantic spot and Ellen finds herself serenly happy.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 17

There was no need for conversation. This is often so, when all is well between two people. But when they had done, save for nibbling the cactus candy served as dessert, and Ellen was starring out dreamily at nothing, she asked a most astonishing thing.

"Bill, do you know how to make a bullfrog croak?"

Bill Baron and Ellen came back across the international line soon after dinner.

"I think I'd better take you home, date," Bill drawled, when they had cleared the customs inspection. "I lose all self-control at dinner. I am now in what is known as a gastromic stupor."

"Bill, that's indelicate!" Ellen snapped, pretending to be offended. But she also relaxed audibly in the taxicab seat. Never, she declared, had she eaten so bountifully, so delightfully, or in such a strange place.

Their car rolled lazily up a street of low abode houses, square box-like things in which Mexican families lived. A great green parrot squawked fussily in front of one door, hanging and twisting on a peg driven into the abode wall. A naked and brown two-year-old baby ran out in the dimly lighted street, accompanied by a yapping dog, and threw gravel at the taxicab, but a bigger Mexican child came and slapped the babe back to its own stoop. It didn't seem to mind. Next door to this house, along a barren porchless mud wall, six Mexican men squatted on their heels enjoying the moonlight. One made rhythmic passes at a guitar—um-plang-plang, um-plang-plang, um-plang-pang—and as Bill Ellen moved by, all six of the men suddenly voiced a soft melodic chorus:

"Ay, ay- ay-ay,
Canta y no llores;
Porque cantando se alegram
Cielito lindo los corazones."

It is the most haunting chorus that has come out of Spain or Mexico, and as they rode on Bill Baron began humming it. Ellen liked it, liked to hear him. Somehow it was immensely comforting, even though she couldn't say why. In California she had constant access to the best orchestras and best singers in the world, the highest priced; and music had usually been just a business consideration, a part of the routine of making motion pictures. But a snatch of song beside an adobe wall, echoed by a big leisurely Texan, touched her with a magic she had not known.

"I have some business matters to report," Bill informed her, as they left the taxicab at the hotel. "Shall we sit in the lobby, or—?"

"Let's see if the patio has a private spot," Ellen countered.

It did have; under a stone archway with rustic chairs. Moonlight filtered through a vine which with the gentle breeze created an animated shadow pattern on Ellen's gown and on the stone column beside her.

"I was not loafing all afternoon," Bill began, after they were comfortable. "I have some—contacts—here. Some business friends. I know several people in and about Nogales, in fact. I learned of a ranch for sale up in the Santa Catalinas. There's another pretty good acreage on the south slope of the Rincons."

"They are—mountains, Bill?"

"Yeah, sure. Up that way." He pointed northward.

"They have lovely names. Musical."

"Yep. Everything in Arizona does, Ellen. Well, these ranches might fit into your plans, if you still yearn for that home in the great open spaces. Do you?"

Ellen didn't answer at once. She looked out across the patio, at the pool where El Conquistador probably was sleeping and dreaming. Then she answered.

"When I was on that trail with the Yaqui Indians, I thought Mexico and everything around it must be terrible. But since then I have again felt its charm. Yes, Bill, I want a ranch home; some of—this. You know what I mean!"

He nodded. "I know."

"Can I go see these ranches? Tomorrow?"

"Yes. That's what I was going to suggest. One of them has an old rattle-trap house on it, the other has no house at all now. The price would be low, if you didn't let them know who you were. They might take advantage of a wealthy movie actress."

"Certainly, Bill. I understand that. I have faced it before. And now I must speak my piece, too. If I am going to live down here, and buy a land and build a home, and have a ranch and—and—cows and whatever, I must have help. After all, I don't know anything about it. I'll need a business manager."

"Foreman, they call 'em," Bill prompted, grinning. "He bosses all the cowboys, sees to the work.

"Foreman, then. But I don't know where to get one. And—I'd want one I could trust, and who had business sense aside from driving cows. I have some money interests elsewhere, too."

"Sure," he agreed.

"Bill, could you—consider it? You said you were a cowboy in Texas. I never question you further. But I know you have more background than that. You lost your airplane because of me. Do you have other employment? Am I offending you in offering you a job?"

Big Bill Baron sighed, heavily.

"Ellen, whenever any American gets offended because somebody offers him a job, he ought to be jailed. Even if he doesn't need one. It happens, however, that I do. I think you've hired a man!"

"Oh good! But this must be kept on a business basis. How much shall I pay you?"

"You ask me, rather than tell me! You need a manager, all right, Ellen. I think maybe you'd better wait and see if I'm worth anything."

"No."

"Right. That isn't sensible, of course. It must be a business matter between us. And Im glad you realize that. I think—would $75 or $100 a week be too much? If you want me to take less, I will."

"I can pay more than that, Bill. I make about $2,000 a week."

"I'll take the hundred. It's enough. You can put me under bond, if I have to handle any money for you."

"No."

"Yes. Absolutely. Business is business, Ellen."

He insisted on it, but he wasn't happy about it and he wasn't sure hwy. He studied her for a moment. Even in the shadowed moon glow she was lovely, and awfully dainty, he thought. No wonder thousands of screen fans had fallen for her. But it hurt his pride a little to know that he was a man and older than she and not even earning a tenth of her income; America is all cock-eyed, he told himself.

They planned a lot more, talking until 11 oclock. It was all quite serious, business talk. The impersonal nature of it gradually caused Bill's mood to deepen, and he didn't like it. He had been strangely happy whenever in Ellen Dale's company for the past several days—calling that privilege a rare piece of luck. But two hours of business talk somehow cramped him.

He bade her goodnight and went to his room still in the dark mood. He sat on his bed and meditated for a while, finally muttering "Damn!" and getting no release from it. He tried taking a bath, but that didn't help. He felt somehow that he had told Ellen Dale, a girl, goodby, and accepted a position in the employ of Miss Dale, a spinster business woman.

He had enough of brooding presently, and went impulsively to his room telephone.

"Listen Ellen," he spoke directly to the point when the call was through, "I'm sorry to awaken you, but I must tell you I can't take your job. I am resigning, now."

'Oh! Bill! What is it? Is something wrong?"

"Yes. No. I mean—well, business would interfere with what I've got to do. I cannot work for you. I am going to make love to you instead!"

Dreams Give Clues to Solve Your Problems

Dreams Reveal Hidden Wishes

Ever dream of falling off a cliff? Modern psychology tells the meaning.

Maybe the sleeper's arm slips off the bed. The unconscious mind magnifies the falling sensation into a dream.

Or it might reveal some special problem. The girl in the sketch dreamed she stood on a cliff, excited by the magnificent view. Some force drew her to the cliff's edge. Suddenly she fell. A psychologist interprets her excitement as her early hopes over her approaching marriage. The jagged rocks below are her fiance's undesirable traits which she later discovered. The fall is the warning of her unconscious—she'll meet disaster unless she ends this affair.

Our 32-page booklet explains your own nightly trips into fantasy. Find the meaning of dream symbols. Throw light on your personal difficulties this new way. Interest your friends, too, by interpreting their dreams.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of THE MEANING OF DREAMS to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

DOROTHY DIX

Wrong-Doing Cannot Be Kept Secret for Any Length of Time, So if You Have Friends Who Urge a Primrose Path Journey, Drop Them Like You Would a Hot Stove

DEAR MISS DIX—I am a middle-aged married woman. Live in a small apartment. Have no children. My husband makes only enough for us to scrape by on. He has no desire to go about and have a good time, nor does he make any effort to see that I have pleasures. I have every afternoon and evening free on my hands and I crave good times. I have a close married girl friend whose life is just like mine. We are both attractive and appeal to men. She goes places and does things that I would be afraid to do. She pleads with me to do likewise and says that I, too, will find romance and pleasure and no one will be the wiser. Would you tell me of the dangers I would run if I took my friend's advice, and what would you advise me to do?

A. T. W.

Answer:

Well, the first danger that you will face, if you take your friend's advice, will be the certainty of finding yourself without a husband or a home or a settled support and with a damaged reputation. Don't delude yourself into thinking that you can lead the double life without being found out. You can't go around to places of amusement, or have dates with strange men without meeting somebody whom you know and who will tell your husband.

Wrongdoing can't be kept secret. No matter how carefully you hide your love nest, some one will discover it. No matter how warily you guard your speech and movements, something you do or say, something in your manners and expression, some little gewgaw or finery that you can't resist wearing, will give you away and start tongues wagging.

Nobody knows how gossip starts. It doesn't even have any tangible thing to go on. It is just something that people sense about the woman who goes wrong. It is the aura of evildoing about her.

Furthermore, the good times you buy at the expense of your principles won't be so good as you think they are. Maybe you will ride in fine automobiles with men who are pick-ups, but no car can go fast enough to take you away from your own thoughts and make you forget how you are betraying your husband who trusts you, and you will have to be very drunk indeed before you lose your sense of shame at what you are doing.

To be happy we have to be carefree, and you can't have a very hilarious time when the fear of being caught sits at your elbow and poisons every moment with dread.

Don't kid yourself into thinking that the men with whom you go out on these stolen parties will stand by you and take care of you when your husband has kicked you out. To them you are just one more loose woman to play around with for a few hours, to buy a few drinks for. You are just a blind date and nothing more, and they won't even remember your name or your telephone number twenty-four hours. And if you should go to them for help they would turn you down cold. They are spending their money on gay young girls, not on women who are down and out.

You ask for advice. Here it is: Have nothing more to do with the friend who is trying to persuade you to drag your skirts in the mud because hers are soiled. She bodes you no good, as the old-fashioned melodrama used to say. Then, consider your husband a little and have some sympathy for him. If he has no desire for good times and doesn't make any effort to take you out, it is because he is so hard-worked and tired and discouraged that he has no heart for pleasure. Spend your spare time trying to chirk him up and put fresh courage and heart into him.

Then get something to do. If you have your afternoons and evenings free, don't spend them in idle repining because you have nothing interesting to do. Find a job if you possibly can. Work is the only absolutely foolproof antidote there is for boredom. When you are doing the thing you like and know how to do it well, you are having the best good time there is on earth

If you can't get a job, the reason probably is that you do not know how to do any one thing well enough to make your services of value to an employer. If that is the case, spend the time that hangs so heavily on your hands in studying a trade. There are free classes in every conceivable subject which you can attend. Go to one of them and learn how to be an expert in some particular line so that you can sell your work and not your body for the good times you crave.

* * * * * *

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am 25 years of age, deeply in love with a young woman who returns my affection. Because of present conditions I cannot afford to marry for at least four or five years and I hesitate to ask her to wait for me that long, but she is willing to do so. Says five years pass swiftly when one has something to look forward to. Have I a right to keep her waiting that long? DON.

Answer:

It is up to the girl, isn't it, and she has decided that you are worth waiting for, so that rather ends the discussion. I think a long engagement is a bad business for both man and woman because not only does it put them in an artificial relationship toward each other, making them neither bond nor free, but because one or the other is so likely to cease to care for the other and still feel that he or she is bound to keep faith with the one who has been faithful to him or her.

I have seen so many marriages in which the man had outgrown the girl, yet felt he had to marry her because he had kept her from marrying any one else, or in which the girl found out that she had completely lost her taste for the man whom she had once thought her Fairy Prince. But they went on with a marriage that was nothing but a mockery of what it should have been.

It seems to me that it would be so much better if a young couple who are in love with each other, yet who cannot marry for years, would simply take an option on each other's affections, so to speak, instead of entering into a hard and fast contract; if they would not try to keep each other from having other dates, but would just be the preferred dates themselves, with the understanding that they would marry when the time came if they still wanted to do so.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

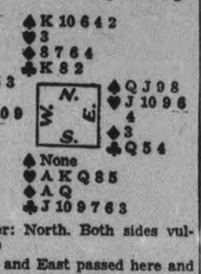
"The Authority on Authorities"

UNNECESSARY WORRY

SOME PLAYERS have heard too much about leading trumps to kill off those in the defenders' hands. They have got so that they lead them automatically at the first opportunity before looking to see if something else should be done beforehand. Or they lead them when some other piece of work is only half completed. It doesn't pay to be in too much of a hurry about anything in bridge.



(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

North and East passed here and South began the bidding with 1-Club, which West overcalled with 1-Diamond. North put in a spade bid and East passed again. South's next bid was 2-Hearts and when North showed a preference for clubs, South took the contract to five.

West decided on the diamond 5 for his opening attack against this contract and South won with the Q. Before drawing trumps, he cashed the heart Q and ruffed one heart. His next play was a trump, which West won with the A and followed with a diamond. East won with a trump and returned his last trump to kill any chance of another heart ruff.

South led a spade to his hand for a ruff and started on what seemed like a solid heart suit, but found to his chagrin that he had erred in not ruffing one more round of hearts to make his contract secure. He could afford to lose the two clubs, so no harm could have resulted from the play.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

THERE WERE a great many creatures of all sorts—mice and caterpillars and butterflies and gnats and spiders—waiting for the train to take them to the country. Knarf and Hanid, the shadow children with the turned-about names, were very surprised, though, to find a canary and a bullfinch waiting with the other passengers.

"But why are you going to the country?" Hanid asked the canary. It was carrying a little satchel full of seeds and a large jug of water.

The canary gave a cheerful little chirp. "Well," it said, "I've lived in a cage all winter long. My friend, Bullfinch, here lived in a cage next to mine. We both got tired of living in such a small space and decided to go to the country for the summer. There's lots of room in the country, you know."

By MAX TRELL

"Much more room than in a cage," the bullfinch put in, nodding its head.

Easy To Escape.

"But how did you manage to get out of your cages?" Knarf wanted to know.

"Oh, that was quite easy," said the canary. "You see, now that spring is here all the windows in the room where our cages were hanging were kept wide open. The lady who lives in our house came in to give us fresh water and to fill up our seed cups. So while she was out of the room changing the water, we both squeezed out through the space where the water cup fits in and flew right out of the window. 'Goodby!' I called back to the lady who was just then returning to the room. 'We'll be back at the end of the summer! Goodby!'"

"But she didn't say goodby to us," the bullfinch said, shaking its head sadly. "She just stood in the doorway with the two water cups in her hand and said, 'Oh—they're flying away! They'll never come back again!' But we will come back. We'll come back at the end of the summer."

Just as the bullfinch finished saying this, Knarf and Hanid heard a loud toot-toot.

Tea in Aid of Grenfell Mission

The home of Mrs. G. R. Langley, 239 Burnham street, with its spacious, tree-shaded lawns, was the lovely background for a garden tea held Friday afternoon in aid of the Grenfell Mission.

Mrs. Langley, wearing a pastel flowered hostess gown, and Mrs. F. M. Somerville in a summer sheer with panama hat, received the guests.

Tiny tea tables were scattered on the lawn, each one centred with a nosegay of flowers in small silver vases. They were in charge of Miss Linden Hall.

Pouring tea in the dining room, at a table covered with an Irish line cloth, and attractive with a graceful bouquet of peonies, yellow lilies and iris in a large glass bowl of corn flower blue, and matching glass candlesticks with pale pink tapers, were Mrs. W. R. Morris and Miss Florence Edwards. Their assistants were Mrs. G. M. Roger, Mrs. J. D. Collins, and the Misses Elizabeth MacKay, Alicia Langley and Margaret Lundy.

A bright spot of color was the garden produce table, covered with summer flowers and a wide variety of garden produce, which was in charge of Miss Grace Reindhardt, assisted by Mrs. D. V. Canning, Mrs. D. Davidson and Mrs. B. D. Hall.

The home cooking table, featuring a tempting display of homemade goodies, was in charge of Mrs. D. B. Falkner. A cake raffle was under the direction of Margaret Langley, and a raffle for a knitted baby's jacket was in charge of Mrs. F. C. The bride received many lovely gifts, after which a singsong was enjoyed with Harry Northrop at the piano. Dainty refreshments were served, which brought a pleasant evening to a close.

Games and Races At W. A. Picnic

Members of the Evening Branch of the Women's Auxiliary spent a very delightful afternoon and evening in the beautiful grounds and home of the Misses Milburne, Chemong Highway.

A few raindrops failed to dampen the spirits of the party, nor the genuine camaradie that prevails when this particular society gets together.

A new innovation was the serving of supper in cafeteria style, where each member helped herself to the wonderful display of salads, meats and cakes so capably planned and arranged by Mrs. M. Montgomery and her committee. Strawberries were also served, donated by Mrs. J. Bell.

Games and races were played after supper, and Mrs. W. Conway, Mrs. Rye, Mrs. W. D. McElwaine, Mrs. Boyitt and Miss B. Massey-Cooke were among the prizewinners. A winning team in the cracker-eating and whistling contest each received a lolly-pop.

A vote of thanks was given to the hostesses, and to those who provided transportation. Special guests were: Mrs. Lancaster, Rev. R. T. F. Brain, Miss K. Lacey and Mrs. W. Wheeler.

Fine Attendance At Garden Party

Attendance at the annual garden party, under the auspices of the Women's Association of St. Andrew's Church, reached encouraging proportions on Thursday evening, when the well-laden tables, centred with early summer blossoms, were filled again and again before the appetites of allcomers had been fully satisfied.

Strings of colored lights, overhead on the front and side lawns of the church, added much to the attractiveness of the scene, and furnished the needed illumination for those serving about the tea tables. The president, Mrs. P. I. Bentley, with many willing assistants, gave welcome to the guests, and saw that all details in connection with the happy event were carried through with efficiency and despatch.

Adjournment to the church auditorium for the program was made about eight-thirty, when Rev. A. L. Sisco took the chair and introduced the artists who were to provide the entertainment, and who gave thorough satisfaction and enjoyment with the selections presented.

The program opened with a piano duet by Misses Hazel Palmer and Margaret Smart, Mrs. Kitney following with two solos, "The Admiral and the Maid," and "Mighty Lak a Rose"; particularly popular were the Hawaiian guitar numbers by Misses McIllwain and Scott, and the readings by Miss Velma Staples won for her a well-merited round of applause; they included "Betty at the Ball Game," and "The Quintuplets of Callander," in the first part of the program, with "Lasca" and "Who Sent the Flowers?" in the concluding half.

The quartette numbers by the four sisters, Mrs. Kitney, Mrs. Monks, Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. McKinstrey, were much enjoyed, and the mixed quartette, Mrs. Arnold, Mrs. Kitney, Mr. Pitchford and Mr. Lapp, singing "The Violet and the Bee," was received with humorous appreciation. Mrs. Turner, who also accompanied the Peterborough talent, which was all from the choir of St. James' Church, and under the direction of the organist, Mr. Cecil Lapp, was heard in a number of readings, "A Voice From a Far Country" being one of her most popular selections, while "Her First Call at the Butcher's," gave opportunity for a hearty laugh.

Solos by Mrs. Arnold and duets by Mrs. Arnold and Mrs. Butcher, and by Mrs. Kitney and Mrs. Frost, with the National Anthem, completed a program that evidently met with the full approval of the audience. Total receipts would be over sixty dollars, but exact figures, with expenses deducted, are not at present available.

Large Attendance At S. S. Tea

LILY LAKE, June 18—Fair weather and an excellent attendance favored the garden tea, held by Lily Lake Sunday School at the spacious farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Hancock, known as "The Elms", on Thursday afternoon.

More than two hundred people attended the tea, enjoying a pleasant social afternoon, proceeds of which added about eighty-five dollars to the treasury. Mrs. Orville Young was the general convenor for the tea. The guests were received by Mrs. Gordon Hancock and Mrs. J. A. Middleton, while Mesdames George Middleton and Archie Ackison were the efficient treasurers.

The "Farmer's Table" supervised by Mrs. Robert Falls and Mrs. A. Beardsmore did a thriving business as did the bazaar, which was looked after by Mesdames Fred Steinkrauss and Clarence Ferguson. Mrs. William Steinkrauss looked after the program, which proved to be very entertaining.

The large tea table was pretty with its cutwork cloth and bouquet in a silver basket, with silver services at each end. Tea was poured by Mrs. T. McIvor, Mrs. Herb Darling, Mrs. George Edmison, Mrs. C. J. Hancock, Mrs. J. L. Rowland, Mrs. Dave Wilson, Mrs. Ev. Tully and Miss Rhea Wilson.

The small tea tables, grouped about the lawn, were dainty with snowy cloths and flowers in silver bud vases. These were looked after by Mrs. E. Hughey and the Misses Greta Wilson, Rhea Wilson, Enid Hancock, Jean Hancock, Marjorie Ruth, Isobel Young, Lulu Young, Marjory Tully, Marguerite Darling, Reta Darling.

The program included the following number: Hawaiian Instrumental, Elva and Jean Gray, Allan Boate, Marion and John Edmison, Muriel Pellow and Toots Dobson; vocal solo, Miss R. Quartermaine, accompanied at the piano by Miss Lily Bacon; address, Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr; recitation, "Reveration In A Church", Audrey Hatherly; reading, Mrs. Charles Huffman; piano solo, Helen Latimer; recitation, "That Hired Girl", Phyllis Rowland; Hawaiian instrumental; piano solo, Helen Latimer; vocal solo, Mrs. Jim Young; address, Rev. E. W. Young.

L. A. President Daughter T. H. G. Denne

Mrs. C. Russell Widdified of Galt, recently elected president of the Ontario Liberal Women's Association, is a daughter of T. H. G. Denne of this city. Political affiliations are often dissolved by marriage. Mrs. Widdifield was brought up in a Conservative household, and her husband was an active Liberal even during the years of his residence here. Later he became a Liberal candidate at Galt, and evidently his wife decided to fall in with his political views, and since that conversion she has won her way up to the top of the Liberal Women's Association in this province.

Shower for Hastings Bride-Elect

Among entertainments given in honor of Miss Mary Jones, Hastings, June bride-elect, was a miscellaneous shower given at the home of Mrs. M. A. O'Shea, when Audrey and Maureen O'Shea presented the gifts to Miss Jones in a decorated wagon. Three tables of bridge were played, and the prize was won by Miss Rita Deacon.

Thursday evening, Mrs. T. A. Walsh entertained at her home, when a number of friends gathered and presented a beautiful solid walnut coffee table to Miss Jones. Mrs. J. J. Perrault made the presentation. Progressive euchre and other games was then played and the euchre prize was won by Miss Mary Shaughnessy. A dainty lunch was served.

A number of Miss Dorothy Rowland's pupils in Hawaiian guitar have assited in the program at several social gatherings recently.

These include: A birthday party of the W.A. at St. John's church, Emily, where Miss Muriel Fellow and Miss Toots Dobson gave guitar selections; Miss Dobson and Miss Rhea Wilson played at Lakevale Presbyterian church, Fowler's Corners, and the Misses Jean and Elva Gray, Marion Edmison, Toots Dobson, Muriel Pellow, Allan Boate and John Edmison entertained at the garden tea which was held by Lily Lake Sunday School at the home of Mrs. Gordon Hancock.

Bride-Elect Is Entertained at Shower

A cup and saucer shower was given in honor of Marjorie Powell, 465 McDonnel street, a bride-elect of this month, on Wednesday, June 15, by her sister, Mrs. Walter Hanes, who was hostess at her home in Toronto.

The living room was decorated with pink and white peonies, and pink and white streamers reached from the chandelier in the centre of the room to a decorated chair in front of the fireplace, where the bride-elect opened her lovely gifts.

Hynes—West

A quiet wedding was solemnized at George Street Parsonage Thursday evening, when Marion Isabel, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred West, Hyde Park, Ontario, became the bride of Melbourne Roy Hynes, son of Mrs. S. Giffbrd, Marmora. Rev. M. C. Parr officiated.

We Noticed

. . . That someone at a tea yesterday looked casually chic in a two-piece linen suit with lacy blouse and smart felt hat of orchid. Her shoes and gloves were of white.

❖ ❖ ❖

. . . In a shop window . . . a lovely frock of rayon crepe, its gored skirt flaring from swank contrasting sash, richly fringed . . . its luscious color combination maize with luggage tan.

❖ ❖ ❖

. . . That black cotton jersey is smart material for a blouse to wear under a suit of any color—particularly mustard, dusty pink or blue.

Tennis Frock and Play Suit

Taking a brief moment off from play, is Barbara McClees displaying a new tennis frock, of celanese rayon weave. The material has an unusual surface interest. The top section of the suit is close-fitting, with contrast banding around the armholes and down the sides. The shorts are pleated. This tennis frock may also be used as a playsuit. The ornament near Miss McClees' left shoulder is a sombrero hat brooch in transparent red catalin. Linens and cottons are used for many of the new playsuits. This is also true of the summer dresses for warm weather wear, which use spun rayon, linen and many cottons, with cotton lace also a marked favorite.

W.M.S. Observes Baby Band Day

Baby Band Day was fully celebrated on Tuesday afternoon by St. James' Auxiliary of the W. M. S., when a large deputation of mothers and babies were in attendance. The president was in the chair and conducted a brief business session before turning the meeting over to the Baby Band leaders, Mrs. A. Davis and Mrs. G. Pearson and their committee, Mesdames Sloane and Morrison.

A sing-song of children's hymns opened the service and the Scripture, "The Rise of Moses in Egypt," was told in story form by Mrs. E. Baldry, while Mrs. Rose led in prayer.

Department reports were given by Mrs. Beavis on Temperance; Mrs. Rose on Christian Stewardship, and Mrs. Cripps on Supply Work.

Rev. F. W. Craik, the pastor of the church, told a charming story to the children with unselfishness and kindness to others as its moral.

Very pleasing readings were contributed by Mrs. George H. Rowe, and Mary Morrison, with vocal solos by Mrs. Arnold and Marion Butcher. A solo with guitar accompaniment, was given by little Shirley Garner.

The program concluded with the children's hymn, "Jesus Loves Me."

Mrs. H. F. Doig's sympathetic accompaniments during the afternoon added much to the success of the meeting.

Tiny tables were set for the children, who enjoyed the treat as only children can, while their mothers and the ladies of the Auxiliary enjoyed a social hour before ending the happy annual affair.

Piano Pupils Are Heard In Recital

Another delightfully varied program of piano music was given in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, by the pupils of Mrs. Greenslade, ranging in age from 8 to 16 years.

The lovely summer flowers decorating the room were a fitting background for the young artists, who brought to their piano numbers a spirit and energy, a true timing and a brilliant knowledge of their work which was astounding, and which reflected great credit on their teacher, through whose painstaking efforts their talents had been carefully cultivated.

An assisting artist, Mrs. Ruby Cutmore, the possessor of a rich, soprano voice, sang "Little Damoselle "Kerry Dance" "A May Morning" and "Twickenham Ferry."

During the evening little Ruth Callander presented her teacher, Mrs. Greenslade, with a beautiful bouquet on behalf of the pupils, and a lovely bouquet to the assisting artist, Mrs. Ruby Cutmore.

The program was as follows: Piano duet, "The Little Patriot" (Krogmann), Robert Cutmore and Alan Paterson; solos, "Buttercup" (Graham), Ralph Dallin; "Daisy" (Graham), Robert Groombridge; "Azelia Waltz" (Englemann), Isabel Bettes; "Wallflower" (Graham), Norman Dallin; "Dans Le Pre" (Service), Ruth Callandar; duett, "The Merry Bobolink" (Krogmann), R. Cutmore and A. Paterson; vocal solo, "Little Damoselle" (Novello) and "Kerry Dance" (Nolloy), by Mrs. Ruby Cutmore.

"White Rose" (Graham), Norman Dallin; "Minuet in G" (Beethoven), Muriel Earle; "The Conquerors" (Lund) Robert Cutmore; "Romanza" (Kummel), Ruth Callandar; "Evening in the Village," Alan Patterson; "Marionettes" (Rhodes), Muriel Earle; "Message of Love" (Kokler), Craig Eason.

"A May Morning" (Denza) and "Twickenham Ferry" (Marzials), vocal solos by Mrs. Ruby Cutmore; piano duett, "Qui Vive" (Ganz), Lenore Skitch and Helen Miller; "On the Meadow" (Lichner), by Donald Eason; "La Copuette" (Bohm) and "Simple Avue" (Thome), Helen Miller; Leybach's "Fifth Nocturne," Billy Hall; "Rustle of Spring" (Sinding) and "A' Toi" (Ringuette), Lenore Skitch, followed by the National Anthem, closed the program.

Taylor–Colmer

Trinity United church was the scene of a lovely wedding today, Saturday, when Ruby Mabel Colmer, daughter of Mrs. Richard Colmer, 497 Bolivar street, and the late Mr. Colmer, became the bride of George Raymond Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. J. Taylor, Keene, Rev. G. S. Easton officiating.

The wedding music was played by Miss Mabel Clarry, and during the signing of the register Miss Viola Sexsmith sang "O Promise Me"

The bride, given in marriage by her eldest brother, Mr. Percy Colmer, of Toronto, was charming in a gown fashioned of white net with full double skirt and tight bodice, the V neckline trimmed with white flowers. She wore a frilled jacket, and her full length embroidered veil was shirred across the back, and fell gracefully from a coronet of orange blossoms. She wore white corded sandals, and carried a bridal bouquet of pale pink butterfly roses.

Miss Laura Taylor, Keene, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, and was becomingly gowned in pale pink chiffon made with a short, smocked jacket, a pink beaded brooch was worn at the neckline of her dress, and she wore pink slippers and gloves. Her large picture hat was trimmed with flowers and stiffened net, and she carried a bouquet of briarcliff roses.

Mr. Rollie Colmer, brother of the bride, was best man, and the ushers were Lawrence McBain and Burton McFadden, Peterborough.

After the ceremony a reception was held at Walkerfield House, where the bride's mother, wearing navy sheer with beaded yoke and corsage of pink and mauve sweet peas, and the groom's mother, gowned in flowered sheer and corsage of sweet peas, received the guests.

The couple left on a motor trip to the Kawartha Lakes, the bride travelling in a crepe dress of summer blue with white taffeta jacket, white picture hat and accessories. She carried a white beaded bag.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Taylor will live at 349 Reid street, Peterborough.

Hilda Hall Weds Robert B. Barnum

Pink and white peonies and bankings of ferns were used to adorn St. Paul's Presbyterian Church this (Saturday) afternoon, for the wedding of Hilda Kirkland Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. A. Hall, 437 Downie Street, to Robert Bayard Barnum, son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Barnum, Phelps, N.Y. The pastor, Dr. A. T. Barr, officiated.

Miss K. Warner of Cobourg presided at the organ during the ceremony and signing of the register.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was attended by her sister, Miss Marion Hall. Miss Barbara Hall, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

The bride wore a long white embossed organdie gown over taffeta, with form-fitting bodice, flaring skirt and bolero jacket. Her fingertip veil of bridal net was caught with a wreath of orange blossoms, and she wore white lace mittens and white satin slippers. The bridal bouquet was of roses and lily-of-the-valley.

The bridesmaid was gowned in pale pink lace with fitted bodice and full skirt. She wore a turban hat of braided pink tulle with tiny veil, pink mittens and pastel colored slippers, and carried a bouquet of Briarcliff roses and cornflowers.

Miss Barbara Hall, as flower girl, wore a floor-length frock of pale blue organdie, a Dolly Varden hat, and white slippers. She carried a nosegay of forget-me-nots and sweet peas.

Mr. Harold Wilson of Phelps, N.Y., was best man, and Mr. James Hall acted as usher.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. Hall, mother of the bride, received in a gown of black lace, with white jacket, and matching felt hat. Her corsage was of roses and sweet peas, and Mrs. Barnum, mother of the groom, received in blue sheer with white leghorn hat, and a corsage of Talisman roses and sweet peas.

On their return from a wedding trip through the New England States, the young couple will live at Clifton Springs, New York.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for New Pep and Energy

Nerves Were So Bad Could Not Stand The Children Playing

The happiness of every home depends largely on the health of the wife and mother. If she is nervous, peevish and irritable, worried by the cares of the household, and tormented by the pains and irregularities that accompany a run down system, there can be no happiness in the home for the husband and children.

Women who are weak and run down, nervous and irritable should take a course of Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills to help restore them to the blessing of good health.

Mrs. Thomas Kirk, Neston, Alta., writes:—"I was in such a weak, run down condition before I started using Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills I could not do my housework, and would be so nervous I could hardly stand the noise of the children at their play. Now, after taking three boxes of H. & N. Pills I feel like a different person.

I shall always tell anyone not feeling well to use your medicine."

IN MEMORIAM

LITTLE, Merton—In loving memory of a son and brother who passed away June 19, 1937.

Time speeds on, one year has passed
Since death its gloom, its shadow cast
Within our home, where all seemed bright,
And took from us a shining light.
We miss that light, and ever will,
His vacant place there is none can fill.
Down here we mourn, but not in vain,
For up in Heaven we will meet again.

Hitler Rebuilds Berlin For The Future

BERLIN, June 18 (A.P.) — Weeks of work by wrecking crews have cleared the way for Chancellor Hitler's ambitious program for the reconstruction of Berlin, which will cover at least 12 years.

Hitler has declared he is not building for this generation, but intends to make a magnificent capital for the greater Germany of centuries to come.

Authoritative estimates of the costs of the program already drafted set the 12-year total roughly at $3,600,000,000 marks ($1,440,000,000), but accurate figures are unobtainable, since not all the rebuilding is to be financed by the state or municipality. Many private enterprises will make their contributions.

The program was inaugurated on Tuesday when 16 building projects were started simultaneously in different parts of Berlin. Hitler himself laid the cornerstone of a building which is to be the headquarters for Nazi tourist enterprises.

One imposing new feature to be given Berlin is a Forum, an inspiration of Hitler's May visit of state to Rome, to be created in the centre of the famous Tiergarten.

Great "northern" and "southern" railway terminals will be erected, and the present Anhalter, Potsdamer, and other stations familiar to tourists will disappear.

Berlin's pride, the famous Gruenwald, once a royal forest extending from Berlin to Potsdam, will lose much of its untouched character. Its 11,500 acres are to be laid out as a cultivated park and playground for the population, with plenty of approaches from all sides which it now lacks.

OBITUARY

LOUIS HARDEN.
(Examiner Correspondence.)

CENTRETON, June 18. — The death occurred on Monday of Louis Harden of Haldimand Township, in his 78th year. The deceased had been in ill-health for some time, but his end was sudden, having suffered with a stroke. The greater part of Mr. Harden's life was spent in Eddystone, but he left a short time ago to live with his daughter, Mrs. Collins, Castleton, where he passed away. Mr. Harden had been married twice; his last wife predeceased him some years ago.

Left to mourn his loss are two daughters, both of his first union, Mrs. Collins, Castleton, and one in Toronto; and a stepdaughter, Mrs. A. Harden, Grafton, and one sister, Mrs. Herb. Stewart of Eddystone, and one brother, Charlie Harden, of Havelock; also several grandchildren and nieces and nephews.

The funeral service was held at Castleton United Church on Wednesday afternoon, Rev. M. L. Hinton officiating. The remains were interred in the family plot in Castleton Cemetery.

Captain Acquitted

GIBRALTAR, June 18. — (CP-Havas.—Captain Stanley Scott, of the freighter Stancroft, charged with gun-running into Spain, was acquitted to-day, the court finding no prima facie evidence against the British captain had been submitted.

Captain Scott was accused of contravening the "carriage of munitions to Spain Act" of 1936. Captain Herman Hinze, German former non-intervention observer, had testified he had seen shell cases in a broke crate aboard the ship.

The government-controlled Dgle coal company marketed more than half the coal sold in Latvia in the last 12 months.

Old Wild West Atmosphere Is Revived Near Chicago

When the imagination of Col. A. D. Young of Chicago becomes reality this summer, scenes such as the ABOVE, taken from a recent western movie, will be daily occurrences in the made-to-order "wild west" frontier town being built on the site of New Lebanon, Ill., 60 miles northwest of Chicago.

Loyalists Putting Up Stiffer Fight

HENDAYE, June 18 (AP) — Insurgent General Franco's drive down Spain's eastern coast against Valencia was slowed down today by stiffened government resistance south of the Mijares River.

Government advices said defence forces counter-attacked against the insurgents about 35 miles north of Valencia and recaptured the village of Villarreal south of the river after desperate hand-to-hand battles through its streets.

The government massed all available men and munitions in the sector to stem the insurgent tide and placed its armies under the unified command of Colonel Hipotilo Menendez.

The vast concentration, however, impaired the effectiveness of troops defending Cordoba province, in southern Spain.

Dispatches from the Penarroya sector said the insurgents' three-day drive was progressing steadily at the rate of five miles a day.

In the far north, the last of government's "lost" 43rd division escaped into France, leaving control of the border from the Bay of Biscay east to the little Republic of Andorra.

assets to the Crown was tossed out, too, Mr. Hepburn said.

Lyon-Hogg Tiff.

He had relied on reports of T. Stewart Lyon, who was replaced as Commission chairman last Nov. 1 by Dr. Hogg, to adjudge whether the Niagara supply of power was sufficient to meet the province's needs. "And now I find that he wouldn't accept any advice from Dr. Hogg, the then chief engineer," he went on.

Mr. Hepburn swung to the three-day speech of former Attorney-General Arthur W. Roebuck in the Legislature in 1935 when Mr. Roebuck, then a Hydro commissioner, voiced an opinion the Quebec contracts were "not legal and unenforceable."

"That put us in the position that we had to support the Attorney-General or demand his resignation," Mr. Hepburn said. "I'm not disagreeing with what he said. But the time was not opportune to say it."

The Premier said a statement published June 3 in the Toronto Globe and Mail by George McCullagh, president and publisher of the newspaper, was "absolutely right" in denying that McCullagh demanded Mr. Roebuck's dismissal June 3. Mr. Roebuck was "absolutely wrong" in making the statement before the committee that his stand on Hydro was responsible for the Premier's request for his resignation as Attorney-General in the spring of 1937.

The Atkinson Case.

Mr. Roebuck was asked to resign because of his difference of opinion with the government over the Committee for Industrial Organization, the Premier said.

With regard to the government's dealings in opposition to the C.I.O., Mr. Hepburn told of a "sharp" difference of opinion between himself and Joseph E. Atkinson, president of the Toronto Star.

"Mr. Atkinson said if I continued to disagree with him on the C.I.O. question he would persecute me, attack me and never let up till he drove me from public life." The publisher, said Mr. Hepburn, was "in a terrible state of mind."

(The Star yesterday carrried the following reference to Mr. Hepburn's statements before the committee: "Mr. Atkinson, who is in the north, was reached by telephone today and the Prime Minister's statements were repeated to him. He denied that he said anything that could be interpreted either to drive Mr. Hepburn out of public life or persecute him; and the course of the Star during the general election last October, and since, is a sufficient refutation of the Prime Minister's statements.")

STONEY CREEK, Ont., June 18 —(CP)—Bee-keepers here were predicting a record honey crop this year as a result of the unusually good crop of Alsike Clover. This year's crop of Alsike Clover is the best in almost a decade and bees are working overtime gathering nectar.

Eire Goes To Polls 3 Results Possible

DUBLIN, June 18 (CP) — Fire voters went to the polls to-day in a general election which could result in three ways:

1. Prime Minister De Valera receiving the clear parliamentary majority he desires.
2. Another stalemate in the Dail Eireann such as existed since the last election, July 1, 1937.
3. The fine Gael opposition may return to office from which Mr. De Valera's Fianna Fail party ousted it in 1932.

Paul Martin (Lib. Essex East) and Vincent Dupuis (Lib. Chambly-Rouville) were against passage of the bill although they endorsed its principle Mr. Martin said the rights of Labor could not be obtained by force and coercion. He did not believe the measure was constitutional.

Mr. Dupuis said Quebec had already dealt with the power to organize and though he did not express approval of that legislation he believed it unwise for the Dominion legislature to over-ride provincial autonomy.

Mr. Bennett said the measure was constitutional and that it was within the jurisdiction of the Dominion to make it a criminal offence to interfere with the exercise of a civil right.

Senate amendments to Commons bill amending the Farmers Creditors Arrangement Act, having the effect of terminating operations of the act in all provinces except Alberta and Saskatchewan by 1939, were rejected on motion of Finance Minister Dunning.

The amendments proposed by the Commons would leave it within the power of the Governor-in-Council to terminate the Act in any province at any time. The Senate would have it stipulated that no new proposals under the Act be received after 1938 from any provinces except Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Housing Bill Discussed.

Progress was made with Mr. Dunning's home building and low-rental housing measure although it brought considerable discussion. Part one of the Act extending the Dominion Housing Act, and part two providing loans for local housing authorities desiring to enter upon low-rental housing projects for the benefit of those unable to pay an "economic" rent, were dealt with.

Opposition Leader Bennett warned against that section of the bill empowering the government to pay lending institutions up to $20 and expenses for negotiating loans at points distant from their place of business.

That section was put in to offset the difficulty encountered under the existing Housing Act of negotiating loans in rural communities. Mr. Bennett said the provision of expenses as well as the lump sum bonds for each of such loans would open the way to great abuse. That phase of the administration would be closely watched, the Minister assured the House.

CENTRETON

Mr. and Mrs. Alden Coffey and Miss Francis Coffey spent Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Charles Nicholls, Castleton.

The district Sunday School convention was held at Centreton United Church on Wednesday afternoon and evening sessions were held. In the afternoon, Mrs. F. Birney gave the address of welcome. Centreton Sunday School had charge of the Devotional period. Mrs. Nill, Roseneath, sang a solo, and the round-table conference was taken by Rev. Mr. Beaton of Toronto. Supper was served in the Sunday School room.

In the evening the Devotional period was taken by Vernonville. Mr. Robinson sang a solo, "My Childhood Days." Three little girls acted and sang the chorus, "Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep."

Norwood Fair Dates Are Set

(Examiner Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, June 18.—A meeting of the directors of the East Peterborough Agricultural Society was held on June 13 with the president, W. Burgess, in the chair.

The matter of fair dates was taken up and due to the fact that dates selected at the May meeting conflicted with Millbrook Fair dates, it was moved by Messrs. Grover and Buck that the motion of May 10 be recinded and the date of the 1938 fair held in Norwood be set back to the usual date, that is on the second Tuesday and Wednesday of October, being the 11th and 12th.

Revision of Prize List

On account of there being no entries in Class 1 (Blood horses) it was ordered omitted on motion of Messrs. Would and McLaughlin. Classes 2 to 7 to remain the same. In classes 9 to 15 herd prizes were altered to $3 first, and $2 second, instead of one prize of $4. In classes 16 (Dairy Cattle) pure breds not eligible, was added to the heading.

A committee consisting of Ray Scott, G. A. Brethen and the secretary, was appointed to revise the poultry classes.

In class 29 (Dairy products) churning cream was added to the list with prizes on the same basis as butter and cheese.

On motion of Messrs Grover and Bailey, the following ladies were named as a committee to act in conjunction with the directors for the purpose of revising sections 37 to 42 (Ladies' work, etc.) Mrs. W. Bitten, Mrs. Wm. Becket and Mrs. Wm. Thompson.

Management committees were appointed for the different classes. The committee on proposed addition of garden plots reported some progress, but to date insufficient entries had been received. It was decided to leave this matter with the committee, they to have authority to secure a judge if, and when required, also to be allowed the sum of $15 to be used as prize money.

The following were appointed as a canvassing committee to solicit special prizes: Peterborough city, the president and Col. R. E. Birdsall; Norwood Village and Dummer township, the secretary; Havelock and district, W. J. Peoples and W. G. Barrie; Asphodel township, Col. R. E. Birdsall and S. Buck; County council, G. A. Brethen and Col. R. E. Birdsall; school sports, W. Burgess, G. A. Brethen and M. W. Bailey.

The matter of advance advertising was left in the hands of the secretary and M. W. Bailey.

Quebec Grabs Power Firms To Remedy Her Lag In Mining Production

Duplessis Says "Common Sense" Policy Will Benefit Consumers After Let Down On Contracts

MONTREAL, June 20 (CP).—Premier Duplessis announced at a press conference today Quebec's Union Nationale government had assumed control of Noranda Power Company, Limited and of certain stations of Gatineau Power and Price Brothers which were "not developed according to contract."

"I can say nothing in regard to details at the moment," he said, "but I am not making any misstatement when I say the necessary contracts will be signed and every aspect of the affair made known in the very near future."

The action—"another link in the government 'common sense' policy"—would result in "very great" benefit to Quebec consumers, the premier said, "and we are now occupied with the matter of deciding that classes of consumers will gain directly.

"Our move, when full details are made known, will evoke the praise of even our opponents. The question was a matter of the deepest interest to the entire province of Quebec but it required nor more than common sense for its solution.

A Happy Result.

"When we applied common sense we soon arrive at a very happy result."

The Premier said he conferred recently at Quebec with James Y. Murdoch, president of Noranda Power—subsidiary of Noranda Mines Limited—and plans now "are well under way" for construction of a dam in the Northern Quebec mining area.

"Ontario has a fine lead in the mining field," he said, "but Quebec lagged far behind while the old Taschereau (Liberal Premier L. A. Taschereau) regime slept. That state of affairs, however, is a thing of the past and this Government is seeing to it that mining in Quebec is given its proper encouragement.

"The new dam is one step in the right direction. It is not yet certain exactly where it will be built, but when it is built it will be capable of supplying the full power needs of mines in the area.

"There will be no overproduction nor unnecessary expense in its maintenance. The Government is determined to act only in the public interest and while adequate power is a necessity there will be no needless burden placed on the taxpayers.

No Unfairness or Injustice.

The Premier said there would be "no unfairness or injustice of any sort" in connection with the taking over of power interests.

"The Quebec Government is not a Communistic or dictatorial Government," he said. "Everyone will be given his just due and treated with unfailing justice. But the public interest must be protected, and that is just what we are doing."

Referring to reduction in power rates, Duplessis said there would be no "trickery."

"We are determined that the same quality and quantity will be supplied at a cheaper figure," he said.

"We also are making the power companies specify very clearly on their bonds that the signature of the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council is a legal formality only and that it does not in any way attach responsibility to the Government. If our predecessors in office had done this, things would be much better than they are.

Toronto Lawyer Heads Ontario Social Creditors

ST. THOMAS, Ont., June 20.—(CP)—The Social Credit Association of Ontario is now launched on a province-wide basis. Organization was completed at the first congress of the Association here on Saturday.

Major J. C. MacCorkindale, 45-year-old Toronto barrister, was elected president to succeed Lloyd Jaeger of Toronto who had held that office provisionally. He obtained 24 votes to 13 cast for Jaeger by the registered Ontario delegates. Also present at the Congress were representatives of the Quebec Association and a delegation from the United States.

The Ontario body, expresed support for the policies of Premier Aberhart of Alberta.

Representatives were named throughout the various districts and it was explained that the task ahead of Social Credit in Ontario is one of education, rather than immediate political action. Groups are being formed throughout the province to study principles.

Social Credit candidates for the Dominion or Provincial parliaments will be selected by delegate conventions, four delegates from each subdivision.

Saturday night John H. Blackmore, party leader in the House of Commons, gave a blackboard-illustrated talk on Social Credit theories. He maintained that only through application of these principles might Canada's economic ills be solved. These ills he listed as:

The great burden of public and private debt, lack of markets for vast amounts of goods and services, widespread unemployment and a great shortage of purchasing power.

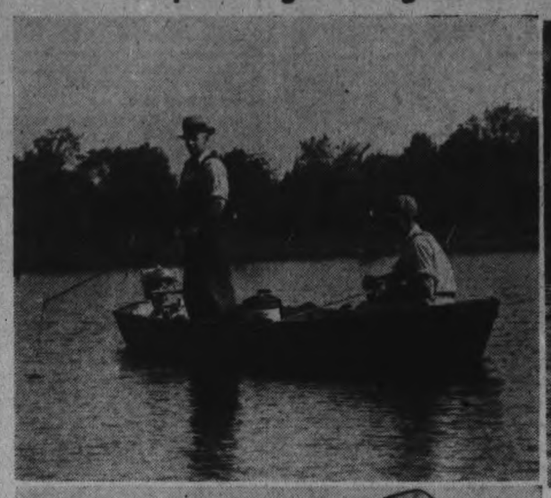
Miner Gets Caught Dies In Shaft

TIMMINS, Ont., June 20 (C.P.).—Jack Flinsky, 23-year-old experienced shaftsman and miner, was killed instantly when jammed between the timbers and the sinking bucket 20 feet above the 2,450-foot level at the Paymaster Mine last night shortly before 10 o'clock.

According to mine officials, Flinsky had started up on the sinking bucket to get some drill bits from the 1,200-foot level. On the ascent, Flinsky became caught in the timbers and was jammed.

R. Strachan, the hoist man, felt that something had happened and stopped the cage almost immediately. When workmen rushed to the scene, Flinsky was found mangled, half in and half out of the sinking bucket.

Hundreds Open Lunge Fishing Season O n Kawartha Lakes



The lunge fishing season opened with the first flush of dawn this morning and hundreds of eager fishermen were out in boats big and small all through the Kawartha Lakes. The pictures shown here were taken on Lake Katchewanooka, off Young's Point, where more than a score of sportsmen fished through a hot summer's day. At TOP LEFT is one party who had caught one fish at ten o'clock. The Examiner's Advertising Manager, T. L. Ashton, had better luck, bagged his limit in less than an hour. He is shown with his catch at BOTTOM LEFT while guide Clarence McIlmoyle is seen at TOP RIGHT hauling in one of the forbidden (until July) species, the small mouthed black bass. He threw it back in. The Examiner's photographer tried four casts, drew in fourteen weeds, went back to his camera. (Examiner Staff Photos.)

King Pays Honor To Rebel Grandfather

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 20—(CP)— Dedicated to men and women whose sacrifices helped build a nation, new monuments dot the Niagara Frontier where early in the 19th Century brave pioneers fought foreign invaders and laid a foundation for Canadian democracy.

Near cenotaphs honoring Sir Isaac Brock and Laura Secord—heroic figures of Canada's last combat with the United States—monuments were dedicated Saturday to William Lyon Mackenzie and other "pioneers of political freedom and a system of responsible government which became the cornerstone of the British Commonwealth of Nations."

It was an event of deep personal moment to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who opened to the public the home of his grandfather, William Lyon Mackenbie, and unveiled a memorial arch dedicated principally to those who rebelled with Mackenzie in 1837 against upper Canada's "family compact."

The Prime Minister called on his listeners to "remain steadfast to the homely virtues, for all we have today is the heritage of the past." In the memorial arch, he said, were recorded the deeds of humble men, the "unknown and unnumbered."

"Our generation regards the men of 1837 not as rebels but as martyrs for Canadian freedom," he declared. "Responsible government is the cornerstone of British institutions and we owe all we have to those men and women who fought for intellectual and political freedom."

Premier Voices Gratitude.

At Queenston Mackenzie began publication of the Colonial Advocate, in which he fought autocracy. On nearby Navy Island he proclaimed the short-lived republic of Canada.

First conceived as a memorial to the 28 men hanged for parts in the rebellion of 1837, the arch planned by Hon. T. B. McQuesten, chairman of the Niagara Parks Commission, was inscribed later "to honor the memory of the men and women in this land throughout their generations who braved the wilderness, maintained the settlements, performed the common task without praise or glory, and were the pioneers of political freedom and a system of responsible government which became the cornerstone of the British Commonwealth of Nations."

Mr. McQuesten, Senator A. G. Hardy of Brockville, Ont., and Senator Raoul Dandurand, Government leader in the upper house and descendant of rebel leaders, were other speakers.

Tennessee Hunter Kills Monster Bear In Alaska

Seattle, June 20 (AP).

The skin measures 18 inches between the ears, 11 feet 9 inches from one front paw to the other, and 10 feet 7 inches from nose to tail. In hunter's terminology, the skin "squared" 11 feet 2 inches, compared with the largest known one from an animal slain by Bruce Allen, Chicago, in 1934 which "squared" 11 feet 4 inches.

He killed it three weeks ago near Uganik Nay, Kodiak Island, and returned here yesterday.

Valera Within 4 Of Majority

DUBLIN, June 20 (C.P.). — Prime Minister Eamon de Valera's party late to-day was but one seat short of an absolute majority in the Dail Eireann.

As returns continued slowly from Friday's general election, the Government Party had 69 seats—the number it had in the old Parliament—and was expected to pick up at least half a dozen more before all the results are in.

William Cosgrave's Fine Gael (Opposition) Party had 39 seats, Independents seven, and Labor six. It was for a clear-cut majority that Mr. De Valera went to the country, after only a year had elapsed since the previous election, and apparently he has won it.

The standing:

	1938	1937
Fianne Fail	69	69
Fine Gael	39	48
Labor	6	13
Independents	7	8
To Come	17	—
Total	138	138

Many observers thought Mr. De Valera's party would win as many as eight of the remaining seats. All Cabinet members were re-elected.

Fear 40 Killed In Montana Train Wreck

MILES CITY, Mont., June 20 — (AP)—Estimates of the dead and missing in the worst United States railroad tragedy in years approximated 40 today as rescuers sought to remove additional bodies from the wreckage of the Milwaukee Railroad's crack "Olympian."

Seventeen bodies have been recovered. Railroad officials announced that a still-submerged tourist sleeper contained 17 bodies.

Survivors told of seeing as many as five or six bodies swept into the flood waters of Custer Creek, into which the train plunged yesterday.

A midnight "flash flood" had carried away the 180-foot trestle spanning Custer Creek 26 miles east of Miles City. Seven cars of the 12-car train followed the locomotive into 20 feet of rushing water.

Only a few minutes before a track walker had reported the creek almost dry.

Submerged Lights Show Bodies.

Witnesses said they could see the bodies of passengers still seated in the submerged sleeper, the forms made indistinct by the muddy water that filled the car. The sleeper's lights burned eerily through much of last night.

Of the 65 or more injured who were taken into Miles City in a hospital train yesterday, 30 remained in a hospital today, two of them critically injured.

At the hospital, and at the Miles City morgue where relatives came to claim their dead, stories of tragedy and of heroism were told by the survivors.

Ten-year-old Anne Ladas, whose mother was dead and whose father was missing, related how she tried desperately to keep her mother's head above water for several minutes.

Anne's brother, nine-year-old George, suffered a broken arm. Unable to comprehend the tragedy, he kept crying, "I want my mamma

Japs Extending War Zone

TOKYO June 20—(AP)—Japan today notified neutral powers that the China war zone probably would be considerably expanded and warned them to take precautionary measures in a vast area extending some 700 miles inland from China's coasts.

General Kazushige Ugaki, Foreign Minister, conveyed the warning in a circular statement to all Foreign Embassies and Legations in Tokyo which said:—

"Japan sincerely desires to avoid possible damage to the lives and property of foreign nationals and advises taking adequate measures along the following lines:—

"First, foreign nationals and foreign vessels should evacuate the area south of the Yellow River and east of a line linking Sian, Ichang, and Hengyang.

"Second, aerial and landmarks should be placed on foreign property in the aforesaid area and immediate information should be given the Japanese authorities concerning such property."

Indictments Name 18 On Spy Plot

NEW YORK, June 20—(AP)—Three indictments naming 18 persons were returned today by the federal grand jury which has been engaged in the United States government's first intensive espionage investigation since the Great War.

The indictments were based on four weeks of closed hearings, during which scores of men and women were questioned and several months of inquiry.

Two surprise witnesses—Johanna Hofmann, 26, red-haired hairdresser on the North German Lloyd liner Europa and Private Erich Glasser attached to the United States army air corps at Pitchelfield — were called before the grand jury shortly before the indictments were returned. Each is now held in $25,000 bail on complaints alleging espionage activities. Neither had previously appeared before the grand jury.

Not Out For President

NEW YORK, June 20 (AP)—Joseph P. Kennedy, United States ambassador to Great Britain today disclaimed any intention to seek the Democratic presidential nomination in 1940.

He made the remark in response to a question asked him as the Queen Mary, in which he was returning from Europe, came up the harbor.

Such an ambition for him, he said, would be a "breach of faith" with President Roosevelt.

The 1,500-year-old custom of Blessing the Growing Crops was observed this year in Langdon Hills and Canington, England.

5 Of Family Drown In Crash As Weekend Toll Across Canada Hits 20

Father Alone Escapes As Car Sinks In Ditch, Waters Claim 4 Other Lives Auto Smashes Add 7, Lightning One

CHATHAM, Ont., June 20 (CP).—Sole survivor of an accident that claimed five lives is Desirie Charron of nearby Dover township, when the car in which he was riding plunged into a dredge cut early yesterday. Five members of Charron's family, trapped in the vehicle were drowned.

The family party—Charron his wife, daughter and son-in-law and their two children—were returning from a holiday visit with relatives in Raleigh township. They were half a mile from home when the tragedy occurred.

Charron, shaken and nervous after the crash, could not explain how it happened. His wife was driving, he said, and the others, Mr. and Mrs. Clement Martin and their children, Victor, 5, and Helen, two were in the back seat.

"Suddenly the car appeared to go out of control, although we were driving at a moderate rate of speed," he said. "We slid down an embankment, the front of the car buried itself in the mud and it turned over."

Squeezes Out Window

Charron said he broke the glass of the left front door and managed to squeeze through the small opening. His coat was torn from the splintered glass.

Charron found efforts to rescue others in the submerged car were futile. He ran down the road and met Clement St. Pierre whom he sent for help.

Provincial Constable Shelf and garagemen worked an hour before they could bring the car to the surface. The bodies were removed to undertaking parlors here.

No decision concerning an inquest has yet been made.

Toll Reach 20

Twenty persons met accidental deaths, five when an automobile plunged into a water-filled ditch, as the week-end brought Canada's longest list of motor and drowning mishaps of the year.

Nine persons drowned, seven persons were killed in motor crashes and four others died violently. The toll threatened to mount as others lay maimed in hospitals.

Storms which swept over Northern Ontario Saturday night took the life of Alex Mageau, killed by lightning as he walked across a boom log in the Mattagami River, six miles north of Timmins. Many thousands of dollars' damage was done in the district.

Drownings were reported from widely separated Quebec centres. Twelve-year - old Louis Savard drowned while fishing in Riviere Aux Sables and Jean Paquette, 15, of Montreal, while bathing near Ste. Timothee in the eastern townships. Although the body of Laurent Lacaille, 22, was recovered 20 minutes after he disappeared while swimming in the Desert river, 15 miles north of Maniwaki, artificial respiration methods failed to save him.

Ninth drowning victim was Joe Bretsch, 30-year-old farmer who was bathing in a pond near a dam at Wilkie, Sask.

Samuel Mayer of Detroit died in an ambulance near London, Ont., just after the car in which he was riding skidded and turned over when

B.C. Sitdowners Are Ousted After Battle

VANCOUVER, June 20 (CP).—A stone-throwing crowd early today smashed six windows in the Federal Building, where yesterday several hundred unemployed jobless were evicted by police using tear gas and riot sticks.

The stone-throwers were among an estimated 10,000 persons at the Canadian Pacific Steamships dock in a sympathetic demonstration for 100 jobless, who left for Victoria at midnight. The delegation will meet Labor Minister George Pearson in Victoria to seek a works program.

The crowd gradually broke up after Harold Winch, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation member of the Legislature for Vancouver East, and H. W. Campbell, publicity head for the Relief Project Workers' Union, pleaded for orderly conduct.

The windows broken were in the recent addition to the building and in the rear of the Post Office lobby, where windows and glass wickets were shattered by the sitdowners before they were ejected by police yesterday.

Later the crowd marched down Hastings Street, shouting, "Hold the Fort," and other songs popular with the sitdowners in the Post Office and Civic Art Gallery as a climax to the demonstration.

35 Hurt, 23 Jailed.

Thirty-five persons were injured and 23 arrested in downtown rioting yesterday.

The jobless had occupied the Post Office and Civic Art Gallery since May 20 in an effort to bring before government authorities their demands for a relief works program. The Art Gallery group of 200 dispersed quietly after tear gas was used.

Orders to evict the unemployed came suddenly after a month of quiet. Premier Pattullo said in Victoria he had told Dominion and Vancouver City officials Saturday the situation in Vancouver could "not be tolerated any longer."

The Post office group, most of them members of the relief project Worker's Union, were driven from that building by Royal Canadian Mounted Police and City Police after they had refused to leave voluntarily.

The Fight Begins.

As they streamed from the building, City Police outside tried to arrest men they believed responsible

Cleveland Broke, Watches Ousted Camp In Park

CLEVELAND, June 20—(AP)—As Cleveland ran out of emergency Relief Funds again to-day, two women and their four children moved into a public park pavilion near the Lake Erie shore.

Meagre belongings were piled on picnic tables as the evicted families set up the lightest of light housekeeping before public gaze.

They had only bread and jam. They wondered whether to sleep on the tables or on the sandy beach.

The City Relief Fund had no more money to pay rent for Mrs. Emma Kruis, whose husband left her penniless with two small boys, or Mrs. Jessie Ferguson, who was divorced a year ago and left with two young sons. Their plight threw them together with only some clothing and small household necessities.

"We didn't know any place else we could go except to jail," said Mrs. Kruis. "It's wonderful for the children anyway—we never could get to the beach before. Something wil lturn up."

Mayor Harold H. Burton called his council into sesison today to see what could be done about the recurring relief crises.

"It will not be our policy to close the Relief Stations and leave people to starve," Mayor Burton said. "What will be done I do not know. There are people without food and we must do all in our power to see that they have it."

Emergency funds have been caring for only desperate situations among the 66,000 persons on direct relief here.

Police Spoil Picnic By Sudden Raid Seizing All Beer

London, Ont., June 20.—

JUST AS THEIR guest speaker was warming up to his speech, Provincial Police rushed the picnic of the Russian-Ukrainian Club at Meadow Lily Farm, three miles from London, Sunday and seized a quantity of beer. The Russian-Ukrainian Club is a political club, it is learned. Mike Timback and George Ogrrodnick both of London, were taken into custody, charged with illegal possession. The raid was carried out by Provincial Constables George Clubbe and Jack Fulton, who stated Timback and Ogrrodnick were presiding over a table of beer behind the speakers' rostrum at the time of the raid.

4,595 Civilians Slain

CANTON, June 20 (AP)—Chinese officials declared today 4,595 civilians were killed by Japanese air attacks in Kwangtung province, South China, during the nine months from August 31, 1937, to June 7. They said "upwards" of 1,500 were killed in Canton alone during the 11 days from May 28 to June 7.

Nazis Begin Drive In Berlin To Cut Off Jews' Food

BERLIN, June 20.—(AP)—For Jews of Berlin another day of persecution today extended what probably is the greatest wave of anti-semitism since the Nazis came to power five years ago.

Now, after three weeks of raids and defacement of Jewish-owned stores, they found that, at least in the borough of Weissensee, they were forbidden to buy in Aryan food shops.

Placard-pasting crews appeared in that northern suburb, but instead of Jewish stores that were the objectives of red paint crews Aryan stores were the goal this time. Ayran grocers and butchers were surprised to find large red posters stuck on their windows reading: "We don't sell to Jews."

Jews, arriving at their places of business, found that Sunday night paint squads had invaded the downtown district and had left no Jewish shop or nameplate untouched by red paint. Most of the night's raids, after a comparative Sunday lull, were in downtown Berlin along Leitzfiger and Friedrith street, two main shopping thoroughfares.

There are several thousand Jewish-owned business places in Berlin, in the downtown section, in the fashionable west end and in the poorer northern and eastern boroughs.

Intimidated and terrified by the unceasing campaign against them, many Jewish shops remained closed this morning.

Girls Easier Taught

JAMESTOWN, N.Y., June 20 — (AP).—Girls are easier to teach automobile driving than boys, Edwin F. Cudlipp, Jr., high school safe driving teacher, said to-day.

"Girls make better drivers than boys because they are willing to be told and realize their responsibilities when driving," he declared. "Boys resent being told of their unsafe driving practices."

Dunning Budget Seen Example For Washington

NEW YORK, June 20. (CP).—"Canada seems to be getting along a lot better than the United States, economically, despite the adherence to what used to be considered financial sanity," the New York Herald Tribune, Republican, said in its Wall Street comment column Saturday, in discussing the Canadian Budget.

"Wall Street observers hoped that Washington would take a good look at the Canadian budgetary procedure." The newspapers continued. "Finance Minister Charles Dunning reported a deficit of $13,000,000 for the last Canadian fiscal year, which simply does not count as a deficit in a country used to $3,000,000,000 and $4,000,000,000 annual deficiencies.

"The trade of our Northern neighbor was hit by the collapse here, but it seems that the business index now is advancing, while foreign trade is doing very well.

"Pump-priming expenditures will be avoided by Canada, Mr. Dunning said, because they 'dry up the springs of private initiative.' The suggestion was made in the financial district that some of our Washington administrators might well go to school in Ottawa for a while."

Toronto Angler Dies Suddenly

Death intervened in the plans of Henry McFarlane of Toronto for the opening of the maskinonge fishing season at Rice Lake.

Shortly after his arrival at Bewdley on Sunday afternoon, he was stricken with a heart attack and died in St. Joseph's Hospital at 8 o'clock on Sunday evening. Authorities are investigating the cause of his death.

Mr. McFarlane was 42 years old, and was employed as a metal buffer in a Toronto motor plant. His wife is at present in Scotland and has been notified by cable of her husband's death. The body will probably be placed in the chapel at the Little Lake Cemetery or may rest at Belleghem's Funeral Home pending instructions for burial, according to Mrs. Agnes Dempsey, 23 Grove Avenue, Toronto, sister of Mrs. McFarlane.

Havelock Lodge Enjoys Play

HAVELOCK, June 20.—The Dorcas Rebekah Lodge of Havelock entertained Friday afternoon in their lodge rooms, when cards were played and a social time spent. There were six tables of bridge and seven tables of euchre.

Following the cards an interesting short play, entitled "Two Tables of Bridge," was presented by several members of the lodge.

During the afternoon two tickets were drawn, one for the lucky number ticket and the other for the lucky name. The former was won by Mrs. R. McLaren, of Trent River, and the latter by Mrs. R. Campney of town.

A dainty lunch was served at the conclusion of the afternoon.

The lodge hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion with cut flowers of all descriptions.

Stonehouse Garage Again Victimized

MARKHAM, Ont., June 20 (CP).—Often the objective of hold-up men, the Stonehouse garage here was again victimized Saturday night—this time by a motorist who took eight gallons of gasoline, then drove off without paying.

Jim Stonehouse, 25-year-old operator of the garage since his father was slain by robbers two years ago, did not chase the motorist at once, but locked up and took his girl home. However, coming back that way in an hour, he saw the same car at his garage again and gave chase. His own truck went as high as 70 miles an hour, but he only lost ground, Stonehouse said. He lost track of the sedan at Lansing.

Early in 1936 Edwin Stonehouse was murdered by hold-up men, and young Stonehouse himself was twice shot in the stomach. After the death of Norman (Red) Ryan in a gun-fight with police at Sarnia in May, 1936, police linked his Jekyll-and-Hyde gang activities to the Stonehouse killing.

Some time during Saturday night thieves broke the lock on Dan Parrott's gas pump at Ashburn, some 18 miles further east, and stole about 24 gallons of gasoline.

Japs Threaten To Grab South China Island

TOKYO, June 20 (CP-Havas).—Threats to seize the south China island of Hainan, a few miles off the French Indo-China coast, were reiterated by the Japanese foreign office today. They were coupled with renewed charges of French military aid to China.

Quoting "reliable sources," newspapers charged that together with 60 Soviet planes 30 French planes, mostly high speed bombers, had arrived at Hankow early in June. It also was asserted that a number of French pilots who had served with the republication forces in Spain have arrived at Yunnan-Fu, near the Indo-China border and were standing by for action there.

Not So Funny

NIBLEY, Utah, June 20—(AP).—Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Ames were buggy-riding when some young men tossed a firecracked beneath their horse. The 'cracker exploded, the horse ran away and the buggy overturned. Mrs. Ames received two broken ribs.

Lawson To Lead Budget Attack Today

OTTAWA, June 20—(CP)—Length of a budget debate that will start in the House of Commons today may decide whether parliamentarians will succeed in getting through their work before the unofficial deadline for prorogation—July 2.

There is still much work to be done but if the budget debate is short, as it is expected to be, Commons members may finish their task in time to return to their homes early in July. Heat often discourages protracted debate and it was 74 in the shade here yesterday.

The first speaker today will be Hon. J. Earl Lawson (Con. York South) one of the contenders for the Conservative leadership, who is making his debut as Conservative financial critic, a task Opposition Leader Bennett has done himself for years.

Supporters of Mr. Lawson will watch his performance closely in the belief his speech may affect his chances of being chosen leader at the Conservative convention being held here July 5-6-7. Observers will also be on the lookout for an indication of changes in Conservative policy on monetary and trade questions.

No Reductions

The budget is more likely to be attacked for what it does not contain rather than for what it does. Mr. Dunning imposed no new taxes and reduced none, except to widen the exemption to the sales tax on building products in order to stimulate construction.

If the debate is cleaned up in a few days the House likely will go on to consideration of the estimates still remaining to be passed.

The government also is expected to bring in a measure implementing part at least the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Penitentiaries whose report was tabled last week.

The Senate order paper is almost clear and the Upper House's railway committee is expected to conclude its hearings Tuesday when Sir Edward Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway will appear. The committee, which has studied unification plans for weeks will report to the Senate but no legislation to carry out its recommendations is expected this season.

and daddy."

"But you haven't any mamma and daddy any more," the boy's sister tried to explain.

One of the cars teetered on the creek bank several minutes before it slid into the water with the others.

Seven Milwaukee railroad employees, who knew Custer Creek as a ravine that usually carried no more than "a bucket of water," were riding the Olympian as passengers. They joined regular trainmen in helping out the survivors, and two of them telephoned first news of the tragedy to Miles City.

Mike Cain and Ed Hamm, brakeman, crawled over the twisted pile of steel cars, made their way to Saugus, a small station, and telephoned for help.

William Shearer, veteran Milwaukee engineer, said the railroad men were "chewing the fat" in the first day coach when the crash occurred.

"I thought we were just on the ground at first," Shearer said. "Then I realized we were in water and I said, 'Boys, we're in the old Yellowstone.'

"It was a few minutes before I found it was Custer Creek. Why, I've put a train over these tracks thousands of times, and I never saw more than a bucket of water in that creek at once," Shearer said.

"Well, we all crawled out of our coach. It was hard to see much. The mail, express, and baggage cars, which were between us and the locomotive, were piled up every way.

"We saw a woman jump out of a window she smashed. She floated down against the pile of wreckage, and I think she must have drowned.

"Her husband yelled for us to help her, but it was no use."

The locomotive leaped the bridge gap with such speed that it landed on the west bank of the creek, carrying Engineer Merrifield and Fireman H. E. McCoy with it.

The wreck was the first on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul lines in 20 years that cost a passenger's death.

Roosevelts Hide Out On Campabello

WELCHPOOL, N.B., June 20 (CP).—John Aspinwall Roosevelt, youngest son of President Roosevelt, and his bride, the former Anne Lindsay Clark, were honeymooning today at the President's secluded summer home on Campobello Island, in New Brunswick.

They arrived here last night after being married Saturday at Mahant, Mass., in a ceremony that attracted thousands to the town.

It was the second time in a year that the Roosevelt Canadian home had sheltered a newly-wed couple. John's brother, Franklin D., Jr., and his bride, formerly Ethel Dupont, also spent their honeymoon there, later motoring to Quebec and boarding a ship there.

Smouldering Ruins Left In Wake Of Jap Bombers

Busy Saw Mill In Chandos Prey To Flames

The saw mill of the Purdy Lumber Company, Limited, in Chandos township was completely destroyed by fire of undetermined origin during Saturday night.

The loss will be heavy as the mill contained a quantity of valuable machinery including a Diesel engine valued at $3300, circular saws and other expensive equipment.

There were no signs of fire at 1 o'clock Sunday morning, a passerby has reported but at 6 o'clock Elmer Aldridge, foreman of the mill found nothing but a pile of ashes left of what had been a busy plant.

The mill has been in active operation and its destruction will throw a number of men out of work.

Violin Nudist Anxious For Debut, At 6

CHICAGO, June 20 (AP).—A six-year-old nudist is growing impatient to make his public debut as a violin player.

He is David Davis, son of Attorney and Mrs. Maurice Davis, who demonstrated his musical ability to a newspaper reporter at his home Saturday by playing at sight a movement from Handel's Sonata and an unfamiliar etude from Kruetzer.

"What are we waiting for?" David asked in commenting on a public appearance, which his instructor, Maurice Gomberg, professor of music at De Paul University, is hesitant to permit because he feels it may be premature.

David, who began fiddling before he was three years old, drinks milk and eats nothing but raw vegetables and fruits and uncooked eggs. Both he and his brother, Shelley, three, wear short sun suits or loin cloths when they play in a nearby park. Shelley has taken over David's first violin and also shows promise of sharing his brother's talent.

He Couldn't Escape

BROOKLYN, N.Y., June 20 (CP)—A man who gave his name as Anthony Drozdowski stole $60 and a pair of sport shoes from a store Saturday night and ran—smack dab into not one policeman but 800 of them marching in the Bay Ridge second annual Americanism parade. He was marched off to the station house where store employees identified him as the holdup man.

Childbirth Painless Through Hypnotism

LOS ANGELES, June 20 (AP).—Painless childbirth, under her husband's hypnotic spell, was reported today by Mrs. Ethel Pardie Gaynor, 45, wife of a doctor and mother of six children.

Mrs. Gaynor said "it seemed as if I dozed off for a moment" while her latest, an eight-pound daughter, was born yesterday.

Two attending physicians certified she apparently suffered no pain although no anaesthetic was used.

Dr. Leo Gaynor, psycho-therapist, explained he started three weeks ago suggesting to his wife's conscious mind that birth would be painless.

Mrs. Gaynor said she suffered pain during the birth of five children by a former marriage.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, June 20 — (CP). — Short-covering, induced by crop damage reports from Northern Saskatchewan, higher stocks and Chicago wheat prices, rallied Winnipeg wheat futures from their low points more than a cent down. Final quotations were 2⅜ to 2¼ cents higher, July $1.08¾, October 87a, November 86¼b, and December 84⅜a.

Inflationary gossip was a main factor in the upward movement of both stocks and wheat. Other bullish influences at Winnipeg were unfavorable reports on moisture conditions in Northern Saskatchewan, particularly the Prince Albert area.

Wheat dealings, however, were thin. After prices opened slightly higher, minor Southern selling and hedging pressure at Chicago accounted for temporary setbacks.

Phillipine Volcano Goes On Rampage For Eight Days

For the first time in ten years, Mount Mayon, active volcano on the island of Luzon, in the Philippines, went into violent action, with the results depicted ABOVE in pictures taken by fliers of the U.S. army air Corps. For eight days the mountain rumbled and groaned as dense smoke, steam, flames and ashes were spewed from "the most perfect cone in the world." Thousands of inhabitants of nearby villages and towns fled, fearing a duplication of the catastrophe of 1814, when an eruption brought death to 1,200. Little material damage was done by the latest eruption. One man died of fright while another went insane.

St. John's Cubs Take Honors Scout Jamboree

The first Cub jamboree in the history of scouting in this district was held at Exhibition Park on Saturday afternoon. Ten Peterborough packs, a total of 160 cubs and 20 leaders, participated in the affair.

So highly successful was the jamboree that Scout officials plan to hold it again next year, enlarged to include Cubs from packs beyond the city.

St. John's Pack won an easy first in the sports events, leading St. George's pack, who placed second, and All Saints and Immaculate Conception packs, who tied for third. St. Luke's pack placed fourth, and St. Paul's and St. James' packs were tied for fifth.

Keen competition featured each of the events, which ranged from a 100-yard dash to "skinning the snake." Highlight of the races was a wheel-barrow race that revealed one boy a true Scout under severe strain. Jack Brown collapsed during the race, overcome by the heat, rose unsteadily to his feet and continued to the end. He won the race, dropped unconscious to the ground at its finish.

The jamboree commenced with a march past the grandstand, where the cubs, their colors flying, were reviewed by Commissioner John T. Hornsby. All packs formed a circle and gave their "grand howl"—the salute of the cub packs.

Another highlight of the meeting was the Red Flower, a form of camp fire without the fire, under direction of Akela Frank Pamment. Community singing was interspersed with acrobatic stunts, best of which was a demonstration of pyramiding by Sacred Heart Pack. St. Andrew's pack performed The Dance of Raa, and the Sacred Heart pack the Dance of Bagheera," symbolic jungle dances. St. John's repeated the Cub Promise as a part of the program.

The entire meet went off in record fashion. Under the capable guidance of Akela Bob Baldwin the sports were run off in fast time with no delays. A refreshment booth was under supervision of Akela Pete Dominic, and ladies of the combined Mothers' Auxiliaries operated the ice cream booths. The St. John Ambulance Brigade was on hand to look after injuries. Officials at the sports were Assistant Commissioner E. Wolfe, official starter; A. Hope, W. Lyburn, judges.

Results were as follows:

50-yards flat, 8 to 9 years.—1, Murray Patterson, 1st St. John's; 2, Jack Berwick, 10th St. James'; 3, Norman Harris, 5th All Saints'. Age 10 and 11.—1, Frank Blackburn, 1st St. John's; 2, Grant Howard, 1st St. John's; 3, Bill Sullivan; 9th Immaculate Conception.

Scarlet Tanager Seen At Marmora

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, June 20.—Three local members of the scholastic profession, Messrs. E. I. Gale and W. W. Fraser of the High School staff and G. McElwain, teacher at Glen Miller trolling along the Crowe Lake road on Saturday in quest of orchids were granted a view of a bird rare to these parts, the scarlet tanager.

Attracted by the notes of the bird, they noticed it hovering over a thicket. Searching for its nest, they were unsuccessful but came across a black billed cuckoo nesting there. The latter bird was still undisturbed on Sunday as Mr. Gale in company of E. C. Prentice, principal of Marmora School, revisited the spot.

Mourning doves have been seen in the district more frequently this year than for some years past, their chief haunt being the swamp south of the village.

Who Sends Them To Prison?

A reader of the Examiner writes to say she had expected a more worthy reception on the part of this paper for the report of the commission which has been inspecting and making recommendations regarding the conduct of our prisons. In part the letter says:

"I am ready to agree that you stated the case correctly in referring to the problem of the person who comes out of prison branded as an ex-convict, with small chance of finding employment, but I believe what we do to the men while in prison must have a good deal to do with what they do when they come out. If we have been doing is sending them off to prison thinking we have thus done our full duty."

That last sentence contains an idea which seems to be open to question in this way: Do we actually send people to prison, or do they send themselves there?

At first glance that question may seem strange, but it is worth analyzing. The individual who goes about his method of living so he is seeking no violence, who is minding his own affairs, who is observing in common with others the laws of the country—such a person is in no danger whatever of being arrested. He has the full force and authority of the law and all its officers on his side and if needed for his protection. The great majority of our citizens go on that way for the full length of their days.

When a person steps out of that class and begins breaking the law then it is that individual himself who has touched into action the force of the law which is directed against him. He has done that as definitely as one turns a tap and causes the water to run from it. When he is arrested and tried—and he is certain of a fair trial in this country—and finally sentenced to prison or reformatory or jail he is experiencing the results of something which he himself has done. For that reason this paper is inclined to doubt the full truth of the statement in our correspondent's letter which says "All we have been doing is sending them off to prison." We have a feeling that an individual actually sends himself to prison.

The Law Is More Severe

The Examiner finds no special delight in referring to the matter of driving cars while drunk, but within recent weeks we have been running up a score which is bad, so bad that much needs to be said.

There can be only one outcome and that is that the drunk driver will have to quit his nonsense. The court is not going to back up and be lenient; the issue is being forced and the drivers themselves are forcing it.

It would be well to state something which may not be as widely known as it should be, and that is about the changed laws which came into effect on the seventh of June. That new laws says the car of the drunk driver shall be impounded for a period of three months. That is in addition to the driver being placed in jail. The impounding is mandatory. That is, it is something which has to be done.

There was a report from Toronto a few days ago which told of the impounding of two cars for a three month period, and the storage charge on each car is $18 per month which the owners will have to settle when they apply for their cars.

One might readily admit that impounding a car for three months is a form of punishment which affects all members of the family, but against that is the plain fact that impounding would never have been resorted to if other measures had proved effective. That is the law in Ontario today. Drive while drunk; then go to jail and have your car taken from you and locked up for three months; and at the end of that period pay the storage charges on it to secure its release. If that treatment is stiff and stern then the drivers who drink can have the satisfaction of knowing they brought it on themselves.

Not Likely To Try

Bakers who have their places of business in the counties of Grey and Bruce held a meeting in Kincardine, and the reason for their coming together was that they found the sales pressure from big bakeries in outside cities too great. The outside bakers now have men calling on customers on the door-to-door basis.

The suggestion made at the Kincardine meeting was that the small bakers throughout Western Ontario should organize and seek a legislative amendment so that this competition will be either eliminated or put on a more equitable basis.

It is not difficult to believe that the small bakers feel the competition which they are facing, but they will have trouble enough seeking to correct the situation. The reason is that the bread is a product of the province. If the small bakeries decided to start and sell their product in the larger cities there would be nothing to prevent them doing so. There have been a number of attempts made before in several lines of business to curtail outside competition but none of them has been successful and we doubt very much if the provincial legislature would change the law. Once a government began to divide the country into trading areas and determine who could or could not trade in a given space then there would be so continuous a demand for such service from all kinds of business that the government would find itself lost and dizzy.

Another Old Home

According to the Bowmanville Statesman the furnishings from one of the fine old homes in that town were offered for sale by public auction. The place is described as "being the nearest thing to an old English manor house in this district." Twelve major rooms, most of them beautifully panelled, fire places in all of them and four bathrooms in the house. The man who owned it had been living there alone, and it was too great a place for him. Probably it was all right when he was in business there and when there were children in the family. But now they have gone elsewhere, and apart from fond memory and tradition there was no particular purpose in keeping this fine old place open any more.

The Bowmanville paper says it must have been a rather painful experience for the owner and former occupant of the place to see all the furishings go into other hands, and that is probably a correct enough statement. The value which the bidders at the sale would place upon the various articles would be upon a different basis to the estimate of the man who had owned it all and lived with it. Memory and associations of other years would not enter into the prices which the general public would offer. It would be always a clash between material appraisal of the person desiring to buy and the sentimental value associated with each item, and it is a fact that in such a conquest the dollars and cents of today have a way of becoming ultimately assertive.

We learn it is hoped to find a purchaser for the old home itself in the near future. That is at best a fond hope and one which we might wish would be realized, but against that is the known fact, born of experience in many places, that the great old home of other days finds few today with the financial ability or the desire to enter and take possession.

Why Try To Stop It?

The special House of Commons committee on Electoral Matters appears to be in agreement that it should be regarded as an offence for a candidate to sign a questionnaire or pledge himself to promote the expenditure of public money on behalf of any person, group of persons or organization.

With the increase of the group system in this country there has come an increase in the questionnaire habit. These groups may not have candidates of their own in the running, so they seek to find if the candidates in the field are willing to pledge support to some or all of the ideas which appear to be of particular interest to these groups. It is probably annoying or embarrassing at times for candidates to have to answer these questions, but it is also difficult to try and find a good reason why a body of people should not be allowed to ask a candidate a plain question. It seems to be in keeping with the plain idea of democracy that the people should ask as many questions and receive as many answers as they can before they go out to vote. If a candidate says plainly that he is in favor of this, that and something else before voting day then it tends to put an end to a good deal of rumor and whispering.

At the same time the candidate would not be well advised to put too much confidence in the signing of questionnaires, because he can know in advance that by so doing the group vote will not be delivered to him in full strength. We have always been inclined to doubt the value of sending out questionnaires to candidates and also the value of signing them or answering them in detail. But that view has little or nothing to do with the right of people to put such questions and we do not believe it is proper to try and legislate that right away from people in this country.

A Big Issue At Stake

There were virtually no changes at all made in the existing tariff when Hon. Mr. Dunning presented his budget, and the feeling seems to be that business is satisfied to have it left that way. The constant shifting of a duty here or there has been the custom for a long time and in the main it has an unsettling effect because people engaged in business do not know just what is going to happen.

It is probable there will be changes made in the tariff when the trade pact with United States has ben completed. There is a move at the moment to have trade agreements with United States and Britain and Canada completed at the same time. Australia is said to be anxious to have Britain widen the scope of her dealings with United States to include all the Dominions.

There is more behind this than may appear on the surface, and it is something of which the people of the Dominion of Canada should think seriously in days to come. According to the set-up of world powers today it is becoming desirable if not imperative that the English-speaking nations of the world should draw closer together, and they should do it in such a way that the nations of the world would be fully aware of the movement. There is not the least desire to threaten the peace of the world but rather to give to it an assurance of peace which it does not at present possess. This idea has come more prominently to the front in recent months because of the threatening attitude of other nations of the world, a number of which would consider it a signal accomplishment if they were able to raise some issue on which the English-speaking nations would be sharply divided.

The carrying on of trade and business in general, the interchange of commodities and manufactured articles between nations is one place where people can express either international good-will or national selfishness. That is why the framing of trade agreements which affect directly many English-speaking nations has a peculiar significance today. It is not merely trying to drive a hard bargain with each bargaining nation seeing what can be secured by way of special advantage. We are convinced the making of a trade agreement between these nations today must be approached on a broader basis than ever before. There should be a greater understanding of the needs and hopes of each of these nations because back of it all is the positive need of building understanding between these English-speaking peoples.

When we have the larger purpose in mind it is necessary that we approach it in the larger way. It may mean we will have to drop some of the lesser things which we have considered important if we hope to enter into the full accomplishment of the greater purpose—the welding together of the English-speaking nations of the world. And by that we mean United States and all the nations of the British Empire. That does not mean building barriers against others, but it does mean that we should settle the great question first.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Toronto complains it is using less water and paying more for it. The same thing applies to bathing suits.

Hon. W. D. Euler announces there will be no election this year. The budget had said that before he did.

A lock of Nelson's hair has been sold for $55. That could not happen in the case of many famous men of today.

If this impounding of cars of drunken drivers keeps up, municipalities will be justified in building large police garages as a business venture.

A New Liskeard man has been fined $1,820 and costs for illegal possession of beaver pelts. The magistrate is evidently out to collect a few hides himself.

The Hydro inquiry is over, so far as taking evidence is concerned, and all that remains now is to find the whitewash brush.

The announcement that the budget will have little effect on the average man's pocketbook will bring up the question of whether or not the average man possesses a pocket book.

Under changes in the law it is said the Canadian tax dodger will now feel the clamps. That seems fair enough as the tax payer has been feeling them for some time.

Collingwood reports a hail storm with ice the size of golf balls smashing down crops. The vernacular of the day is going modern, as years ago hail stone were always referred to as being as big as hen's eggs.

Germany indicates she is under no obligation to pay the debts of Austria. If Mr. Dunning had thought of that he might have easily presented a balanced budget by ignoring our national liabilities.

THEY ALL CAME

(By A. R. R.)

¶ My Cousin Jake's a picnic man, he loves outdoors and coats of tan, and sings aloud their praise; he loves to pack up buns and cake, and then a happy man is Jake, he picks the open ways.

¶ When I went off to visit him, I knew the picnics would begin, Jake hadn't changed a bit; he knew the very place to go, told how the gentle breeze would blow, and just where we would sit.

¶ Jake knows the pretty spots all right, he picked a mighty pleasing site, we spread the victuals there; and Jake was busy on the chores, said all things tasted swell outdoors, where one sniffed country air.

¶ Jake talked so much the spiders heard they must have listened to each word, perhaps they missed not one; then they sent word around the woods, that Jake had brought sufficient goods, and every one should come.

¶ The ants got wind about it all, and some were short and others tall, and beetles heard it too; and caterpillars joined the group, mosquitoes made another troupe, their course was straight and true.

¶ I think Jake talked too much that day, and really had too much to say, of all his picnic spread; we might have sat there all alone, as quiet and peaceful as at home—if nothing had been said.

Says Kingston Talks About It

(From Parliamentary Debates)

Mr. WALSH: There were certain items discussed during the course of this afternoon that did not create a very gratifying reflection upon the present government. I notice that whenever a person or a government is confronted with a difficult proposition, it attempts to cover up by the throwing of mud, and the raking up of post history. I do not see that what the Pime Minister has said tonight, or the snickering grin and laughter of the Minister of National Defence—

Mr. MACKENZIE (Vancouver): Thank you.

Mr. WALSH: —in any way eradicates the suggestion that was made from the opposition benches this afternoon in connection with the work that is being done in and around the city of Kingston.

Mr. BENNETT: Hear, hear.

Mr. WALSH: It was my privilege to visit—

Mr. BENNETT: The commandant's report.

Mr. MACKENZIE (Vancouver): I have it here.

Mr. WALSH: —my native city last week-end. I want to say to the committee that it is common gossip on the streets of Kingston—

Mr. DUNNING: "Gossip" is right.

Mr. WALSH: Yes, gossip is right. And I want to say this in passing, to the Minister of National Defence, that when the opportunity comes to look into the details of his department we shall than be able to see to what extent political debauchery and corruption have crept into that particular department of government.

Mr. MACKENZIE (Vancouver): Do it now.

Mr. BENNETT: No; that item is not before the committee.

Mr. WALSH: It is not possible to do it now, but the time will come when we shall look into it.

The CHAIRMAN: Order.

Mr. WALSH: I shall come back to the city of Kingston.

Mr. MACKENZIE (Vancouver): You had better.

Mr. WALSH: I can go there with my head in the air, and be respected by the citizens of the city of Kingston. I was saying that it is common gos...—

Mr. DUNNING: Yes, gossip.

Mr. WALSH: I wa saying that it is street gossip, everyone is talking about it in the city of Kingston, as to what is being done in connection with public works there. I want to say this in passing, that the Minister of Labour (Mr. Rogers) personally is not in any way being-blamed for the condition that has arisen there.

An hon. MEMBER: Blame your leader.

Mr. WALSH: I say that in all fairness.

An hon. MEMBER: you cannot be fair.

Mr. WALSH: I could not be fair with some people, because some people do not know what the word "fair" actually means. I do not consider that the Minister of Labour himself has in any way connived at what has developed there. Unfortunately, what has developed is the creature of our political system. The sooner the two major parties and the two minor parties of this house get together as public-spirited men and women, the sooner shall we eradicate this sort of business from the political life of our country. As I sat here and listened to what one government was said to have done in the past, and to what another government was said to be doing at the present time, I wondered what the people of Canada were going to think when they read their daily newspaper tomorrow morning or to-morrow evening. The reflection that has been cast upon democracy as it exists in Canada to-day is not at all gratifying. For this government to sit here and suggest that they are doing these things because it was done to an even greater extent in the past—

Mr. DUNNING: That was never suggested by anybody.

HIRING AUDITORS.

(Municipal World)

A COMMON mistake made by municipal councils is the awarding of audit contracts on the basis of bids. The value of any audit is in direct proportion to the ability, experience and skill of the accountant. An audit does not consist merely of the checking of figures; in fact, that is the least valuable part of an audit. The most important part is the interpretation of the results in the light of the law and principles of sound management and administration. Every accountant can not give the same value in this respect, hence audits awarded to the lowest bidder are usually worth what they cost, or perhaps less. A butcher can remove an appendix much more cheaply than a surgeon, but his services would hardly be engaged on that basis. Until councils realize that the important thing in selecting an accountant is not price, but skill, experience, and judgment, the citizens will not receive the protection to which they are entitled.

BIG UNDERTAKING.

(Sherbrooke Record)

PREMIER Angus Macdonald, of Nova Scotia, in addressing the annual dinner of the Canadian Life Insurance Officers' Association held in London, Ont., declared that there were other sorts of insurance which he would like to see in force besides life, fire and those other standard measures.

In this instance he mentioned insurance against war and for peace, against economic reverses and for economic security, and against dictatorship and for democracy.

While these objectives are in themselves desirable, they represent a Utopian dream which has little hope of fulfillment in this emperfect world and involve the entire remaking of humanity. There is no reason, however, why the human race should not continue the fight to better conditions both in the field of national and international economics and politics. The greatest of the world advances have been made against almost insurmountable obstacles.

• Using the Word "Tolerance"

(Letter in Ottawa Journal)

SIR:—A recent Journal editorial refers to the action of the editor of an Anglican paper in welcoming the coming Eucharistic Congress to Quebec as a "fine example of religious tolerance", and a plea is made for similar spirit in politics and human relations generally. It seem to me that either the wrong word is used in the above or the the right word wrongly used.

Tolerance can only be shown where there is authority to suppress or prevent. The Editor referred to has neither authority to prevent the Congress from meeting nor responsibility for it in meeting, and while free to welcome if he so decide is not free to hinder the gathering nor to affect its program. And tolerance can only be used with reference to action, and does not carry the idea of commending—rather the opposite—that of permitting what we do not commend.

A good deal of what is commended as tolerance, is simply owing to ignorance of the matter in review or indifference as to results, which is very far from being the same thing.

Our judgments, or opinions are not matters of tolerance—only action can be tolerant, and that only when we have authority over the action of others. . . .

The country suffers because the people who could prevent evils of patronage and public corruption with public office and public funds, tolerate the evil. There may be a great deal done in the realm of politics, that should not be tolerated, and there may be much done in the name of religion, that honest and sincere men may not commend.

W. B. MacCALLUM,
St. Elmo Manse, Maxville, Ont.

EDITOR'S NOTE: We cannot agree with Rev. Mr. MacCallum that the word "tolerance" was improperly used in the editorial to which he refers. The Shorter Oxford gives as one of the meanings of the word. "The disposition to be patient with the opinions or practices of others" and that, we think, is precisely the meaning given it in the editorial.

• Sad Lot Of A Once-Proud Race

(From the Montreal Star)

WHILE THE dictatorships and the democracies of Europe continue to manoeuvre for position, the League of Nations continues its departmental work—the only work in which it can show successful results. One of its reports, just issued, calls attention to the sad state of the remnants of the once-proud Assyrian people. During the Great War, the Assyrians lent the Allies valuable aid against the Turks, and Britain later acknowledged the usefulness of their levies in the administration of Iraq under the mandate.

The danger of using Christian policemen in a Moslem country, however, was painfully illustrated when Britain withdrew from Iraq. There were thirty-five thousand Assyrians there then. But many were murdered and the rest found conditions of living intolerable. The responsibility lay with the League to find this remnant of a nation a home. But the best that could be done—and it is a sad reflection upon humanity—was a tract of malarial marches in the Ghab district of Syria. Britain promised a large sum towards the cost of their settlement here, but when the French decided to relinquish the Syrian mandate, the scheme fell down.

Today some nine thousand of these Assyrians without a home are dragging out a miserable existence on the banks of the Khabur, a tributary of the Euphrates in Northeast Syria. The rest must remain in Iraq. Those on the Khabur, however, are in little less satisfactory state than their brethren in Iraq. Last year there was a severe drought: their crops failed, their animals went short of pasture. The Syian Government even refused them the right to plant nine acres of tobacco! In this extremity they have appealed to the League. The responsibility rests with that body, with Britain and with Iraq. The dictates of humanity demand that immediate aid and a peaceful settlement must be effected without delay. Here is one of the minor but no less grim and pitiful, aftermaths of war.

TWO HECKLING STORIES.

(Hamilton Spectator)

OTTAWA APPEARS to be ready to take action to curb hecklers. Oldtimers will feel that all is not well in the world when they recall how Sir John A. and others of that worthy era handed those who dared interrupt a speech.

When Winston Churchill was a young hopeful he was heckled by one of the audience, who shouted: "Does your mother know you're out?" "Yes," retorted Churchill, "and on election night she'll know I'm in."

Once Theodore Roosevelt was getting a rough ride in a United States campaign. At one meeting a heckler shouted: "Why are you a Republican?" "Because," came the reply from Roosevelt, "my father was a Republican and my grandfather before him." "What if your father had been an ass?" "Then," said Roosevelt, "I'd be a Democrat."

3,000 THERE.

(London Spectator)

THOUGH NOT ALL the three thousand guests said to have been invited to the reception at the Italian Embassy on Wednesday actually appeared there, enough came to create formidable traffic jams all round Grosvenor Square and all round the Embassy's magnificent suite of rooms.

The hospitality of Count and Countess Grandhi no doubt had its relation to the recent detente in relations between London and Rome, and their guests tended to scan one another with a politically appraising eye. There were those who felt and expressed unfeigned satisfaction that the opening of a new chapter was thus symbolized; there was others who looked slightly doubtful about the propriety of attending, and duly relieved when they saw that other people, in whom similar doubts might be presumed, were there to.

But the desire to salute Count Grandi who has in these last two years discharged singularly difficult tasks as well as any man could, was, I think, universal.

ONE IS PLENTY

(New York World-Telegram)

WE VIEW WITH alarm that school in Washington where the wives of Congressmen are being taught how to make speeches.

Not, we add in haste, that we question the right of any woman to talk as much as any Congressman, if such a thing is possible. And not that we doubt the ability of many of these wives to make better speeches than their husbands. But in a country where the supply of oratory already so far exceeds the demand we don't like the idea of deliberately developing two speechmakers to a family.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

NOW A CERTAIN man was sick, named Lazarus, of Bethany, the town of Mary and her sister Martha. . . .

When Jesus heard that, he said, This sickness is not unto death, but for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby. . . .

Then when Jesus came, he found that he had lain in the grave four days already. . . .

Then when Mary was come where Jesus was, and saw him, she fell down at his feet, saying unto him, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping which came with her, he groaned in the spirit, and was troubled, and said, Where have ye laid him? They said unto him, Lord, come and see. . . .

Then they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid. And Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me. And I knew that thou hearest me always: but because of the people which stand by I said it, that they may believe that thou hast sent me.

And when he thus had spoken, he said with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth. And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with graveclothes: and his face was bound about with a napkin.

Jesus saith unto them, Loose him, and let him go.—John 11: 1, 17, 32-34 41-44.

OF ALL SAD WORDS.

(Lethbridge Herald)

LETHBRIDGE Social Creditors, along with their brothers all over Alberta, received the results of Wednesday's balloting in Saskatchewan quietly.

In Calagary, seat of the Social Credit movement, the blow was severely felt seemingly.

So confident were the supporters of Premier Aberhart of victory that Calgary leaders published a "special notice" in the morning newspaper. It read as follows:

"Social Crediters and friends are all requested to meet in the vicinity of the Central Club, First street east on Wednesday, June 8, at 9.30 p.m., when it is hoped that a loud-speaker will be installed to hear the returns from the Saskatchewan election. All groups and zones are requested to bring a banner, their whistles, horns or noise-makers and get all motor cars out. Please advertise this notice to one and all. Come and swell the crowd."

After hearing that the election had been conceded to Premier Patterson's Liberal movement, only 30 odd Social Crediters turned out at the appointed time.

POWER OF THE PRESS.

(Kamloops Sentinel)

NOT UNTIL this week did the Sentinel fully realize the power of the press. Here's the tale. On Tuesday a country resident wrote asking us to "put a piece in the paper" saying the countryside needed rain. Skeptical (as are all newspapermen) that it would do any good, we complied.

So help us, before the ink was dry a wee bit of rain fell. During the night there was a little more. Not enough to do any good to gardens and pasture thirsty after a long dry spell, but enough so that we can boast "Not bad for an amateur". Really, we didn't know we had the power within us.

And it's fun; we'd really like to try again. So, if there's anything you need; some rain, some moonlight for a bit of courting, a dragon at a distance slain, just write the Sentinel. We won't guarantee the result, but we will put the power of the press to work.

CIVILIANS BLOODTHIRSTY

(Windsor Star)

Spanish Leftists in Catalonia have replaced regular army officers with civilian militiamen in all key posts. An ominous note is thus struck, for no one these days is quite so bloodthirsty as a civilian.

Five Spans Mark Long Peace Linking Nations

IVY LEA, Ont., June 20 (CP)—An international bridge system 8½ miles long, crossing the St. Lawrence River and touching a few of the Thousand Islands, will be opened in August, cementing a century of friendship between the United States and Canada.

The Thousand Islands bridge cost about $3,000,000, took more than a year to build and is made up of five distinct spans and connecting roads. The bridge connects Ivy Lea, 70 miles south of Ottawa and midway between Brockville and Kingston, with Collin's Landing, N.Y.

Its formal opening Aug. 18 probably will be marked by 1938's most brilliant assemblage of notables. The governor-general, Lord Tweedsmuir, has accepted an invitation to attend the ceremonies. Tentative plans to attend have been announced by President Roosevelt of the United States, Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York State.

Construction, which started May 1, 1937, was financed by the Thousand Islands Bridge authority, set up by New York State. The authority hopes to collect enough tolls in the next 15 years to pay for and operate the bridge as a free public crossing. The Canadian section of the bridge reverts to the Ontario government when it is paid for by tolls. Bridge officials expect a revenue of about $250,000 a year.

In Several Sections.

Nature smiled freely on this project. Favorable topography and rock conditions made possible unusually low construction costs and design.

There is a 4,500-foot steel and concrete approach to the first crossing from the United States to Wells Island. The first unit is an 800-foot steel arch suspension bridge, spanning the American channel of the river between the mainland and the island. This, the largest bridge in the system, provides a 150-foot clearance for river boats.

The next bridge, at the end of a 4½-mile road across Wells Island, is a 90-foot concrete span, linking Wells and Canada's Hill Isand. This is the only international link and workers here call it "the biggest little bridge in the world."

A brass strip across the road marks the international boundary and one of the official boundary monuments is preserved under the bridge abutment. This section will be the scene of the dedication ceremonies.

Canadian immigration and administration offices will be on Hill Island and similar United States offices on Wells Island.

The first Canadian bridge connects Hill and Constance Islands. A small rock island acts as centre base for the two 300-foot spans that support the 600-foot structure.

The second Canadian unit, a 348-foot steel arch bridge spanning Constance and Georgina Islands, harmonizes with the graceful lines of the suspension bridge next to it.

The final and dominating section is the suspension bridge from Georgina Island to the Ontario mainland with a main span of 750 feet with 120-foot river clearance. It ends with a 2,000-foot approach of steel and concrete. An uncharted shoal of solid rock found near Georgina Island enabled engineers to design a unique triple function pier which serves in part as anchor for the Canadian suspension bridge.

Fine For Scenery

Tourists crossing the bridge have a commanding view of the Thousand Islands scenery. The bridges throughout harmonize with the scenic background and were designed to give motorists an unobstructed view of the colorful panorama as they pass along the two-lane, 22-foot wide roadway.

Suspension bridge towers, 230 feet high, with gracefully-arched portals above the roadway, dominate the bridges. Each of the four main suspension towers is surmounted with two aviation beacon lights.

Ontario's new No. 2 highway from Gananoque to Brockville along the scenic St. Lawrence's north shore is under construction but will not be ready for the bridge opening. A link between the bride-head and the existing No. 2 highway near Lansdowne has been prepared for the bridge-bound traffic.

Constance and Georgina Islands are parts of the St. Lawrence national parks and Hon. T. A. Crerar, Dominion minister of mines who directs national park administration, is expected here shortly to determine whether Hill Island and parts of the mainland near the Canadian bridge-head will be converted into a national park.

RHEUMATIC PAIN AGES YOU

A pitiful sight to see him looking years older than he really is. But in most cases this is unnecessary. What causes Rheumatic twinges? Damp, Cold? No. The weather only aggravates what is already there. The cause of Rheumatic ailments, Neuritis, Lumbago, Sciatica, is often Uric Acid in your system. Uric Acid forms crystals—hard, sharp, very painful. Uric Acid is caused by congested waste matter that poisons your body. And within that poisoned body is a sluggish liver.

Now Fynnon Salt helps stimulate the liver. The combination of Sodium, Potassium and the elements of Lithium in Fynnon Salt works through your system to clear out poisons and help dissolve Uric Acid crystals. With the cause of the trouble removed you are soon fit again. Large bottle of Fynnon Salt, 75c at all druggists.

OBITUARY

THOMAS WEBSTER.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, June 20.—On Tuesday, June 14, at his home in Lakefield, there passed away, after a year's illness, Thomas Zachariah Webster, aged 78, beloved husband of Mary Thornton Magee, to whom he was married on January 1st, 1889. Besides his wife, he leaves to mourn his passing one daughter, Mrs. F. C. Marshall (Marguerite) of Peterborough, and four grandchildren: Grace, Allan, Phyllis and Warren Thomas Marshall; and two brothers, Samuel of Fenelon Falls and Frederick S. of Transcona, Man. Wind Flattens Crops

ARCOLA, Sask., June 20 (C.P.)—High wind, accompanied by torrential rains and hail, swept the district south-west of Arcola, blew down buildings, did damage up to 90 per cent. of the district's fall rye crop, killed hundreds of chickens, and filled sloughs for the first time in eight years.

So powerful was the wind on Friday that it moved a 3,000-pound tractor 20 feet on the farm of Lloyd Carr, seven miles south-west of Arcola.

Institute Campaign Nets 700 Starlings

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, June 20—The Belmont Branch Womens' Institute met on Thursday afternoon in the Belmont Town Hall with their newly elected president, Miss Iva Smith, in the chair. Mrs. J. Seabrook acted as secretary in the absence of Mrs. H. L. Scott.

The roll call was well responded to with ideas on "How to improve our Institute." An answer which the members thought particularly good was "study the Institute Ode".

The one cent bounty which the Institute have been paying for starlings in their school section has been discontinued for the summer, 700 beaks having been presented by the pupils, up to now.

The Institute decided to have a short course in needlecraft for the members. They also decided to repair the front step to the town hall and have the grounds and cemetery tidied up.

Memory time a new part added to the Institute's monthly program was held at this meeting, with appropriate music and a poem by Mrs. G Martin, entitled "My Ten-Acre Farm".

Also included in the program were community songs and a reading by Miss Goldilene Dafoe. An interesting paper on "Horticulture" was given by Mrs. W. Smith. Mrs. Don Anderson contributed a piano solo and Mrs. Anderson and Miss Mary Anderson a duet "Little Old Church In the Valley".

Report of the annual district convention held recently in Havelock was presented by Mrs. William Harris.

Ivanhoe Veteran Lands First Fish

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, June 20—At the age of 82 years, Mr. John Wood, one of the best known residents of the district of Ivanhoe, has experienced the thrill of catching his first fish, a seven pound pickerel landed at Baptiste Lake recently.

Though born and raised in this section, where he has resided all his life, Mr. Wood, who declared he never had much time for fishing as a sport, had up until this week foregone the pleasures of angling. Persuaded by his friend, Percy Wood, inspector at London, Ont., to visit him at Birch Cliffe, Baptiste Lake, he took advantage of the visit to go fishing. The seven pound pickered, a fair-sized fish in any lake, provided the biggest thrill, not only of the day, but for many year's past.

A convert now to sport, Mr. Wood has declared himself now one of the keenest members of the fishing fraternity and is looking forward eagerly to the next fishing excursion at the lake.

Germany has employed as high as 250,000 men on its Reich Motor Road Project.

Yelverton Leads In Garden Parties

(Examiner Correspondence.)

YELVERTON, June 20. — The annual garden party in connection with Yelverton United Church was held on the church grounds on Friday evening. As this was the initial social event of this particular type to be held in this community this season the crowd was large and representative of various neighboring centres, in spite of the threatening showers. The supper tables were daintily and abundantly laden in the spacious church shed. A bevy of energetic waiters catered to the guests in capable manner and all were served at a reasonable hour.

Following supper the crowd proceeded to an adjacent ball field, where a friendly game of softball was run off between Nestleton and Yelverton boys, with the visiting team carrying off the big end of the score.

A splendid program had been arranged by the special committee in charge and was presented in the shed also when the supper tables had been cleared. At the conclusion of the ball game all were comfortably seated and Rev. C. H. Ferguson, pastor of the church, warmly welcomed all present and thanked all who had participated in making the evening the decided success it was.

The Dramatic Club from Orono United Church then were introduced to their audience by the chairman, who briefly outlined their play entitled "Wild Ginger." This splendid characterization was especially well received and was heartily applauded at intervals throughout its presentation. While the play was of a humorous type, the moral was evident and most appropriate for the occasion. Between acts much appreciated accordian music was furnished by Nestleton talent.

The proceeds of the evening amounted to approximately $85.00, which sum will be used in the extension of church work at Yelverton.

Young Petes Win In Bowmanville

The Young Petes remained in a first-place tie in the Lakeshore Junior Baseball League with Cobourg on Saturday when they grabbed off a 6-3 win over Bowmanville on the latter's diamond. They had an edge this game in pitching, hitting and fielding, but it was tight all the way through. The same two squads clash here this Wednesday evening.

Lefty Condon held the homesters to nine hits, mostly scattered, and fanned half a dozen in a good showing, though he was inclined toward wildness at times. He had almost perfect backing by his buddies in the field. Slemon, a southpaw, twirled good ball for Bowmanville for five frames, but was hammered out in the sixth when Gee Clark connected for a log homer over the right field fence, scoring McNabb ahead of him. Hooper finished up in fine style to hold Herb Ralph's gang runless the rest of the way. The losers had three errors.

Get Two Hits.

Clark, Stanley, Castle and Girard all had two hits apiece for the Young Petes, and Colville led the losers with three safe blows. Stanley collided with another player once and was knocked out for a minute, but held on to the fly ball. Colville and Hooper had nifty running catches, but the real fielding feature of the fixture was McNabb's dash into short right to rope in a hard one and end a Bowmanville threat as they had the bases full. Stanley handled a bunch of hot ones at short neatly, and started one double-play. The teams:

Peterborough A's Win In Kawartha

Peterborough A team of the Kawartha Tennis League took four of five events on Saturday against Kawartha Hurons at the Kawartha courts. The second men's doubles was cancelled owing to failure of either team to field a second male part, each squad gaining a point. Roy Tranter was called on to save his team from a whitewash as he trimmed Jack Patte 6-1, 6-1. Helen Cole was not extended in her game with Mrs. Jackson whom she turned back 6-3, 6-3. Mazie Cowan and Walter Perks also won handily from Alicia Langley and Art Jones by scores of 6-1, 7-5. In ladies' doubles, Elinor Kearn and Joan Ottewell had to work to win in three sets, 6-3, 4-6 and 6-3. Scores of 6-3 and 6-3 were made as Andy Rutter and W. Scott downed G. R. Langley and J. Selvidge in well-played men's doubles. The scheduled match between Kawartha Iroquois and Crees will be played at the Kawartha courts this Wednesday.

Bucko MacDonald Here on Tuesday

The outstanding exhibition lacrosse game of this summer will be run off here to-morrow (Tuesday) night at nine o'clock in the George Street Arena, when Orillia Terriers play the Petes. The locals do not expect to win this contest, as they have but a good Senior B squad, whereas the Terriers are about the best Senior A aggregation in the Province, if not in the country. But the Petes will hustle all the way and make the Orillia outfit battle throughout, and the record crowd of fans who saw these teams play here last year will likely all be back to see another nifty game. Coach Frank Randle will have his strongest local lineup set to shoot the works and the Terriers have promised to send their regular team. Local and district fans should jam the Arena to-morrow evening.

Bucko MacDonald, noted pro puck defenceman with Detroit Red Wings when they twice won Stanley Cup honors in recent years, is the playing coach of the Terriers. He will be on deck here to-morrow. Bucko first made his name in lacrosse and is really an outstanding performer. He plays on the forward line and is one of the best goal-scorers in senior company. As rugged as ever, the bouncing Bucko uses his weight to advantage up front. Other Terrier stars include: McArthur, Cassidy, Curran, Willson, Boettger, Steggall, Snowden, Bain and Connell.

Gas Defence Added To Curriculum Of Czech Children

The wave of war scares that has swept Czechoslovakia in the past few weeks is now being felt by Czech school children. The government has ordered that all pupils in the public schools must attend special classes in gas defence. Each pupil is given a free gas mask by school authorities and the masks must be carried to school each day. A group of pupils is seen here in the playground of a Praha school getting their first lesson in the use of their new "educational equipment."

ELECTRICS AND BRINTONS WIN SOCCER LEAGUE DECISIONS

Brinton Soccer Adds Two More League Points

The Brinton Athletic added two more league points to their fast increasing total in the local league by defeating C.C.F., six goals to one, on Saturday afternono, at King Edward Park. The losers were outclassed in the first period but they made amends by their brilliant display in the second period.

Goals Aplenty

The spin of the coin fell in favor of Captain Eric Jones, Brinton. Midfield play continued, in the early stages, with the halfbacks endeavoring to make openings which finally culminated in the Carpet boys opening the scoring through the efforts of Clark, on the right wing, who rattled a low grounder into the far corner of the net. The C.C.F. replied with many dangerous raids by their wing men but failed to carry their attacks to fruition through lack of taking first-time shots at goal. A break away by Brinton centre-half resulted in the left winger being left in possession who left his centreman in a favorable position to register number two. After twenty minutes play, a C.C.F. fullback conceded a spot kick that was converted by Clark. At this point, the C.C.F. were outplayed in every department thereby resulting in Brinton attack making the score read: Brinton Athletic 5, C.C.F. 0.

More Active

On resuming, the C.C.F. team settled down to business to make the winners work for all they could get, in fact, the losers were more progressive than the winners and forced the issue into the winners' territory. McLeod robbed Henwood of the ball in a tackle and carried the ball up the wing. He sent his wing man down into the corner which got the C.C.F. fullbacks split as the ball run from wing to wing, until the left winger rattled a shot into the rigging. Time and again, Lang would manoeuver his position and test the custodian with timely efforts. On one occasion, he went right through the fullbacks and slipped the ball back to his inside man who was well set to score when brought down by the fullback. Lang was trusted with the kick which sailed into the corner of the upright away out of the reach of the custodian. On the net visit, the C.C.F. centre-man beat three men in a row to terminate with an oblique shot that Adams, Brinton goalie, handled with one-handed clearance. For the remained of the period, the losers were ever on the alert to take advantage of the easy going methods of the winners who seemed to be satisfied with their lead. Play was in the Brinton territory for the last ten minutes with the Carpet boys battling to prevent any more count. Brinton 6, C.C.F. 1.

Goal scorers: Clark (2), N. Downer (2), G. Downer (2). C.C.F.: Lang.

C.C.F.: W. Denisin, goal; J. Chamberlain and F. Lawrence, fullbacks; G. MacDonald, F Dyer and J. Mayette, halves; J. Henwood, P. Hogan, J. Lang, J. Thorne and R. Smelt, forwards.

Brinton Athletic: H. Adams, goal; F. Todd and Asa Downer, fulbacks; J. McMaster, E. Jones and J. McLeod, halves; S. Clark, J. Richardson, N. Downer, G. Downer and E. Adkinson, forwards. Sub, Art Downer.

Westclox	5	4	1
Motorists	6	4	2
Omemee	5	0	5

Motorists took a 7-3 win over Omemee at the Bowl on Saturday night to climb within half a game of the leading Westclox team, it being the fifth straight reverse for the Villagers. Fleming pitched good ball for the winners, holding the O.'s to seven hits and a walk while fanning one. Reeds went good on the other slab, but was somewhat wild to walk five as he was reached for five bingles. The hurlers had fair support.

Brockley hit a homer and a single for the losers, as F. Parsons and Rehill got two safeties each. For Motorists, Weir connected for two hits, with Calladine, Dorrington, and Fleming having one each. In the field, McQuade, Pogue, Playford and Crowe shone, the latter having an unassisted double play and robbing Omemee of hits. The teams:

Here is Guldahl, RIGHT, holding the trophy and being congratulated by Dick Metz who finished second.

Babe Ruth Denies Rumor He Is Slated For Pilot's Post

Hired As Coach For The Dodgers, He Tells Press

NEW YORK, June 20 (AP). — Three years ago, in the twilight of his career, the players were used to him. But yesterday at Ebbets Field the Dodgers stared at Babe Ruth, their new coach, with their eyes popping.

He looked just as he always had, heavy, sweaty and hearty. He was glad to be back as a coach, a step, and not such a long one, from the managership of the Dodgers, and he showed it in everything he did.

"Gosh," said the Babe, "it sure is good to get back But I'm not in shape"—he slapped his mammoth tummy—"stood up there and hit for five minutes and felt like I'd been doin' it all week."

"I'm just a coach now, not a player. Hurt my arm up there too. Besides I can't hit any more. My right eye's bad. Started to go bad last year I was with the Yankees. I dunno why, it just did."

"Y'know," rumbled Ruth, "I didn't realize how much I'd miss this till I got this job. 'Course golf is great—this will sure knock blazes out of my game—but it can't match this stuff."

The rumor runs the Babe is slated for the Dodgers' managership within a month, or at best by the end of the season. You told him and he laughed.

"Naw, that's crazy stuff. I'm just a coach. Burleigh Grimes is manager. Sure, I'd like to be a manager, here or anywhere else, but I guess I gotta wait a while."

When it was all over, when the Dodgers had won, 6-2, and lost, 4-3, they were still cheering the Babe, running after him for autographs and to slap his broad back.

As Tony Lazzeri of the Cubs said as he ducked into the shower, "It's good to have that fat old bum back, now ain't it?"

Lakefield Wins Tennis Series

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, June 20.—The Lakefield Tennis Club team defeated the Peterborough Tennis Club's "B" team here on Saturday afternoon by a score of 4-2, when Lakefield played off their first match of the season in the Kawartha Tennis League schedule. Though scheduled to play on the two preceding Saturdays, the games were called on account of rain, and this was Lakefield's first opportunity to try the metal of her team.

Five games were played, three of which were won by the home team. The fourth point to Lakefield's credit was gained by default, when Peterborough failed to put a ladies' singles contestant into the competition against Miss T. Elmsley.

Misses L. Reid and B. Middleton of Peterborough carried off the ladies' doubles, defeating Misses T. Stuart and Betty Harvey in a three-game set; and Stewart Loyst and Jack Ryan, playing second men's doubles, went down to defeat before H. Macdonald and M. Swartz of Peterborough.

Mrs. Pomeroy and Dr. Smith of Lakefield defeated Mrs. Watson and Jack Cowling of Peterborough in the mixed doubles. Doug. Smith, Lakefield, won from Howie Hamill, Peterborough, in the men's singles, and Walter Spence and George Tanner, playing first men's doubles for Lakefield, defeated Harry Marsh and A. Leclair.

The scores:

Doug. Smith (L.)-H. Hamill (P.), 6-2, 6-2.

Miss T. Elmsley (L.)-Default (P.).

Walter Spence and George Tanner (L.) vs. Harry Marsh and A. Leclair (P.), 7-5, 6-4.

H. Macdonald M. Swartz (P.) vs. Stewart Loyst and Jack Ryan (L.), 7-5, 6-3.

L. Reed and B. Middleton (P.) vs. T. Stuart and B. Harvey (L.), 6-8, 6-3, 6-3.

Mrs. Pomeroy and Dr. Smith (L.) vs. Mrs. Watson and Jack Cowling (P.), 6-2, 6-4.

Final score: Lakefield 4, Peterborough "B" 2.

Cricket Notes

On Saturday Whitaker's made the first of the trips which will be undertaken by local clubs to Toronto this summer to meet old opponents in the St. Clair C.C.

Unfortunately their trip was fruitless, as after Whitaker's had opened with B. Roberts and F. Smith, who scored 12 without loss, heavy rain came on and prevented further play.

Next Saturday, Peterborough plays Lindsay in Lindsay, and on Dominion Day, July 1, play the strong St. Edmund's team from Toronto at the Oval.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

THE GREAT Bucko MacDonald and his Orillia Terriers will be here tomorrow in the twilight for an exhibition lacrosse match with the Pe tes. At nine bells, fast time, in the George St. arena. Should be a nifty scrap and ought to pack in the customers like a fowl supper. The Petes don't look for a win but will make the classy Terriers turn it on, and both teams will be at top strength. Bucko is a noted N. H. L. defenceman but he was more famous for his lacrosse a few years back andl he can still show most of the senior stars in Ontario how the game should be played. The bruising Bucko plays up front and is a prolific goal-getter besides smearing rivals with gay and colorful abandon. Don't know what sort of sugar he is knocking down in Orillia but he is worth plenty both as a drawing card and as a player.

* * * * * *

THIS ITEM is from Bun Morgansen's Tely pillar: "Watch out for Bucko MacDonald on Saturday night. The boy is really poison when given an opening. He just can't miss when in front of the other fellow's net. Latest reading on the Orillia 'Terribles' finds George Snowden and Onions Smith as the best foils for MacDonald in the passing game. Flash: Bucko is featuring the 'sleeper pass' this season. Piper Bain is combing the boys a bit. Sign of old age or something. The 'Pipe' is still a great ball handler. Connell takes the faceoffs and tries to buck, bodycheck or just fall on his opponent with every draw. The referees' show insists that the ball be drawn cleanly. Calling the Orillia club the 'Terribles' is just another form of compliment, because it is terrible what they are doing to all opposition in senior lacrosse right now."

OVER AT Riverside on Saturday about 600 ball fans saw a neat exhibition tussle with the Petes copping a 7-1 smirk over Toronto Webbers. A good game till the last few innings when it became draggy. Too one-sided and, of course, exhibition games anyway aren't as keen as loop fixtures. At least, the folks saw a slew of slabsmen in action, each side using three. And half of the hurlers were southpaws. The ystarted Lefty Lesurf then shoved in a southpaw named Kelly and wound up with a righthander by the name of Harris. He looked least colorful but proved most effective. They all looked alike to the Petes who played good ball to earn the decision.

* * * * * *

JOE JAKAFBY pitched the first six frames for the Petes and made a right smart job of it. They didn't get a hit or make a threat for four frames but managed to get two bingles and a run in the fifth, And a hit in the sixth. Joe was curving 'em all and showing up to first-rate advantage. Lefty McNally twirled two heats and they couldn't do anything to his pitches, though getting credit for one hit that was dirt cheap — owing to a misunderstanding of the infielders. Gunner Whitehill finished up strong. Bob Doll was hitting the apple hard and often, he and Calladine leading the binglers. The fielding was good, even Al Clark — who booted three — spearing several dandies to rob Toronto of hits. Bun Kingdon looked neat on second, while Doll and the Toronto shortstop pulled in nice catches. Eddie Murphy was in the hospital getting his tonsils extracted, but the boys got a neat win for him in a fair fracas.

AT THE LOOP meeting in Oshawa on Saturday, the Petes, Ponies and GM-men decided to carry on as they have been doing. They intend to play with the players they have already and not worry about O. B. A. transfers. So the next move is up to the O. B. A. — if that body wants to refuse the C. O. B. L. winner the right to continue into Ontario playdowns in the fall, then this loop will try to arrange a playoff with the independent E. O. B. A. victor. Oshawa will string along with the other clubs. So that's how it stands now — just as it did several weeks ago.

YOUNG PETES pulled out a 6-3 nod in Bowmanville Saturday to keep 'em tied with Cobourg on top of the Lakeshore Junior Baseball League pile. Lefty Condon pitched good ball, but (like a nervous soprano) started off each verse wild and then steadied down nicely. Slemon and Hooper had a turn each on the Rubbermen's rubber. Gee Clark hit a homer and single, as Castle, Stanley and Girard also got two safeties each. Fielding feature for the victorious victors was a runningf catch by McNabb, who catches a lot of pucks in the net during the winter months. Herb Ralph's crew are clicking okay these days i na tight loop, and they hope to knock off the Bowmanville boys again here on Wednesday next when they clash at Riverside at 6.15 or so.

CHURCH SOFTBALL standings, muffed Saturday, should be in elsewhere tonight. If Murray St. Seniors win tonight at the Oval from the Buzzers and create a three-way tie for second place, it'll complicate things and probably keep the playoffs going into July The three teams may draw names for a knockdown tourney or round-robin serial with a score ratio in case of future ties. Anyway, the team captains of Knox, Mark St. and Murray are to meet tonight with the loop officers at 8.30 in the "Y". If Buzzers win this eve, then Knox and Mark St. will play a semi-final joust tomorrow p.m. at the Oval.

WHILE THE Motorists show a lot of pickup nowadays in the City Softball League, the Omemee men stand in need of a pick-me-up — a quaint concoction used extensively back in the arid days when hair tonic sold at a scandalous price. Saturday at the Bowl, some folks saw Motorists take a 6-3 win over the O's to crowd close on the heels of the Westclox leaders, as the Villagers absorbed their fifth reverse in a row. Fleming pitched neat ball and had good support most of the way. Brockley hit a homer for the losers. Reeds was a bit wild in spots but also twirled smart softball and allowed only five hits. Weir gettin gtwo of 'em. Motorists meet Westclox tonight at seven in the Bowl, and it ought to be a very neat number indeed. Clockmen go to Omemee on Wednesday.

That's a Mighty Big Fist

Of course Joe Louis' fists aren't this big in reality, but they must look as big or bigger when they come hurtling at one's jaw. The colored champion is not being handicapped by the recent ruling of the New York boxing commission that allows twice as much gauze and tape to be wrapped around the fighters' fists as was allowed last time Louis and Schmeling met. Louis has brittle hands and many critics claim that in his last fight with Max, the scarcity of bandages slowed him up as his hands became sore during the progress of the bout.

C.G.E. Blanks Deloro 2-0 In Loop Game

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, June 20. — Deloro's goal-getters again failed to draw blood in their second game of the season and first home game played against C.G.E. on Saturday afternoon, and Ben McMaster getting a brace, the Smelters retired beaten by 2-0. It was one of those games in which many chances went abegging and had some of the more experienced players been in their old stride, some tall scoring would have been witnessed.

Deloro kicked off and play commenced to be keen as the visitors forced a corner which, however, proved fruitless. The Electrics pressed for some time until Deloro changed venue of play. Brooks then had hard luck in not scoring at close range. Brown also in receiving from a corner headed the ball just above the cross-bar. With only the goalie to beat, McMaster, receiving the ball in a rush executed by his teammates, shot wide.

Alex. Mitchell, when in a good position, shot just over the crossbar. At the other end, Brown sent in a good shot for Bolton to clear, and a few moments later shot too high in attempting to score. C.G.E. brought off another fast rush, culminating in a neat shot by McMaster, which was just cleared by the home custodian. End to end rushes ensued until the half-time whistle blew, the score being: CG.E. 0, Deloro 0.

Score in Second.

Early in the second half O'Neill proved equal to the occasion as McMaster sent in a fast shot. Brooks tried unsuccessfully at the other end to open the scoring. O'Neill left his goal as Alex. Mitchell sent a pass over to McMaster, and the latter had no difficulty in scoring. Brooks finished a spurt towards the visitors' goal by kicking wide. C.G.E. rushed for Jack Hart to concede a corner, from which Alex. Mitchell almost scored. A penalty was given against Stewart, but Brooks missed with the kick. Both teams rushed in turn. McMaster narrowly missed connecting with a loose ball, and Brown tested Bolton with a fine shot.

During a scramble in the Deloro sector, McMaster got possession and scored. Deloro now put on the pressure for a while, but a series of misfortunes prevented them getting the equalizer. First, Scott kicked high on a transfer from Brown. Then Brooks, racing up the left wing, sent in a stinging shot which hit the upright. Argument ensued a few moments later as to whether the whole sphere entered the goal as Percy Gray pinned Bolton against the upright in following up a shot from Cousins, which Bolton had insufficient time to clear. The referee disallowed the goal, and Bolton received first aid treatment to his hand damaged during the episode. Brooks and Brown in turn again sent the ball too high during further onslaught on the Peterborough citadel. A series of rushes by C.G.E. proved ineffective, and the last thrill of the game came when Brooks, again trying hard, but jinxed if ever he was, hit the cross-bar.

The final score read: C.G.E. 2, Deloro 0.

The game, which may be said to have been evenly fought, was capably handled by Tommy Foster. The teams looked particularly smart in their attractive new jerseys. The teams fielded as follows:

C.G.E.: Goal, Bolton; backs, McKenzie and J. Mitchell; half-backs, Stewart, Buchan and Murduff; forwards, Keith, Earle, McMaster, A. Mitchell and Harris; subs: Goodhue and Smith; linesman, T. McPhate.

Deloro: Goal, O'Neill; backs, Townson and Cousins; half-backs, W. Hart, J. Hart and J. Sproul; forwards, Elliott, Bradley, Brooks, Brown and P. Gray; subs: Simmons, S. Gray and Scott; linesman, J. R. Hart.

Referee: T. Foster, Peterborough.

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

Night after night, as we walk up and down the greens looking at one game and then another, we are surprised to see that the more simple a rule is, the more often it is ignored—and not by the new and inexperienced bowler either.—We have often wondered if it has been worth while for the different committees to spend so much time in trying to make bowling better for us all.

Now take the rule about not measuring bowls till the end is completed—the one about keeping the ditches free from all foreign obstacles—the identifying of a bowl before the last bowl has been played; all these and many more are broken night after night— why not look up the rules and become more acquainted with them? This is not a lecture—it is meant as a suggestion and we leave the thought with all bowlers.

No doubt many of our bowlers will be out of town on Wednesday participating in tournaments in other towns but we will hold another one of those popular men's doubles twilight tournaments on Wednesday evening at 6.30 p.m.—It will be run along the same lines as the last one. The fee is set at $1.00 per pair.

We have received no word when the "rained out" tournament of Friday night will be held.

Just a little tip to all our local bowlers—Keep Friday, July 1st open —Full details later.

The winning rinks up at the mixed on Saturday night were:

First—P. McFadden, W. Ashby, Mrs. L. Bearne, G. Soulby.

Second—Mrs. H. Gramshaw, Mrs. W. Hepburn, R. French, T. McArthur.

Third—Mrs. P. Moore, H. McFadden, C. T. McMillan, J. Cullen.

Babe Ruth Back Old Spotlight With Ball Fans

TORONTO, June 20—(CP).—The old guy and the young are rivals for the attention of baseball's followers to-day.

The old guy, of course, is Babe Ruth, back in harness again as coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers. He took the job Saturday at $15,000 for the rest of the season, appeared on the baselines yesterday, and immediately regained his old spot as the main attraction on the ball field.

The young fellow is Cincinnati's remarkable Johnny Vander Meer, who couldn't make it three no-hitters in a row but came close enough to give Boston Bees a good scare when he let them down with four blows to win, 14-1. The victory put the Reds in second place, a few percentage points ahead of Chicago.

28,000 See First Game.

It was the Babe some 28,000 Brooklyn fans were out to see, but they also saw a couple of good ball games as Glenn Pressnell's flinging and a slugging spurt that must have made the old Yankees clouter feel right at home gave the Dodgers a 6-2 opening triumph over the Chicago Cubs. Clay Bryant stopped the hitting, however, giving only one blow up to the ninth, and the Cubs won the nightcap, 4-3.

Vander Meer, who pitched two consecutive hitless games, finally was touched in the fourth inning yesterday when Debs Garms' singled. He made a new National league record of 21 2-3 consecutive no-hit innings, just short of Cy Young's major league mark of 23 that has stood since 1904. And he went 32 innings before he was scored upon.

Boston lost a chance to win when the second game was rained out in the last half of the fifth.

Pittsburgh Pirates put on a terrific clouting spree to wallop the Phillies, 14-4 and 16-3. Three homers by Johnny Rizzo and two by Paul Waner marked their 34-hit attack.

Take Terrible Beating.

New York Giants took a double beating, 8-7 and 4-2, their second of the season, from St. Louis and had their lead cut to three games. A 12th-inning single by Joe Stripp carried the Cards to an 8-7 opening victory and then won the nightcap, 4-2, behind Roy Henshaw, although Mel Ott hit a homer in each game.

In the American league, Boston Red Sox moved into second ahead of the slipping New York Yankees by splitting a twin bill at Chicago while the Yanks lost one game and tied another at St. Louis. After Gee Walker's homer had given the White Sox a 3-2 victory, Jimmy Foxx and Jim Bagby paced the Red Hose to a 6-1 triumph. The Yanks had 22 men left on base as they want down to the Brown 10-9, then played a 7-7 eight-inning tie, halted by darkness.

The league-leading Cleveland Indians celebrated Connie Mack Day by trimming Connie's Athletics 5-4. Washington's six-run first-inning beat Detroit, 10-6, and returned the Senators to fourth place.

PETES BEAT TORONTO FOR THEIR FOURTH STRAIGHT VICTORY

Locals Defeat Webbers 7-1 In Exhibition

Neat Pitching By Jakafby; Good Hitting Helps Out

The Petes pulled out a 7-1 victory over Toronto Webbers here Saturday in an exhibition senior baseball game before about 600 fans in Riverside Park. It was the fourth straight win for the locals, three of them in league contests. Getting better hurling, fielding and hitting, the homesters dominated play from the start in this struggle. It was a good ball game most of the way, but dragged toward the end owing to the one-sided score.

In all six pitchers were used Saturday, three for each side—and three of the twirlers were southpaws. Joe Jakafby pitched for the first six innings and was in fine form to hold Webbers to one run and three hits while walking none and striking out two. He kept curving the ball and they rarely got it out of the infield. The run gained off Joe was unearned, and he didn't allow a hit for four frames. Lefty Lesurf started for the losers and lasted five innings, getting nicked for five hits and two free bases as he struck out two. He was succeeded by Lefty Kelly and Harris, while Lefty McNally and Eddie Whitehill saw brief service for the Petes.

Leads Hitters

Bill Calladine and Bob Doll—acting manager as Eddie Murphy was in the hospital having his tonsils out—held the hitters with three each, Doll getting a triple. None of the losers got more than one safety. Despite several errors on each side, the fielding was good by both teams most of the tussle. Each squad pulled off a double play to aid their pitchers. Bun Kingdon shone at second for the Petes with some sparkling defence work and Al Clark, though booting a few late in the fray, drew applause with some swell pickups of hot drives. Doll got a nice one going back, as did the Toronto shortstop. The losers' catcher roped in several nice grabs of foul flies and Whatley got a good one for the winners.

The Petes got two runs in the first on a walk, error, out and hits by Calladine and Doll. They added one in the fourth when Deadey walked, took second on a passed ball and scored on a miscue. Two more counted in the sixth on singles by Kingdon, Jakafby and Calladine, with a stolen base thrown in. They finished it up with two out in the seventh on a walk, error, stolen sack, single by Whatley and a fielder's choice. The lone Toronto run came in the fifth when Crawford singled, took second on an error, third on a wild pitch and home on a fielder's choice. They threatened in this heat with the bases loaded and none out but a double-play to the plate cut them down.

'Nice Work There, Jimmy! Have a Drink On Me'

This is another case of combining the usual and the unusual. Crossing the plate is Jimmy Foxx, first baseman for Boston Red Sox, who has just knocked the ball over the fence for a home run and sent two teammates over ahead of him in a game against the Indians. That's something Jimmy's been doing with amazing regularity this season. Running out to greet the Sox socker is a Beantown fan, who figured the least he could do to reward him was offer him a drink . . . which he is doing. The other figures are Umpire Eddie Rommel, former pitcher, who is attempting to restrain the exhuberant fan. Joe Cronin, Boston boss, awaiting his turn at the plate with a couple of bats in his hands, and Frank Pytlak, Cleveland catcher, standing by while the runs come pouring over. Jimmy doesn't seem to have noticed the thirst-quenching offer.

Biddle Outpitches Pollar In Nifty Hurling Exhibition

OSHAWA, June 20. — Oshawa "Gm-men" stepped up ahead of "Kingston Ponies" in the C.O.B.L. race when they turned back the Limestone City squad in a 4-3 photo finish here Saturday.

It was a tidy hurling duel between Ed Pollar and "Jake" Biddle, rival southpaws, with the Oshawa ace having a decided edge in the matter of hits given out. Biddle allowed only five safe blows in the game, three of them in the first inning when the "Ponies" scored two of their runs, and the other two hits in the eighth when the visitors tied the score with their other tally.

Jake Biddle fanned six batters and gave out three walks, everyone of the free passes going to Manager Bob Elliott, who hit a two-bagger in his other trip to the plate. Pollar didn't issue any walks but he was nicked for hits in every inning except two and the grand total came to eleven, seven of them in the last three frames, when he faded obviously.

The game started with a bang. Webber hitting the first ball pitched for a single. Hanford fanned, after fouling twice on attempted sacrifice bunts. Bob Elliott smasked a two-bagger into left field and McQuaide singled for the third hit that frame, scoring Elliott.

Kingston didn't get any more hits until the eighth inning and despite two walks and two errors, didn't get a runner to second base even until the eighth frame when Webber again started it off with a single through short. Hanford sacrificed. Elliott was purposely passed but McQuaide singled into right field, scoring Webber who beat out the throw to the plate, Elliott pulling up at third and McQuaide going to second. MacIntyre made a bid for a single but Dalton scooped up the ball and threw in to the plate, whene Bennett made no mistake in tagging Elliott. Corkery grounded out to end the inning.

The GM-men got their runs via the one-at-a-time method. The first tally came in the first inning. Hurst singled, Dalton sacrificed, Foley was out on a fielder's choice but Rowden hit a two-bagger, scoring Hurst. After Kingston had tied the game in the eighth Oshawa came back in their half to win the decision. Rowden singled, MacIntyre making a brilliant back hand stop to prevent extra bases, Bennett singled through the infield. McGarry grounded out. The Ponies held a consultation and decided to pitch to Jubenville who promptly hit the first ball pitched for his first safety of the day, scoring Rowden with the winning run.

NEW YORK, June 20—(AP)—One story is that Boily Grimes has one month to land a new job before the Babe takes over the Dodgers' managership . . . Seems about every club but the 10th Avenue Alley Cats had a chance to land Johnny Vander Meer . . . Bill Terry was practically begged to invest $2,500 in the kid back in '35 . . . The Dodgers fumbled their chance . . . The Red Sox wouldn't kick in 25 G's . . . but the payoff is the Bees had to get him from Scranton to realize something on a $2,500 investment . . . and then shipped him to Nashville without so much as a look—and, reports Chick Feldman of the Scranton Tribune, the guy who "exiled" him was Willy Will McKechnie, who's now his boss at Cincinnati.

Leafs Divide Double Bill With Chiefs

TORONTO, June 20 (C.P.). — With a little more than one-third of the International League season completed, it look more than ever as if Buffalo Bisons were the only club with a chance to come anywhere near Newark Bears in the standing. And near, as Newark's rivals see it, is about where the second horse is when War Admiral is racing.

A couple of weeks ago the Bisons knocked off Newark three games in a row and were quite cocky about the whole thing. Since then the Bears have piled up 11 straight triumphs, while Buffalo has won seven and lost four.

They both won double-headers yesterday, which left the Bears just eight games in front. Newark teed off on Montreal Royals, who had been doing fairly well of late, and won 6-3 and 10-5. They had to come from behind to take the opener with the aid of sme fine relief flinging by Marius Russo. But in the nightcap Bob Seeds socked his 27th homer with the bases loaded, and there wasn't much more to it. In all Seeds drove in eight runs to bring his total to 92.

The Bisons had more trouble whipping Baltimore Orioles, 10-5 and 5-4. They scored five runs in the ninth to take the first game and went an extra inning in the second before Woodley Abernathy, former Baltimore outfielder, won it with a home run.

Rochester Red Wings also won a double-header, beating Jersey City 4-3 and 3-1, to move into third place a half game ahead of the Little Giants. Toronto Maple Leafs and Syracuse Chiefs divided the other twin bill, the Chiefs winning the first in a mound duel between Johnny Gee and Joe Sullivan and Toronto taking the nightcap on Heinie Manush's three-run homer.

The first of 136 monster German engines ordered for the government railways of South Africa has just been put in operation.

Canada Faces Serious Shortage Of Clover And Grass Seeds

CALCUTTA, June 16.— (CP) — a serious shortage of clover and grass seeds for Spring sowing which will necessitate importation of seeds, the Department of Agriculture disclosed. High prices are to rule and imports have already started to come in.

Extensive Winter killing cut down Canada's seed production far below normal this year and tion and the normal domestic requirements.

Preliminary estimates of the production this year have been compiled by the Department of Agriculture. They show shortages of red clover, alsike and timothy. The quantity of sweet clover seed on hand is just a little short of requirements and there is a surplus of alfalfa.

Production of red clover seed is estimated at 917,000 pounds compared with 1,910,000 in 1936 and 4,500,000 in 1935. Last year's carryover is placed at 467,000 pounds, making a total of 1,387,000 pounds available to meet domestic requirements of 4,000,000 pounds.

The alsike shortage is less serious. The crop yielded approximately 365,000 pounds, compared with 5,250,000 in 1936 and 950,000 in 1935. The carryover of 820,500 pounds provides a supply of 1,185,500 pounds which will go a long way towards meeting domestics requirements estimated at 1,500,000 pounds.

Timothy, one of the most important fodder grasses, shows a prospective shortage of nearly 2,000,000 pounds. The yield is placed at 4,673,250 pounds compared with 6,150,000 in 1936 and 12,000,000 in 1935. Carryover is estimated at 3,647,000 pounds, making a total of 8,320,250 pounds for requirements estimated at 10,000,000 pounds.

Sweet Clover Yield

Production of sweet clover seed is estimated at 2,745,800 pounds compared with 3,100,000 in 1936 and 3,500,000 in 1935. The carryover of 305,000 pounds brings to supply up to 3,050,800 pounds to meet an estimated prospective consumption of 3,500,000 pounds.

Alfalfa yielded well this year compared with the past few years and a surplus of more than 1,000,000 pound is anticipated. Production amounted to 3,354,675 pounds against 2,575,000 in 1936 and 1,100,000 in 1935. The carryover is placed at 31,325 pounds, which gives a supply of 3,386,000 pounds in the face of estimated requirements of 2,000,000 pounds.

Housing Loans Are Made Here

As one of the authorized lending agencies under the Dominion Housing Act, the London Life Insurance Company has not been neglecting Peterborough, G. F. England, representative of the company, asserted at a week-end meeting of members of the council, Board of Trade and others.

"There has been no lack of service on our part in this city," Mr. England said, "there is only a lack of applications. We want Dominion Housing Act loans to be made in Peterborough, but there must be reasonable soundness behind them.

Reasonable soundness comprehended some assurance of the borrower's ability to meet the obligation he was undertaking in building a house under the Dominion government's legislation.

There was no particular outcome to the meeting, but it met the criticism of an article in the Examiner a few days ago suggesting that communities closer to the head office of the London Life received more consideration than did Peterborough. Mr. England strongly denied that impression, and said that loans will be made to those citizens who satisfy the ordinary terms on which they are granted anywhere.

Farmers To Hold Guelph Excursion

Here's treason for you, or something akin to it. Of course, it isn't against the general welfare of the state, and it hasn't gone beyond the sedition stage of expression, but it sounds subversive of the interests of agriculture, and is herewith brought to the attention of the U.F.O.

Haying time has arrived in the country, and already some of the farmers have had their mowers and rakes at work. And if there is one condition of the weather more than another that holds up this haying business it is rain. And that's where the treasonable utterance comes in. Earl Tully, president of the county U.F.O., frankly told the Examiner today that he was hoping for plenty of rain for Tuesday.

"If we get a good shower of rain Tuesday, preferably at night, there won't be much chance of getting into the hay fields on Wednesday, and that should assure us of the big crowd we expect for our excursion to the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph," Mr. Tully said, and if that isnt treason to the farm industry, what is it?

"Would you believe that the last farmers' excursion from Peterborough was away back before the war," he continued. "G. A. Gillespie was telling me it was about 1910 or '11, and in those days farm excursions were almost annual affairs. We've got accomodation for seven hundred, and we expect to have an interesting day at the college. Some farmers may be more concerned about getting in the hay, but the trip will do them good. So, you can put it down that this is one time when rain will be doing them a good turn by holding up work on the farm for Wednesday.

The county council is meeting a day earlier, Monday afternoon, and we understand most of the members are coming along with us. Some of the teachers are bringing the children of their schools. The youngsters come for half fare. There will be time on the way back for a stop over in Toronto."

Garages Will Conduct Safety Week

Through the efforts of the Peterborough Branch of the Garage Operator's Association of Ontario, the motoring public of Peterborough, Campbellford, and surrounding districts, will be given an opportunity to have their cars checked in every detail as regards safety, during the week of July 4th. to 9th.

The Safety Lane will be set up in Campbellford on Monday, July 4th. and 5th. and will render to the people of that town and district this service which will mean much to the general safety of the public as well as the motorists and will without doubt reduce the number of accidents which from week to week.

Commencing July 6th, and continuing for the rest of the week, this service will be offered to the motorists of Peterborough and district. The Garage Operators of Peterborough have gone to considerable trouble and expense to secure and operate this Safety Lane. The City Council and Chief of Police Newhall have promised to co-operate in every way with the Association in its endeavour to promote safety on the streets of Peterborough, and to eliminate as many accidents in 1938 as possible.

Safety Lane.

The Safety Lane will be set up on a portion of some street, not yet decided upon, but which will be agreed to between Officers of the Association, Alderman Wilson, Chairman of the Board of Works, R. H. Parsons, City Engineer, and Chief of Police S. Newhall, and will be operated from 9:00 A.M. to 9:00 P.M. on the above dates.

The following points on each automobile will be checked: Brakes, (Service and Emergency), Lights (alignment, focuse, bulbs, tail light, and stop light), Steering (front wheel alignment, wheel play and rear wheel alignment), Miscellaneous (horns, tires, wiper, windshield, and mirror.) It will take approximately five minutes to give each the above check, and all cars passing this inspection will be supplied FREE OF CHARGE with a Public Safety sticker recognized throughout the Province by Municipal and Provincial Police. Any owner whose cars requires some minor adjustment, will have the privilege of returning to the Lane after he has had it made and then receive his sticker.

Co-operation of Motorists.

It is the sincere desire of Mayor Hamilton, and the City Officials, Chief Newhall and his Police Force, and the Officers of the Garage Operator's Association that the motorists of this City and district cooperate and keep the Lane running at full speed for the four days which it will be here, and thus cut down the serious toll of accidents.

Wireless Club Formed Here

After considerable effort a group of young Peterborough radio enthusiasts have succeeded in organizing a club to be known as the Peterborough Wireless Association, and others interested are to be given an opportunity to join, a campaign being planned for September.

Those who wish to join, either now or in September are invited to write or call upon Roland Halcrow, 629 George street for particulars. Application forms have been drawn up and rules and regulations adopted.

The officers of the new organization are: President, Stroyan Leith, Jr., 563 Gilmour street; vice president, G. R. Schwab, 369 Mark street, secretary; John Todd, 27 Brown street; treasurer, Kenneth King, 403 Water street; acting director, Roland Halcrow, 629 George street.

When the association is completely organized it is proposed to begin by teaching members the art of copying Morse code, and the construction of receivers an dtransmitter, the fees of the members to be used for buying parts and accessories.

It is planned that each member will eventually be given a receiver. The organization is not a money-making affair and the officers are undertaking the work for the betterment of amateur radio work in Peterborough.

After all the members have passed their examinations and have received their certificates of proficiency in amateur radio and their government licenses the association will present them with a low-power transmitter.

The Peterborough Wireless Association will be affiliated with the Radio Signal Survey League, New York City and the American Radio Relay League, West Hartford, Conn. D-X contests during the year are being planned as one of the activities of the Association.

New Vegetables Are Plentiful

Expanding summer was reflected on the market Saturday in a larger supply of new vegetables. Asparagus at five cents a bunch seemed to be passing the peak of its season. Several of the gardeners were offering new beets, and promised locally grown carrots for next Saturday. Quart sized boxes of strawberries sold at fifteen cents, onions and lettuce were three bunches for ten cents. Bert Arnott had a fine display of produce, probably featuring spinach at twenty cents a peck. Old potatoes were unchanged at from 70 to 90 cents. For the first time this season the boxes of plants and vegetables for setting out were ten cents. Larger sized flats of young tomatoes were quoted at 25 cents for a box of thirty.

The green house goods will continue to occupy a place on the market for a few more weeks, but the planting season is just about ended, or should be. Tomatoes, cabbage and celery are in the ground in most city gardens, and the flower beds and boxes have been filled for summer blooming.

Eggs were steady at 23 to 25 cents, butter at 25 to 28 cents and chickens were quoted at 20 to 22 cents.

Militia Parades Annual Service At St. John's

"In the conflict between citizenship and despotism, we stand, thank God, for citizenship and wherever our flag is, there is citizenship and not despotism," declared Hon. Captain Rev. R. T. F. Brain, assistant at St. John's and chaplain of the Prince of Wales Rangers, Sunday morning, as he addressed the officers and men of the regiment in the historic old church on the occasion of the annual church parade.

Rev. Mr. Brain's message contrasted the countries in which the state was the dominating master to those in which the state was the servant of man and emphasized the responsibility of his hearers in guarding democracy, even with their lives, if necessary.

The Rangers in command of Lieut. Col. J. A Dewart M. C. and with Honorary Colonel H. A. Morrow also on parade, made a smart showing as they marched to church via George, Charlotte, Water and Hunter Streets, headed by the band resplendent in its new scarlet tunics. The officers and men occupied pews reserved for them in the centre of the church. Col Dewart and Capt. Gordon Armstrong adjutant of the regiment took part in the service by reading the lessons.

Before the sermon Rev. Mr. Brain expressed regret that the illness of the rector of St. Luke's had required Rev. Canon Robertson to take the service at that church so that the rector of St. John's could not be present with the Rangers.

Going back to the days of Montezuma for a picure with which to compare the situation in Germany Rev. Mr. Brain said that the conditions in that country were the logical consequence of forcing all attention on man. The world, he said, was being given a frightening warning, written large in Germany, in Italy, in Russia, and in Spain, the warning that if man worshipped himself and made himself the end of life, he would wind up by finding himself the servant of the state and of its leaders.

Democracy Threatened.

"Democracy is today threatened in the realm of thought and of action said the speaker." "Under despotism there is no liberty whatsoever, nothing but the negation of what democracy stands for."

On the other hand, Mr. Brain said, as he urged the guarding of democracy, the basis of the democratic state was the ideal of public law and civil rights. Man had his rights even as against the state, and democracy really meant aristocracy for all.

"We must be on our guard against poisonous notions propogated in our midst from despotic nations" said the speaker. "That is your job and my job."

The problem of democracy was the problem of leadership, spiritual leadership. It was necessary that honest men should be fitted into the key positions of power, rather than government should be in the hands of men not only ignorant of the past and its traditions but not understanding what they were destroying.

"With all the force at our command," said Rev. Mr. Brain, "we must take our stand on the side of the Christian tradition and its by-product, democracy. We need more than idealism based on personal wishes; we need a recognition of the moral law, and must recognize that the moral law transcends politics and economics.

If we are going to be successful concluded the speaker, "it is necessary for us to have a religious view of life."

Stanley Beebe Is Given Freedom

Stanley Beebe who pleaded guilty a week previously to attempting to break and enter the Davis service station at the corner of Dublin and Reid streets, appeared before Magistrate E. A. Gee in police court Saturday morning and was allowed to go on suspended sentence on condition that he remain away from his old associates and consented to be placed on the black list.

In the week since he was first arraigned the accused had been bereaved by the death of a baby and that in conjunction with the fact that Rev. M. C. Parr, pastor of George St. United Church, made an earnest plea for him in court, promising to interest himself in the accused's case, was a factor in the leniency accorded him by the magistrate.

RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Bill Baron, a footloose Texan, has just been rescued from a band of Yaqui Indians, holding him for ransom, through a bold move on the part of Ellen Dale, Hollywood screen star. Ellen and Bill had been staying at the wealthy Montoya ranch across the Mexican border where they found themselves after a lucky parachute jump from Baron's plane during a storm. Ellen, enchanted by the atmosphere of old Mexico, finds herself growing much interested in Bill. Also rescued with Bill was Panola Montoya, the ranch owner's daughter whose invitation to ride with her led to their capture by the Yaqui. As they return to the ranch, Bill and Ellen find Don Julio, their host, and his son, Felix, with a large following of Mexicans, in hot pursuit of the Yaqui. Ellen begs them to desist. Bill drives Ellen to Nogales after they say goodby to the Montoyas, both promising to return later for a fiesta. Suddenly Ellen decides not to return to Hollywood and telephones Sid Bromberg, her producer who is in love with her, not to come to Nogales for her. She and Bill dine at a romantic spot and Ellen finds herself serenly happy. Ellen tells him she has decided to buy a ranch in Arizona, to settle there and forsake her screen career. She asks Bill to manage the ranch.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAUPTER 18

SLEEP is a marvelous thing. It is second only to food. It is a miracle worker sometimes, and always a mind freshener. The deep thinking we did last evening and the profound conclusions we reached at midnight, nearly always seem a trifle shallow when the next breakfast is done.

Bill was up early and berating himself. He walked from the hotel half way up the rocky mountain against which the hotel snuggled, came back and devoured eight pancakes with syrup and told himself he was a fool. Just outside the dining room door again he came face to face with Ellen.

There, staring rather foolishly, Bill Baron felt blood swelling around his ears, then promptly blushed doubly because of that. He hadn't been so lacking in nonchalance in 10 years, and he wasn't any sheltered shy person either. It angered him momentarily that a little woman no bigger than a minute should so get his goat.

"Good morning!" Ellen greeted, and if ever a voice was pure music, hers was.

She stood there a vision of sweetness, waiting not dutifully or impatiently, but expectantly. She wasn't sure what she was expecting, but—"Well, here I am," she added. "Did you sleep well?"

Ellen's cheeks were plump anyway. Her face and lips had none of the half-simpering, half-modernistic, pseudo-smartness seen in current magazine illustrations and on the snootier shop window dummies. Ellen Dale was a girl from an apple orchard in springtime. A girl in a swing with birds nesting in the oak tree that bore the ropes. A bare-armed girl in a daisy field. A girl on a rock looking at her reflection in a lily pool. Sophistication? She could act it a little—when she had to in the musical movies that had brought her fame. But she showed none of it this morning, and she wasn't acting at all. Mr. William Daniel Baron stared at her for long seconds, and swallowed hard.

"Glo-ry!" he muttered, finally, regaining some of his self-control, but still admiring her.

"I'm sure you must have seen me before, Bill," she suggested, restraining her smile.

He smiled back. "Yes, thanks. Did you?" He was answering her question of greeting, but so many seconds ago that she had almost forgotten it.

"You told me last night that you were going to make love to me. Can you begin now, Bill?"

If the poor Texan had been bewildered and bewitched a moment ago, he was even more so now. That is, not along specific orderly lines. But Ellen stood with her hands primly folded, waiting, as if she expected his wooing to start with a definite physical form, like doing a dance or singing a solo.

"Come on up to the mezzanine!" he ordered, huskily, taking her arm.

"I have had no breakfast," she reminded him.

"I hope you starve! You are inherently mean, Ellen Dale!"

She laughed long and happily then. Bill went back and ordered a waiter to bring them coffee and fruit juice to the mezzanine floor, which he saw was unoccupied this early. They walked up iron stairs and sat at a writing desk, where an archway looked down on the main lobby.

Bill sighed heavily, and earnestly, before he said anything more to her.

"I wasn't joking when I called you last night on the phone."

Ellen instantly turned serious too. "I didn't think you were, Bill. And thank you. It is a great compliment to a girl, to be told that a man wants to make love to her."

"Um." Bill was giving minute inspection to a piece of the hotel stationery, as if it were something of tremendous importance. He turned it, studied the picture etched on the sheet.

"Ellen, as I say, I wasn't joking. But I've got to have time."

"Yes, Bill."

"You understand, don't you?"

"Yes, Bill," she replied, untruthfully.

"It may take a long time. I don't know what I will do yet."

She waited. Bill stole a quick glance at her. The muted desk lamp illuminated her just right. He wanted to kiss her, to hold her and kiss her many times. He stirred in his chair and told himself "Damn!"

"It's not fair, really," he went on. "So I'm not asking for any promises or anything like that. I'll come to Hollywood. Or stay in Arizona, or wherever you are. I won't make a nuisance of myself. In fact I won't even hang around much. I'll go away. I'll get something soon if it kills me, Ellen. I've got some ideas. If you could write maybe once in a while, or something, it would help."

"Is this a riddle, Bill? Do you mind starting over? You haven't said anything I can understand yet. I thought you brought me here to start making love to me?"

He didn't hear her.

As a matter of fact, he was deep in his own thoughts. At midnight he had decided definitely to resign his job with her and set out to make love. Before breakfast he knew that decision to be stupid, because he needed a job badly and realized that she must have a town full of admirers back in California anyway.

But here he was reversing again—in her presence, he was again telling her he would refuse the job. And he didn't have more than $100 to his name.

Well, that the course he wanted, and by glory he'd take it! He looked across the desk. No more utterly beautiful girl had ever been created, he'd swear. To heck with her job. He wanted her.

"What I mean, Ellen, is that I have no money, and I'm going out to earn some, so I can talk with you and play with you in your own sphere. I mean—well, glory, I'm out of college, and loafing around too long, and dad's been trying to get me to settle down. I'll do it. I can do it in Texas somewhere, where I'm known. I'll make money, then I can come back to see you if it isn't too late. Don't you understand?"

"No, I don't." She was emphatic. "Since when has a man needed money to make love? I'm an idealist, Bill Baron. I believe in the story books I read when I was growing up. I mean—I still do! Don't you see? I have considerable money, Bill. It hasn't brought me any more happiness. Why should it come between us?"

"It would, though. It wouldn't matter if it were reversed—I mean, if I had the money and you were broke. But everybody'd say I was a fortune hunter."

"So! You gauge your actions by what people say?"

"Naw-w-w, now!" He slipped into a Texas-ism, drawling it powerfully.

You couldn't argue with a woman. Especially a pretty woman, especially one you are crazy about. And especially when you yourself aren't quite sure of what you are arguing.

William Baron was discovering—as countless other men have done—that the American vocabulary is inadequate to express one's emotions, and he realized that all the words in Europe and Asia wouldn't help either. The strangely confused yearnings of love, pride, sacrifice, combat, gentleness, anger, all had their grip on him. He would have been more at ease at, say, fighting a village of Yaqui Indians.

He was thus giving what best efforts he could toward trying to clear his mind when Ellen abruptly cleared it for him.

"Bill," she began, in deadly earnest. "You made a contract with me yesterday, to work for me as my foreman. You'll live up to your contract—or I'll have nothing to do with you, and you'll never see me again!"

A College Background for Poise and Charm

What a contrast between Dot and Janet! Dot's tongue-tied in a college crowd.

She hasn't a word to add to the exciting discussion that Janet's having with college-bred Jack about the historical backgrounds of movies like "Zola" and "Victoria Regina." And when their talk switches to science, her plight is even worse. She thinks that Mme. Currie, co-discoverer of radium, was a French Revolutionary heroine.

Janet and Dot quit school at the same time. But Janet followed a fascinating cultural plan which showed her how to educate herself through books, radio, movies, newspapers.

Now her wide interests make her popular in any group. She's at ease with artistic people because she knows why the colors in van Gogh's paintings are so famous; why "I wandered lonely as a cloud" is an immortal line of poetry.

Build your own college background by following the absorbing plan in our 32-page booklet. Book lists recommended by the Committee on College Reading.

Away From Her Family and With No Children Clinging to Her Skirts Mother Will Have a Real Chance to Readjust Herself to the Worries of Home

THE one person who most needs a vacation and seldomest gets one is Mother. Every one recognizes that the Tired Business Man needs a break in his routine and to have rest and recreation now and then if he is to continue hitting on all sixteen cylinders, and that the children need change of air and new interests to keep them strong and healthy.

But nobody thinks that Mother needs any change of climate or any divertisement. She is believed to be so wedded to her home that it would be sheer cruelty to take her out of it for even a fortnight. Everybody takes it for granted that she gets all the fun she craves out of preparing three meals a day for her family, and pushing the perambulator when she goes to the cut-rate butcher shop hunting for cheap cuts of meat.

Even when Mother does get a so-called vacation it takes a queer and ironic form that makes it more of a penance than a pleasure. For generally it consists in taking her out of a town that has at least modern conveniences in it and dumping her down into a camp or on a farm where there isn't even running water or electric lights, and where the children add stone bruises, sunburn and mosquito bites to their repertoire of ailments.

Nevertheless, Mother is thought to be so peculiarly constituted that she gets a holiday out of running a house that is ten miles from the nearest grocery and delicatessen, and in slaving over a hot stove cooking for the horde of visitors who descend upon every one who has a place in the country and who can be held up for food and drink for man and beast.

It is no wonder that Mother comes home from her vacation a physical wreck and that it takes her half the Winter to recover from it and get back to normal. Nor is it strange that Mother doesn't insist on her right to a vacation. She has tried it once and that was enough. But, for all of that, Mother does need a vacation, not only for her own good, but also for the good of her husband and children. Nothing would do more to promote domestic felicity than for every wife and mother to be separated from her husband and children and home for at least two weeks every year and given a real, genuine, bonafide vacation that would be a good time instead of a pain in the neck.

For one thing, it would stop the eternal family spats that are at the bottom of half of the divorces. The reason Mother is cross, irritable and ready to fight at the drop of a hat is because she is overworked, tired and bored with the monotony of doing the same tasks over, day after day. She is fed up with looking at Papa and hearing him grouch about the depression. She could scream every time she hears the never-ending cry of M-o-t-h-e-r. So she takes out her nerves and her general disgruntlement with life in snapping at her husband, slapping the children and sending them supperless to bed.

But give Mother a vacation away from her family, with no children, clinging to her skirts, with no baby keeping her awake at night, with no little boys to be saved from committing suicide half a dozen times a day. Let her go where she wants to. Do what she pleases. Have breakfast in bed. Be waited on instead of waiting on others. And she will come back home a made-over woman, thinking her home the most desirable place on earth, seeing her husband as the Prince Charming she married, and the children as angels instead of brats. And what a break that is for the family.

Moreover, nothing helps a woman consider her personal apperance and her housekeeping like a vacation does. Maybe she had got so she just took her husband and her home for granted and didn't think it worth while to make any effort to make herself attractive, or keep a good table. Maybe she had let herself slump and get fat and kept her family on a roast-and-potatoes diet because it was too much trouble to think up something different.

But let her get out and see other women who have kept their figures. Let her eat new dishes and see attractive ways of serving food. And she will come home filled with enthusiasm, fresh ideas and determined to be a Lady Love instead of just Ma, and a chef instead of a poor cook.

Don't say it is impossible for Mother to have a vacation; that she can't be off and leave the house and the children. She can. There are trained baby nurses to be hired, or Grandma or Aunt Susan or cousin Sally will always be glad to pinch-hit for her for a slight consideration. And, no matter what it costs, it is worth it.

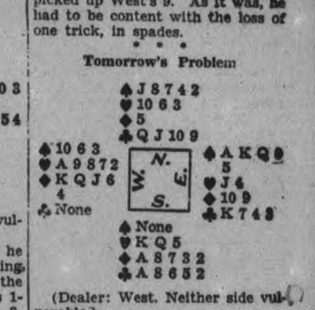
"The Authority on Authorities"

SHORTENING THE FOE POSSESSION of a few cards in your partner's suit can be of great value, even if that suit does not become the trump. They afford opportunities to make leads to finesses, for one thing. But an even more important consideration is the fact that your holding them helps warrant the expectation of the suit setting up favorably. When you have greater length, your cards shorten the string held by the enemy, so they will run out of the suit in time for your purposes.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

To North's amazement when he picked up his hand, the opening bid was made by his partner in the South position. South's bid was 1-Spade and North's response 3-Clubs. After 3-Spades by South, North jumped to 5-Clubs. Two-No Trump was South's bid, 6-Spades by North and 7-No Trump by South. East doubled this.

West decided on the diamond J for his opening lead, which South won with the A. The play of the hand seemed extremely simple to declarer with seven tricks in clubs and two in each of the other suits. He led the club 10 to the A and when East played the J, declarer realized how important one more small club in his own hand would have been. With that he could have finessed the next round and picked up West's 9. As it was, he had to be content with the loss of one trick, in spades.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

JUST THEN the train came puffing around the curve. The bell rang, the whisle tooted. All the creatures waiting in the station started shouting with joy. The Mouse family—Papa Mouse, Mother Mouse and the four mice children—squeaked: "We're going to the country! We're going to visit our country cousins!" They visit them every year, you know.

The other creatures, the caterpillars, butterflies, moths and the canary and bullfinch were equally joyful.

But Knarf and Hanid, the shadow children with the turned-about names, who had come to the station to see members of the Mouse family off, kept looking at the train and wondering.

"What are you wondering about?" Papa Mouse finally said. "Don't you think we're really going to the country?"

The train came around the curve.

"Oh yes," Hanid answered. "Only that train doesn't look as if it's going to stop," Knarf put in. "Its not even slowing down."

Not Real Station.

Mother Mouse looked at the train for an instant. "But it has to stop," she said. "This is a station, isn't it?"

"It's not a regular station," Knarf said. "Its just an empty rain barrel turned over on its side."

Dear me! It didn't stop at all. It went right on. In a few minutes it was out of sight.

For a moment none of them said anything. At length Papa Mouse said: "Well, Mother! I guess we can't go to the country this year by train."

"We can walk!" Mother Mouse said.

"Yes, yes—let's walk!" cried the four mice children. Then all the other disappointed passengers cried: "Yes, let's walk!" And that's what they did. They walked to the country. And if they aren't there by this time, I'm sure they're walking still.

Do You Suffer From Headaches?

Headache is a source of great suffering and often leads to serious derangements of health.

Headache is nearly always symptomatic of some diseased condition, rather than a disease itself, but in most cases comes from a disordered stomach, or poor circulation of the blood, and the cause must be removed before relief can be had.

Burdock Blood Bitters helps remove the cause of headache by acting on different organs of the body to regulate, strengthen and purify the system.

MRS. ARTHUR J. WILLIAMS, Lac Ste. Anne, Alta., writes:—"I suffered for years with dizzy headaches, and sometimes they were so bad I could not get any sleep.

My neighbour told me about Burdock Blood Bitters, and after taking several bottles my headaches had disappeared.

My husband was troubled with pimples on his face, causing him great discomfort when shaving, but after he had taken two bottles of B.B.B. he got rid of the pimples."

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, June 21.

A day of conflicting conditions may be expected, judging by the lunar as well as mutual aspects. Besides being a period of impetuosity, passion and self-indulgence, with recklessness and violence actuating the actions, there may also be disputes and arguments with superiors and those in intimate contacts. Disturbed friendly relations may lead to financial loss or entanglements, although all may come out amicably and profitably in the long run.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of contradictory situations, with some benefits, gains and pleasant relations, although these may be followed by strife and possibly violence. Impetuosity and want of restraint may precipitate regrettable situations, later to be adjusted on friendly understandings. Placate superiors and intimate associates.

A child born on this day may have a reckless, hasty and passionate nature, with a tendency to quarrels and fiery behavior, although it may really be generous, kindly and good-natured. It should be taught proper regard for superiors and those in authority.

Millbrook Honors Newly Wed Couple

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, June 20.—A well-attended community gathering was held in the Town Hall on Friday evening, in honor of a recently-married couple, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Reid, of Newtonville.

Previous to her marriage, Mrs. Reid was Gladys Illean Widdis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Widdis, of Millbrook, and a popular member of the younger set in the village and countryside.

The highlight of the evening was the presentation to the guests of honor, who had been called to the platform, of a handsomely-upholstered studio couch, with walnut end table, the appreciative address being read by Ernest Powell, and the gifts being offered by Messrs. R. A. Ford, Clifford Larmer and Earl Armstrong.

Taken completely by surprise, the groom expressed the gratitude of his wife and himself in a brief speech, and after the singing of "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows," dancing and the service of a dainty lunch completed a most enjoyable occasion. Music for the dancing was supplied by the Todd Family orchestra, and William Edworthy, while Messrs. Godfrey and Worr took turns in "calling off," for the square dances.

SELISHNESS

"How often in this cold and bitter world, is the warm heart thrown back upon itself? Cold, careless, are we of another's grief; we wrap ourselves in sullen selfishness."

SOWERS

"You reap what you sow — not something else, but that. An act of love makes the soul more loving. A deed of humbleness deepens humility. The thing reaped is the very thing sown, multiplied a hundred fold. You have sown a seed of life, you reap everlasting."
—F. W. Robertson.

Dear Friends:

Here are two quotations which contradict one another. One tells us we reap what we sow, the other tells us how often our warm heart is thrown back on itself. I am inclined to agree with the first one, but there is a lot of truth in the second one also.

The whole trouble with us is, we expect so often to reap where we have sown, and it doesn't always happen. We forget that things go in cycles or circles. Maybe the good we have done has to go the whole round of the circle before we reap what we have sown.

And that is why our heart is thrown back on us so often. We often give to the wrong person, we invest them with virtues they never possessed, then when they throw our love back in our face, we are inclined to eat our heart out.

Now, your heart was never meant to be eaten. It has plenty of hard work to do, so when you let sorrow or neglect nibble at it, it cannot do its work right. Have your cry out, face the thing fairly and squarely, and maybe you will find that you sowed in the wrong place the soil was not fitted for the rich seeds you planted there.

Once you realize that, you will be more careful where you plant the next time. What is the use of giving an act of love to one who will just throw it back in your face. What is the use of humility to one who is arrogant enough without your catering to their vanity?

White Flannel

Fine white flannel has a classic charm for summer.

This tailored summer wool sports frock shows its attractiveness.

It has navy blue contrast notes in the slide fastener down the front, the chiffon tuck-in scarf, and the navy and white leather belt.

White French flannel beret and navy and white oxfords complete this satisfactory sports frock.

Youngest Roosevelt and Bride

John Roosevelt, youngest son of President Roosevelt, seems to be getting a great kick out of questions asked by the ladies of the press as they attempted to get a preview on what his bride was going to wear at their wedding. The younger Roosevelt married Anne Lindsay Clark on June 18.

Never at any time are we taught how to choose friends, how to control our emotional life. We give our love to one unworthy, then grieve because they use it meanly. We give more time to the choice of a hat or coat, than we give to the choice of a friend.

I am a very grateful person, I always think more of what people do for me than of what I do for them, so due to that I have had my heart thrown back on me many times in my life. But now I am learning to equalize things more, so I do not get hurt so often.

But I wish I had learned it sooner, for then I would have been saved a deal of pain. Now, please believe I am not pushing any form of religion at you, but the One whom I learned to depend on, the One who did not shove my gratitude back in my face, the One who has been the greatest comfort to me is God. I've never seen Him any more than you have, but I have felt the comfort of His presence, and seen the answer to my prayers.

So, when you read something like "you reap what you sow" don't let it get you down too much. Many's the one sows love and gets taken in, many's the one who does a good deed and reaps inigratitude. Why, if we were to take that literally, it could be assumed that our Lord reaped that painful cruel death meted out to Him.

And just as He was deserted at the cross, unless for the women who were there, so are we often deserted by others. Just as His kindnesses were forgotten, so are ours. Just as He got ingratitude and His heart thrown back on Him, so do we. We are not alone.

All we can do is not to grieve too much or too long. After all, what we have done in love will come back to us through another channel, and by another route. It will not be wasted.

The trees do not pine because they are striped in Autumn, but in the Spring they put on new leaves. Let us too put on the leaves of faith in One who will not not let us eat our heart out if we look to Him.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

Piano Pupils Give Fine Recital

A very fine piano recital was given Friday evening at the Y.M.C.A. by the pupils of E. Isobel Brain, assisted by Ruth McNeely, vocal pupil of Mrs. Ross Williamson.

The young artists displayed an excellent technique in their numbers, which were played entirely from memory. Miss McNeely, the assisting artist, who sang Arthur Somervell's "Shepherd's Cradle Song" and Brewer's "Fairy Ahoy", is the possessor of a very pleasing voice. Miss Elsie Chambers was the accompanist.

Following is the program: Anitra's Dance (Grieg) Mary and Jean Lillow; Away We Go (Huerter) Joyce Wyatt; The Sparrow (Folk song arr. by Kammerer) Arthur Dobson; Minuet in F (Mozart) Douglas Dobson; Two Little Froggies (Cramm) Jean Cranfield; Allegretto from Sonata in B Flat (Mozart) Raymond Sutcliffe; (a) Bourree in F (Bach), (b) Sweet Dreams (Tschaikowsky) Sheldon Richardson; (a) Cherry Ripe, Charles Edward Horn, 1786-1849; (b) Shepherd's Cradle Song (Arthur Somervell) Ruth McNeely; Minuet in G (Bach) Marian Pammett; Allegro in Sonato in G (Kohler) Jack Brown; Bright As A Button (Cloy) Helen and Agnes Weddell; (a) A Music Box (Bainbridge), (b) Jolly Roger (Eckstein) Jean McIntyre; (a) Gavotte (Bach), (b) Grandfather Dances (Karganoff) Billy Allen; Holiday at the Beach (Bilbro Nancy Sootheran; Dance on the Green (Kullak) Elinor Shirley; Rondo (Kullau) Joan Brown; (a) It Was a Lover and His Lass (Thomas Morley arr. by Healey Willan, (b) Fairy Ahoy (A. McCULLOUGH—LITTLE.—In loving memory of James McCullough and Merton Little, who passed away one year ago.

Ivanhoe Woman Is Re-elected Institute Head

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MADOC, June 20.—The North Hastings district annual convention was held at Rylestone on Friday, with lovely weather, and an excellent attendance of about one hundred and fifty from the nine branches of the district: Cashel, Madoc, Bannockburn and Eldorado, Cooper and Remington, Marmora, Ivanhoe, Wellman's, Springbrook, and Ryleston.

Splendid attention was given from first to last of the convention which, with Mrs. J. C. Sills, of Ivanhoe, district president, in the chair, and Mrs. Kenneth Bateman as secretary-treasurer. Following community singing, the president's address showed a visit to most of the branches and excellent co-operation given in all branches of the Institute work.

The district financial report and that of the branches were given by Mrs. Bateman, and the auditors' report accepted.

It was decided that the directors for 1937 should be a nominating committee and meet at the noon hour, and that each branch be taxed five cents per member for district funds.

The address of welcome by Mrs. Anderson of Rylestone was stimulating and inspiring and was replied to by Mrs. C. Spry of Marmora.

Miss Collins, superintendent of leadership training schools, was then called on, and spent some time in explaining the co-operative program and the services offered the Institues by the Department. After many questions and much discussion it was decided to take up the subject of buymanship as a district project, and that the leaders chosen by each branch meet at Marmora for two days, one to be in August, the other possibly November.

Adjournment was made for dinner, where an excellent and most appetizing dinner was served to all by the members of the hostess branch.

Following dinner, the delegates, numbering 33, were asked to take front seats to be ready for the election of officers.

Mrs. Bickel gave a splendid paper on "Peace," after which Miss Maitland of Springbrook gave a beautiful solo, "Rock Me to Sleep."

The nominating committee then presented their report, given by Mrs. C. Clancy.

Officers Installed.

Other nominations were called for, and the following officers were installed for 1938-9:

President, Mrs. J. C. Sills, Ivanhoe, (re-elected); 1st Vice-President, Mrs. F. Rutherford, Rylestone; 2nd Vice-President, Mrs. W. Grass, Gunter; 3rd Vice-President, Mrs. Haacke, Marmora; Secretary - Treasurer, Mrs. K. Bateman, Eldorado; Federation delegate, Mrs. T. L. Nickle, Madoc; alternate, Mrs. C. Whytock, Madoc; District delegate, Mrs. F. Rutherford, Rylestone; alternate, Mrs. C. Spry, Marmora. Chairmen of districts were also appointed.

Miss Powell of Bowmanville, superintendent of girls' work, then spoke. Her theme, the training of girls in sewing, and other achievement works was most interesting and three branches of the district took active part in furthering this work during the year. Achievement Day for girls and their leaders and all interested will be July 27, and will be held in Stirling.

Reports from all the chairmen of committees were well prepared and well received, and all showed the many phases of work attempted and achieved during the year.

Mrs. Hollongsworth gave a humorous reading, "An Inventor's Wife."

Mrs. Denyes, Federation delegate for Belleville area, gave a very thoughtful resume of the work of the Federation Board in Toronto, and all were much interested.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to the Rylestone members for their generous hospitality and to all the speakers.

A hearty invitation was received to hold the next District Annual convention in Eldorado, which was accepted.

The convention closed by singing of the Institute Ode and the National Anthem.

Italo-German Bloc

BERLIN, June 20 (CP-Havas). — A proposal that Italy and Germany form an economic bloc with the southeastern European countries "in which commerce would be removed, to a certain extent, from the influences of the world market," was made today by Prof. Ernst Wagemann, president of the Reich statistical office.

Village Cut Off Close To London

ROMFORD, England, June 20—(CP)—Dating back to the days of Richard I, the sleepy old village of Curtis Mill Green is again seriously considering building a road to the outside world.

It is seven miles from here and 20 miles from London. It is not accessible in winter except in "sludboots" of the Wellington variety because mud is knee-deep in the fields and bogs intervening between the village and nearest road.

A cluster of 21 houses is grouped in a forest glade and the main street has never carried the weight of an automobile. No tradesmen, except wandering tinkers, call and everything including coal has to be carried by man-power or on a horse drawn drag.

Oil lamps and candles are used for lighting. Millie Abrams, one of the villagers, bakes her own bread and makes her own butter. She says: "If any one dies they have to be carried 2½ miles to the nearest undertaker. One funeral we had here they had to prepare a track across the swamp with sticks. Then we carried the coffin to the hearse."

Cutty Sark Lives As Training Ship

LONDON, June 20—(C).—Use of lofty-sparred Cutty Sark — fastest clipper that ever defied a gale—as a training ship, will gladden shellback hearts from Singapore to 'Frisco.

The heart of Cutty Sark, for a live and responsive thing as she must surely have a heart, will be gladdened too. Last of her noble race she will once more feel the running feet on her decks and have the satisfaction of seeing the colorful craft of sail handling and rigging perpetuated.

For 15 years after her retirement the big clipper has impatiently strained at her mooring lines at Falmouth. She had been saved from the wreckers by sentimental Captain W. H. Downman, Weymouth. He died recently and his wife turned the ship over to the Thames Neutical Training College.

The Cutty Sark has been brought to the Thames from Falmouth and berthed beside the college's other training veteran, an old man-of-war, the Worcester. Cutty Sark will be used exclusively by juniors for sailing drill and other nautical exercises. Deed of gift provides she may be repaired but not altered.

Last of the racing tea clippers, Cutty Sark was built in 1869 at Dumbarton and started in the trade to China. Her greatest triumphs came later when she figured in the Australan grain races which today attract an ever-decreasing fleet of Scandinavian sailing ships.

Cutty Sark was distinctive. She carried a veritable cloud of canvas and under all plain sail could spread 27 separate "clouts" with a reserve of 20 "frills" for lighter winds. Her best run for 24 hours was 370 miles, averaging 15½ knots and she once outpaced a mail steamer when logging a steady 15 knots.

The Daily Telegraph and Morning Post welcomed the re-establishment of the venerable clipper. "Those who control the navy and mercantile marine," the paper declared, "seem agreed that the time once spent in learning sail cannot be easily spared by the future seaman or officers. Yet it is held by many who have served on the sea that even a perfunctory knowledge of sail makes a unique ingredient in the sense of seamanship.

"Cutty Sark, moored in the Thames and immobile, will at least teach her cadets the methods of handling sail and remind a mechanical age that the sea demands of its devotees an individuality. A famous ship will take up again her duties as a mother of men."

To Invade Jungle In Steel Caravan

BALTIMORE, Md., June 20—(CP)—Modern invasion of South American tropics arms more against the climate of the jungles than against possible hostility of natives.

Construction men now preparing to invade the oil belt of Colombia have paid most attention to scientific building and equipment of a train of trailers in which they will drive into the pungles.

The trailers, ready here for shipment to Barranquilla, Columbia, are constructed entirely of steel in varying shapes and weights. They have insulated roofs and tarpaulins for protection against the tropical sun and are painted aluminum to deflect the heat. Side walls are of wire mesh to keep out the malarial mosquito and other insects.

This caravan, powered by heavy duty Diesel tractors, will be the road-building advance unit of a train of heavy oil-drilling and pumping machinery, heading for oil sources deepin the jungles.

Will Transplant Canadian Spruce

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., June 20 (CP)—Captain Jack Turner, chief forestry officer in the department of natural resources, returned here from Canada where he arranged for shipments of coniferous seedlings for transplanting in Newfoundland.

He obtained the seedlings after visiting the forest authorities of Nova Scotia, Quebec, Ontario and the Dominion Government departments at Ottawa. Quebec will supply white spruce seedlings while Ontario will supply those of red, white, jack and Scotch pine. The Dominion department will supply poplar seedlings.

It is proposed to distribute the seedlings among the schools. Scholars will plant and care for them. White spruce seedlings will be placed in transplantation beds for two years before they will be distributed experimentally.

Germany will celebrate the making of the two-millionth German automobile.

Man Loses Tooth Dog Really Hurt

TORONTO, June 20 — (CP). — When a dog knocks out a man's teeth it's news, a Toronto newspaperman discovered when he turned up for work with a cavernous hole where his frontal incisor ought to be.

No, he hadn't run into a door in his sleep, fallen out of bed or anything like that. It was his playful Irish terrier pup, a bit of a vaulter, doing a header to his master's laughing mouth.

It was not the tooth the dog-fancier mourned so much as the hurt look on the animal's face as, tail between legs, he scuttled off to a corner convinced he had been whacked sharply on the head for his finished performance.

Manchoukuo Clash

TOKYO, June 20—(AP).—A Domei (Japanese News Agency) dispatch today said border patrols of Manchoukuo and Sovie. Russia had clashed at Nanbetsuri, killing one Manchoukuan and wounding one. The dispatch said the Soviet patrol retreated.

Daylight Time Not Wanted In South Africa

CAPE TOWN, June 20 (C.P.). — The proposal to introduce daylight-saving to the Union of South Africa has been rejected by the Union government, according to a reply sent by J. H. Hofmeyr, minister of the interior, to the Associated Chambers of Commerce of South Africa.

A resolution was adopted at the Chambers' annual congress in which it was agreed that "a conference be called to invite the contracting parties to the standard time convention to consider the introduction of a daylight-saving scheme between the months of October and March inclusive" in the Union's summer season.

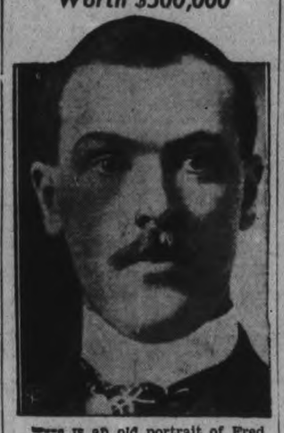
The question was submitted to Mr. Hofmeyr and received the attention of the expert advisers of the department, including local astronomers, economists, business men and industrialists.

In his reply the minister says the "attitude of the government in this matter is that, while it recognizes certain advantages might no doubt follow the introduction of the daylight-saving scheme to certain parts of the Union, and notably in the more easterly situated portions, it cannot be overlooked that in Cape Town and the western areas generally the inhabitants practise daylight-saving all the year round."

"Their clocks which actually show the standard time for South Africa," Mr. Hofmeyr added in explanation, "are in fact 44 minutes in advance of the local mean time. Their day, therefore, begins three-quarters of an hour before that of, for example, the inhabitants of the Transvaal, and it may be concluded that they would naturally object to further revision which would compel them to commence the day an hour earlier." In conclusion Mr. Hofmeyr draws attention to the rejection of daylight-saving bills by the House of Assembly in 1926 and 1928.

Estimates show the number of South Africans, black and white, who practice unofficial daylight-saving in the Western province, amounts to nearly 1,000,000.

Worth $500,000



Here is an old portrait of Fred Schroyer, who died at the age of 72 in his Masontown, Pa., home. Thought to be a recluse without funds, Schroyer lived in a house which had neither lights, running water, no other conveniences. When his heirs got a locksmith to open an old safe, they found a hundred $1,000 bills, liberty bonds and other negotiable securties valued at nearly $500,000.

May Put Tigers In Sanctuaries

HOBART, Aasmania, June 20. — (CP).— The Tasmanian marsupial tiger-descendant from the world's first mammals and for this reason known to scientists as a "living fossil"—isn't extinct after all.

It has been found again by the Animal and Birls' Protection Board in Hobart, and apparently lives in densely timbered regions near the west coast of this island state.

Immediate steps will be taken to set up sanctuaries in an effort to protect the beast from extinction.

"Er-Targyn," a new opera of Kazakh folk songs treated in modern style, has just been produced in Tashkent, Russia.

Scrubbing Not In Disfavor With Housewife

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, June 20. — Scrubbing is not such an arduous task after all, at least not in the minds of ladies who are members of the Seymour West Women's Institute. It was in answering the roll-call, "The Work I Like Best," that the strange revelation was made and members vouch for the accuracy of the report that a majority of the 62 members present regarded the task among their favorite indoor sports.

The meeting was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. L. Murphy, and the new president, Mrs. Fred McCulloch, occupied the chair for the first time, and Miss Irene Curle acted as secretary in the absence of Miss Vera Clark.

The report of the district officers' meeting held in Codrington last month was given by Mrs. Howard Clark, following which Mrs. Robert McCulloch and Mrs. Arthur Rutherford were chosen to head a membership contest. During the business portion of the meeting it was planned to hold a lawn social on July 6 and members of the executive will constitute a committee to formulate further plans for this. It was also decided that the next meeting which will be on July 21 should take the form of a picnic field day at the home of Mrs. Charles Macoun.

The program for the afternoon was in charge of Mrs. Ray McCulloch, and opened with a period of community singing led by Mrs. Raymond Free.

Miss Mary Murphy gave the concluding number on the program, a humorous reading entitled "The Aspiring Dishwasher." Lunch was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Charles Craighead, Mrs. Ed. O'Connor, Mrs. Alec Green, and Mrs. John Locke.

Bethel Y.P. Sets Date For Social

(Examiner Correspondence.)

EAST EMILY, June 20.—The regular meeting of the Bethel Young People's Society was held on Thursday evening. The business part of the meeting was taken charge of by the president, Miss Dorothy Dayman, who informed the society that the garden party will be held on June 27, it being the only date on which it would be convenient for the Kiwanis to put on the program. The meeting was then turned over to the missionary convenor, Miss Thelma Bailey.

Miss Audrey Boate read the Scripture lesson, which was followed by the explanation of the Scripture by Miss Thelma Bailey. Rev. Mr. MacTavish then gave a very interesting topic and the meeting was closed with the benediction.

FAREWELL TO BACKACHE!

Her back ached—she felt miserable—no pep—she couldn't be "bothered" to go out—lost contact with her friends and was lonely. Her sister advised her to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. Her backache soon vanished—enthusiasm and energy returned—her eyes sparkled—her step was sprightly—and once again she was her "old self." 115

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Chinese Rush 500,000 Into Hankow

Strengthen Defences While Japs Flounder In Mud

SHANGHAI, June 21 (A.P.). — China reorganized and strengthened Hankow's defences to-day while Japan's offensive against the temporary capital remained stuck in the mud by the spreading flood of the Yellow River.

Every day's delay to the Japanese, the Chinese high command said, has been used to bolster strategic points blocking what is expected to be Japan's line of attack deeper into China.

Sixty new divisions, numbering about 500,000 men, were said to have been prepared to take up positions in Hankow's last line defence.

The unexpected delay also was vitally helpful, Chinese declared, in assembling new equipment, including a large number of planes from Russia, and elsewhere, 1,200 Russian tanks, 380 Russian guns, and 300 other guns.

Blocked by the floods, the Japanese were reported in retreat from the Honan Province front where, two weeks ago, wavering Chinese resistance placed Chengchow, junction of the North-South Peiping-Hankow and East-West Lunghai Railroads, in peril of capture.

Volunteer Plan Swings Russia In Line

LONDON, June 21 (CP Cable)—The Spanish non-intervention committee today accepted the main features of the British revised plan for evacuation of volunteers.

The agreement improves the hopes for peace in Spain. France has informed Great Britain that the Pyrenees frontier now is effectively closed to the passage of arms and ammunition.

The British plan, when finally through the committee, will be submitted to both sides in Spain for approval.

S. B. Kagan, Russian representative, declared there were "good prospects" of reaching an accord, indicating that Russia, whose attitude hitherto has been the big question mark, would line up with Great Britain and France in seeking a Spanish settlement.

The committee adjourned at one p.m. to resume its sittings late today.

All Agree But Spaniards

Despite the agreement, however, there remain formidable obstacles. There is yet no sign that the Spanish factions would agree either to the scheme to withdraw foreign troops or a truce. Mussolini has committed himself to a demand for a complete victory for Franco.

Spanish government sources in London, commenting on the report from Paris that the border would be sealed tightly against war supplies, said: "The Chamberlain-Mussolini manoeuvring testifies to our tough resistance, but the situation is admittedly serious. Effective closing of the French border would greatly handicap us since we already are feeling the pinch because of Insurgent air attacks on sea-borne supplies."

2 Missing Fliers Found Dead In Plane Wreck

FLIN FLON, Man., June 21 (C.P.). — Bodies of Archie Turnbull, manager-pilot of Turnbull Airways, and Allen J. Wallace, member of a geological survey party, were found yesterday in the wreckage of their Bellanca plane on the south-east shore of Laurie Lake.

The wreckage was found by Pilot Kenneth Main, flying one of three planes searching for the men missing since they hopped off on Friday for Reindeer Lake, 200 miles north of this northern Manitoba mining town.

Reports here said the plane apparently burned immediately after the crash. It was believed both men died instantly. The men were flying into the Reindeer Lake area where the geological survey party of 12 men had established a base. Dr. J. L. Weeks of Ottawa heads the party. Further details were not available.

German Cars Worry To Britain

Undersell U.K Makes; Camouflaged Subsidy Blamed

LONDON, June 21 (C.P.). — Alarmed by mounting imports from subsidized industries in Continental countries, an organized campaign has been launched by business interests in Great Britain for anti-dumping measures patterned on Canadian and the United States plans.

The Empire Industries Association has taken the lead in the movement against such imports, and has directed its heavy guns on Germany in particular, which in recent years has captured a big slice of the United Kingdom market in the low priced motor car field.

The association points out that imports of German light cars increased from 28 in 1935 to 5,181 in 1937, while 3,183 were admitted during the first four months of 1938 despite a 33⅓ per cent. ad valorem duty.

The German product, known in the Reich as the "strength-through-joy" car, retails in the United Kingdom from £135 ($674), or anywhere from £22 to £110 below British-made cars of comparative horsepower. Inside Germany itself, it is claimed, the same cars sell for the equivalent of £145 at the standard rate of exchange. It is estimated the actual billing price for a car to the British importer is between £55 and £60.

A Vital Threat.

The threat to the British motor industry is described as "vital." On the basis of 1937 German imports, it is estimated 4,600 workmen were thrown out of employment.

Other industries are also feeling the pinch of competition from subsidized imports, which brought the following statement from M. Tuke, secretary of the Wholesale Fashion Trades Association:

"There is no doubt that a cleverly camouflaged subsidy scheme is enjoyed by German exporting houses. The sooner special measures are adopted for dealing with an exceptional emergency, the better will it be for British trade."

To meet the situation the Empire Industries Associates is urging the government to invoke the relevant sections of the Finance Act of 1935 which gives the authorities power to value any article in accordance with the "price it would fetch in a sale in the open market."

The Association of British Chambers of Commerce is supporting the campaign.

Alfalfa Industry In Full Swing

TORONTO, June 21 — (CP) — Spring rains and warm weather have brought promise of good crops in most parts of the province, the Ontario Department of Agriculture announced today in its weekly crop report.

The report says: "A new industry in the form of an alfalfa dehydration plant is in full swing in the Oakville district. This plant is merchandizing approximately 20 tons per day."

North Simcoe reported that frequent and heavy rains in the past two weeks "have promoted very rapid growth, although damage was heavy in the north part of the county from a recent storm. Prince Edward county, in Central Ontario, reported that "all crops look promising."

"Hay crop is looking very good as we had had plenty of rain, but the grain crop is probably damaged by a little too much rain," the department's representative in Cochrane said. The report added that "all crops, however, looking better than average."

Pastures in Middlesex county generally are in excellent condition with abundant feed for all kinds of livestock. Spring grains there will have a fair length of straw while corn and roots "are rather backward because of cool weather but in most instances are a good stand."

Some hay has been cut in Brant county, but little has been stored. Spring grains are good, while winter wheat has headed out and "is doing well despite the patchiness apparent earlier in the spring." Tobacco destroyed by wind two weeks ago has all been replanted.

No Parking Meters

OTTAWA, June 21 (C.P.).— City Council last night defeated 18-8 a recommendation to install parking meters on business streets for a six months' trial.

During discussion of the recommendation Alderman A. E. Band said although more than 14,000 tickets had been given for traffic violations in Ottawa last year only 900 had paid fines.

Britain's Defences Ready Says War Chief

Spending 5 Million a Day On Armaments Has Done Wonders Says Hore Belisha

LONDON, June 21 (CP).—Leslie Hore-Belisha, secretary for war, declared confidently today that "the country is ready to defend itself."

We've done wonders in rearmament," he told the council of the National Liberty party.

"We have spent a vast sum of money (on rearmament) to a figure approaching £1,000,000 ($500,000) a day," the war secretary said, "and despite the fact that we have met that bill we have spent £50,000,000 a year more upon social services.

"That achievement is remarkable—to have redressed the bankruptcy of the nation and to have made it strong.

"I hope that it will be reported throughout the world for it will indicate to potential breakers of peace that this country has inexhaustible resources, financial, material and spiritual, with which to resist any disturbances.

181,000 Volunteers Ready

"I frequently hear that we have no guns and very few men with which to resist a possible enemy. As far as the army is concerned we are now in the second year of our rearmament and, compared with 1936, we have 181,000 volunteers in the territorial army as compared with 136,000 in 1936, an increase of 50,000 men in two years.

"The same story of progress can be told about the regular army. The number of recruits taken in April and May of this year was 6,630, compared with 3,789 in the corresponding period last year."

First Day Of Summer Lands In Heat Wave

TORONTO, June 21 (C.P.). — Toronto entered the first day of summer with hot numid weather that looked for a time as if it would break seasonal records. The temperature mounted to 88 above at 11.30 a.m., but 30 minutes later it started down again, reaching 86 at noon. The highest on record for the date was 89 in 1909.

Ice-cream sales soared 100 per cent. yesterday here and remained at a high level to-day. Frank O'Donnell, chief forecaster of the Toronto Bureau, said to-day present weather was likely to continue a day or two.

Obedience First

HANKOW, June 21—(CP-Havas)—Even though he later recaptured the city which he abandoned against orders, General Lung Ho-Hun, commander of the 88th Elite Chinese Division, was executed Friday for a breach of military discipline, General Chiang Kai-Shek's headquarters announced to-day.

General Lung failed to carry out orders to defend Lanfeng, Lunghai railroad city, against the Japanese. He reorganized his forces and retook the city, but "military discipline cannot countenance disobedience," the army communique said.

B.C. Member Tempted To Be Smuggler

OTTAWA, June 21 (CP).—A veteran and respected member of the House of Commons last night confessed he once contemplated embarking on illegal pursuits. He was A. W. Neill (Ind., Comox,Alberni). Discussing the Vancouver unemployment situation, he recalled he had once been out of a job in the same city.

"I knew what it was to be hungry,' he said. "There was no relief nor were there any government supplies. What I wanted to mention, however, is the fact that the morale of men deteriorated very rapidly.

"We had to eat to live, and even though we were striving to get jobs, and some jobs were handed out, we got to the stage where we were almost afraid to get a job and we did not want to work.

"The less intelligent men would have become hoboes or petty thieves and the more intelligent ones might have gone into some form of confidence game.

"I was seriously contemplating going into a scheme for smuggling Chinamen into the United States—a profitable occupation at $500 a head, and five years in the penitentiary if we were caught."

Chamberlain Vetoes Reprisals On Franco

LONDON, June 21—(CP Cable)—Prime Minister Chamberlain will take no reprisals against General Franco for the bombing of British ships in Spanish waters.

The government, he told the House of Commons today, held many of the attacks were deliberate. They were against international law. But, after careful, exhaustive examination of all methods of giving them aid, the government had come to the conclusion it would be impossible to do so without intervening in the Spanish war.

The Prime Minister's declaration roused the Labor opposition to indignation.

"What's the new navy for?" shouted a Clydesider.

"What of the lives of British sailors?" clamored the Labor back benches.

From time to time during Mr. Chamberlain's speech the interruptions were so great he could scarcely be heard.

Nazis Describe War On Jews As Self-Defence

BERLIN, June 21—(AP)—Stung by eye-witness reports in foreign newspapers, the German press today broke its silence on the Anti-Semitic drive which seems aimed at "cleansing" Berlin of its 140,000 Jews.

A colorful editorial in the leading Nazi organ, Chancellor Hitler's own Voelkischer Beobachter, sought to justify the drive as an "act of self-defence by the people against Jews who are swamping Berlin, especially from Austria."

Although the drive begun June 1 continued, the ministry of economic exempted foreign Jews living abroad from property registration regulations which the United States had protested. New regulations also relaxed the rules as they apply to German Jews living abroad.

"Paradoxical though it may seem," the Beobachter declared, 'the louder the foreign press has railed about Anti-Jewish persecutions the more the Jews have wanted to come here.

"It is the material prosperity of the Reich that attracts them and makes them submit willingly to any restrictions placed upon them for the Jews are notoriously thick-skinned."

The Beobachter charged the new influx consisted primarily of "smugglers of drugs and currencies, counterfeiters and professional swindlers", It accused the newcomers also of "behaving with intolerable impertinence" to Aryan women and girls.

Refer to French Action.

The Beobachter recalled allegedly forcible expulsions of Germans from Alsace-Lorraine in 1920 after France annexed the region.

"We never yet have told the Jews to get out at 24 hours' notice with a hundredweight of personal property as the French did with Germans of Alsace-Lorraine," Hitler's paper exclaimed.

It became increasingly clear, however, that emigration of Jews was an objective of the persecution.

Jews among the 2,000 estimated seized in raids said all who declared their willingness to leave the country were released from custody almost immediately.

They also said Jewish shop owners who promised they would close their stores and give up business were given preferred treatment.

Julius Streicher, who controls the Anti-Semitic Weekly Der Stuermer, expressed the belief "extermination" of the Jews would be the only solution of the Jewish problem.

Day Long Battle Riles House As Opposition Protests Handling Of B.C. Jobless

Warn Policy Opening Way To More Riots; McGeer Lays Charge Bank Of Canada Not Controlling Credit

OTTAWA, June 21 (CP).—A managed currency based upon the experience of Great Britain is Canada's opportunity to provide employment, build a national highway system and end the financial embarrassment of Dominion and provincial governments, in the opinion of G. G. McGeer (Lib. Vancouver-Burrard).

With typical fire and plain talking the former Vancouver Mayor wound up a hectic House of Commons session yesterday with a claim the Bank of Canada was not controlling credit and that the government was failing to implement its pre-election promises on monetary reform.

Mr. McGeer was frequently in conflict with Finance Minister Dunning whose remarks, coupled with interjections from Opposition Leader Bennett, brought a sharp retort from the Vancouver member.

"I never dreamed," he said, "that it would be my misfortune to sit in a Canadian House of Commons and see the leader of the opposition, a Conservative, more Liberal than some of the Liberals sitting on the treasury benches."

"You haven't yet,"Mr. Dunning declared.

The debate, which followed a four hour wrangle over the unemployment disturbances in Vancouver, arose over the resolution on which Finance Minister Dunning based his bill to enable the government to acquire complete and exclusive ownership of the Bank of Canada.

This, Mr. McGeer said, was "a step in the right direction" but he was not ready to cheer until there was some effective effort made by the government to so manage currency as to put money to work rather than leaving it in the banks. England had done it successfully and Canada had that experience as a guide.

The Vancouver Case.

J. S. Woodsworth, C. C. F. leader, precipitated the debate on eviction of the Vancouver unemployed who were forcibly removed Sunday from public property they had occupied for a month. His action forced postponement of the start of the budget debate until today when Hon. Earl Lawson, (Con. York South) will launch the opposition attack.

Members of all groups in opposition joined in criticising the government, on its handling of the Vancouver situation. Labor Minister Rogers replied with a reiteration of his declaration that no special status would be established for unemployed in Vancouver, especially when urged by such a demonstration as was carried on there.

Justice Minister Lapointe said the law had been broken and the authorities moved to correct that situation, after showing the greatest forbearance and toleration. So long as he was Minister the law would be maintained.

Members of the C. C. F. and Social Credit group warned that the policy of the government was paving the way for more violence.

Dunning and the Bank.

Introducing his legislation for the complete government ownership of the Bank of Canada, Mr. Dunning said the chief reason was that constitution of the bank was being

Village Reeves Put Up Fight On Assessments

Discussion of the appeals against the equalized assessment that was determined by a special board of valuators composed of Judge Smoke, Judge L. V. O'Connor of Cobourg and Fred Morrow, registrar of deeds, was begun at this morning's sitting of the county council. The appeals are from the three villages, Lakefield, Norwood and Havelock and from Smith township.

Warden McDonald said Dummer had both the Y. W. C. A. and Rotary Club camps in its area. "We have placed them at a value that wouldn't hurt them. I told them if the county gave us some relief we might be able to do something for them. Otherwise we would be paying the county for something we were not collecting."

Reforestation

The Warden also mentioned the property the county was buying for reforestation, and said the question of its exemption from taxation should be considered.

"If we have a nominal assessment of the land it would be quite as much as growing trees would stand in the way of assessment," Reeve Anderson said. "A crop of trees should be no more assessable than a crop of wheat. Take the value of the land as it was before trees are planted on it. That could apply to all wood lots."

Reeve Coughlin said the county wood lot is now crown land and not assessed, would it be assessed if it became county property, he asked.

"I don't know" Reeve Anderson replied, and Reeve Tanner said it was probably a matter for the legislature to determine.

Reeve Fowler and Warden McDonald were asked to consult the solicitor E. A. Peck, K.C., on this question and report on Thursday.

The committee took up the petitions from the three villages and Smith township.

Reeve Seeney of Havelock said the local assessment of the village was $392,000 last year and was now $388,000, but he considered that this amount was nearly twice what it should. Property losses have declined sharply since operations of the C. P. R. have slowed down, and Reeve Seeney said the assessment should be reduced $100,000.

Reeve Anderson remarked that when the C. P. R. pay roll was $30,000 a month the village was asses-

Madame Curie-Joliot Hunts Radium D In Arctic Ore

Three Planes Hunt Missing Party Of Two Surveyors

Flin Flon, Man., June 21 (CP). THREE PLANES of Turnbull Airways today started search for Archie Turnbull, manager-pilot of the firm, and A. J. Wallace, members of a geological survey party, who failed to return here during the week-end from a survey flight.

The men hopped off Friday in a new Bellanca machine and headed north from Flin Flon, about 400 miles north of Winnipeg. The search planes are operating out of Reindeer Lake, about 200 miles north of here.

An Instalment Act

HALIFAX, June 21 (CP)—Designed to safeguard Nova Scotia buyers on the instalment plan from losing investments on purchased goods, the instalment payment contracts act, enacted at the last session of the provincial legislature, will go into force June 30, Attorney General J. H. MacQuarrie announced last night.

Under the new act the department of the attorney general has control over dealers and salesmen selling on the down payment plan. Among the features of the act, the department has the power to prohibit repossession of goods on which a certain sum has been paid.

OTTAWA, Jnue 21 (C.P.). — Madame Curie-Joliot, daughter of the famed discoverers of radium, is at work on ores from Canada's Great Bear Lake radium deposits, it was disclosed here to-day by F. B. Friend of Port Hope, radium physicist who arrived in Ottawa to speak before the Society of Chemical Industry.

Her objective is the development of commercial methods for the recovery of other minerals of the radium group, particularly Radium D, which have not yet been produced industrially, Mr. Friend said.

Radium D is now found in the lead which is separated from the ores during the process of extracting radium of medical use, Polonium another radio-active element,, also discovered by the Curies, is likewise present in Canadian pitchblende, but has yet to be produced on a commercial scale.

Future In Navy

WINDSOR, Ont., June 21 (CP).—There are bright futures in the navy for youths not afraid to work and who can take discipline, since navies of the world have shown "growing pains" in the past few years, according to Commander E. R. Mainguy, Ottawa, director of the naval reserve branch of the Department of National Defence.

Mainguy is here to make a decision as to whether the latest division of the Royal Canadian Volunteer navy reserve will be established in Windsor or London. The city which shows the most interest will be chosen, he said.

Find Cook Spread Typhoid In Camp For Years

HALIFAX, June 21 (CP).—Efforts of medical detectives in tracking down typhoid carriers who rarely suffer from the disease but leave a trail of death and illness behind them were described to the Canadian Public Health Association today.

Dr. J. J. MacRitchie, Nova Scotia health department medical officer, told of an outbreak of the fever in a lumber camp in 1936. Several deaths resulted. New sanitary arrangements were made, but the infection continued. A study of records showed the same cook had been employed over a period of years.

The cook was examined and found to be a carrier. He gave up his job and submitted to an examination which rendered him non-effective. He had no previous case history of typhoid. Other carriers examined were found to have been previous typhoid cases.

Hunt Infected Potatoes

TORONTO, June 21 (CP)—The Ontario Department of Agriculture announced today it was seeking to trace 42 cars of infected potatoes which reached here last week from Virginia for distribution in Ontario. The potatoes are infected with bacterial soft rot.

"If these potatoes or peelings are thrown out carelessly by housewives, spores from these tubers may be blown miles to potato fields," the department announcement said.

Rev. MacOdrum Dies Suddenly In Brockville

BROCKVILLE, Ont., June 21. — (CP).—The Presbyterian Church in Canada is without an official head today through the death of Rev. Dr. Donald MacOdrum, elected Moderator of the Church at the General Assembly in Toronto only three weeks ago.

Dr. MacOdrum, minister of the First Presbyterian Church here since 1925, died suddenly yesterday at the age of 74. Since his return from the Assembly, held June 1, he appeared to be enjoying good health and preached two sermons Sunday. He died 30 minutes after suffering a heart attack.

Church regulations make no provision for the election of a successor until next Assembly, scheduled for Midland, Ont., next June. Meanwhile urgent business requiring personal attention of the official head of the Church may be transacted by any former Moderator. Probably these duties will devolve upon Dr. Hugh Munroe, New Glasgow, N.S., whom Dr. MacOdrum succeeded.

Native of Nova Scotia.

First native of Nova Scotia to be Moderator since 1876, Dr. MacOdrum was born in Mira, and was educated at Sydney and Pictou Academies, Dalhousie University and the Halifax Presbyterian College, at which he completed his studies in 1889.

Teaching school before his ordination, he went to his first charge at Marion Bridge, N.S., later serving at Moncton, N.B.; Pembroke, Ont.; St. Andrews, N.B.; Halifax and Brockville. He resigned the Brockville charge recently, his resignation to take effect in September.

He was a former Moderator of the Ottawa and Montreal Synod of the Church and served as chairman of the Brockville Presbytery.

His widow and three sons survive. They are: Rev. M. M. MacOdrum, Sydney, N.S.; Alastair, a student at McGill University, and C. Gordon, Brockville.

Girl Is Drowned Near Ingoldsby

LINDSAY, June 21 (CP).—Tellie Onipchuck, 18-year-old Ukrainian girl of Toronto, met death by drowning in the waters of Cannings Lake, near Ingoldsby, Haliburton County, Saturday noon according to word reaching here Monday.

Accompanied by some friends from Toronto who were holidaying at Ingoldsby for the weekend, Miss Onipchuck was enjoying the waters of the lake near the shore. Unable to swim, she wandered out past a rocky ledge and dropped suddenly out of sight.

Friends who witnessed her disappearance tried vainly to reach her but her body was not recovered for more than half an hour. Artificial respiration failed to revive her.

Havelock Masons Parade To Church

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, June 21. — The members of the Havelock Masonic Lodge held their annual church parade to the United Church for last Sunday evening's service. Forty-two members of the brethren were in attendance to hear the sermon by Rev. S. A. Kemp, who chose as his text, "The Builder." He compared the Masons of the modern day as speculative, using the square and level as symbols of virtue, while those of earlier history were operative, who put the square and level to actual use.

After the service, Rev. Mr. Kemp was invited to the Masonic Lodge Rooms, where the thanks of the brethren was extended to himself, the Board of Management, and the choir for the splendid service provided.

Creepers On Tracks Stall Section Of Freight Train

Fort William, June 21 (CP).

CATERPILLARS, swarming over the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks Saturday night, stalled the second section of No. 3 express between Pearl and Loon Stations.

The rails were made so slippery with the bodies of the insects that the drivers spun without taking hold.

A freight train engine, sidetracked at Loon to allow the passenger to get by, gave the stalled train a boost that enabled it to get started again. The delay caused the section to arrive at Fort William 20 minutes late.

George Renison Wins Award Trinity School

PORT HOPE, June 21.—George E. Renison, son of Bishop R. J. Renison, Toronto, senior prefect of the school, was awarded the bronze medal, most coveted prize of the year, at the seventy-third annual speech day held at Trinity College School, Port Hope. The Bishop was in the audience as his son received the award.

In keeping with tradition, he was "rushed" by the boys—carried from the hall on the shoulders of his fellow-students—when the award was made. The bronze medal is awarded each year, by secret ballot of the masters, to the student who shows the greatest perseverance throughout the year in industry, integrity and courtesy.

The Hamilton bronze medal, highest all-round award in the junior school, was won by J. C. W. Hope.

J. R. C. Cartwright won the special prize for "Head Boy and Chancellor's Prize Man," highest scholastic award in the senior school, and D. M. Irwin won the Grand Challenge Cup for all-round athletics in the senior school.

Rev. J. Scott Howard, cricekt captain in 1876, presented the cup and bat to this year's captain, W. Mood, and the bat presented by Norman Seagram to the best batsman, was awarded to his nephew, T. B. Seagram.

Rev. the Hon. H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto, was speaker at the prize day exercises. R. P. Jellett of Montreal, member of the board and President of the Montreal Branch of the Old Boys' Association, was Chairman, and P. A. C. Ketchum, Headmaster, dealt with the school's record for the year.

Speaking as President of the University of Toronto, Canon Cody addressed a word of welcome to the students of the school, who would be entering the colleges of that university this fall, and congratulated the Board of Governors and supporters of the school on the calibre of the Headmaster, P. A. C. Ketchum. The family of which Mr. Ketchum was a member, he said, had made an outstanding contribution to secondary school education in Canada.

Terming teaching the "least advertised, worst paid, and most highly rewarded profession," the speaker urged the students not to neglect their profession in making their choice of a future career. He urged them, too, while their teachers yet lived, to make it a point to tell them how much they, as students, owed them.

County Council To Deal With Assessment

Convening the county council a day earlier than usual for its June sessions was prompted by an additional problem involving the equalization of assessment and not the reported prospect of a trip to Guelph with the Peterborough branch of the United Farmers of Ontario, Warden E. N. McDonald stated in the brief opening formalities Monday afternoon.

Smith township and the three villages, Lakefield, Norwood and Havelock have protested that their assessment for county tax purposes is too high, and does not take into account and provide for losses in municipal values which these minor constituents contend should be adjusted.

Smith township declares that it has lost the taxes formerly paid by the Canada Cement Company on property acquired by the Hydro-Electric Commission. Lakefield asserts that its local assessment has declined $264,501 in the last two years. Norwood contends that its assessment by the county should be reduced by the amount of $100,000, and Havelock is asking for consideration of its set back caused by a material decrease in the number of men employed by the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Payroll Is Down.

Havelock is no longer in the flourishing position is occupied in 1917. At that time there were twenty-five crews working out of Havelock, a busy divisional centre, as contrasted with only one crew today. And the payroll of the C.P.R. has shrunk from $30,000 a month to $2,000. A good home assessed at $1,000 can be bought for $500, and one house was recently sold for $300, it is asserted. The village's Hydro-Electric rates are said to be about the highest in the province, and prevent any industry from being attracted to Havelock. The construction of No. 7 highway has been a disadvantage to local merchants instead of an asset, because residents find it easier to motor to larger shopping centres. The petition from the village affirmed that taxation would result in disaster if some substantial relief in county assessment was not forthcoming.

Norwood's plea also refers to local disillusion regarding anticipated benefits from the highway, and further declares that its small industries have suffered from competition by larger industries in the cities. Several of the village factories have been forced out of business, buildings are obsolete, decline in merchandising has resulted in fewer

Want Ontario To Pay

BRANTFORD, Ont., June 21—(CP).—City Council voted last night to petition the Ontario Government to bear the full expense for the Brantford riding by-election, July 20, to elect a successor to the late Hon. M. M. MacBride.

Members said the city's share of the expense would be $1,200, but that no money had been set aside in the annual budget for such an exigency. The council will ask the government to pay full costs of all future provincial by-elections.

sed at about two-thirds of what it should have been.

"I can't place any weight on the argument that the highway is a disadvantage to Havelock" said Reeve Gifford.

"The highway is taking business away from the village to the larger centres," Reeve Seeney said.

"If the people go to Peterborough to buy they are putting money in their pockets by getting lower prices," Deputy-reeve W. H. Johnston observed.

Deserted Village

"If the taxes keep up our villages will become deserted villages," Reeve C. S. Tanner of Lakefield affirmed. The assessment loss to the village was $264,501 since December 1936.

"What were those properties Lakefield lost?" Reeve Anderson enquired.

"We lost $285,000 for the Canada Cement and $145,000 by the Hydro and on appeal got back $89,000 on Hydro property," Mr. Tanner answered.

"This is one case in which we would like to see the assessment rolls for the last two or three years," Reeve Anderson suggested.

"I can get them for you in half an hour and also the exact figures of exemptions and losses," Reeve Tanner said.

"Bring us the Canada Cement tax bills for the last 2 or 3 years," Reeve Anderson proposed.

Norwood's Case

Norwood's case was presented by Reeve Thompson. Several businesses are almost shut down. Findlay's used to employ 40 men, and now only 2. The village has had several fires and there was no encouragement for the owners to rebuild. For that reason the land has been left vacant.

"What's your local assessment," Reeve Gifford asked.

"Its $299,384," Reeve Thompson said.

"That means you are up $10,000 on your local since the last equalization," Reeve Anderson commented.

The equalized assessment of Norwood is $335,700.

Smith township lost $32,000 when the Hydro bought Canada Cement Company property, Reeve Allan B. Mann stated. "We also feel Smith was unduly assessed in the last equalization."

Smith was raised $248,0000 in its equalized assessment. If you take the total number of acres in the township and divide them into the equalized assessment you get the figure $36.9, that might be regarded as the average equalized assessment. By the same computing Otonabee's average is $32 and Ennismore $18. Reeve Mann argued. He suggested as a comparison that the city bought 38 acres in Otonabee for $17,000 for a sewage disposal plant, and asked the council to do fairly for Smith in revising the equalized assessment.

Valuators All Wrong

Reeve Anderson said in commenting on Reeve Mann's statement that the equalized assessment was first determined by two independent valuators, and later by two judges and the county registrar of deeds. "It is remarkable that the valuators and judges were all wrong and Mr. Mann all right," Reeve Anderson said. "In the report of the judges there is no mention of the word assessment. They use the word valuation, because they were appointed to determine actual values. Mr. Mann refers to the Bulmer property. It was assessed by Smith for $4,150, sold for $9,000 and the judges valued it at $6,000. Can anybody say they were unfair in that valuation. He is inferring the work of the judges was not right, and he tries to make a comparison on an acreage-value basis. In the work of assessing you arrive at the value of the land and add to it the amount by which the buildings increase the value of the land."

Reeve Mann said it was surely significant that for twelve years the municipalities of the county had gone along apparently well satisfied with the equalized assessment. Why should these then be all at once so great a change made in the assessments of Smith and Otonabee and other municipalities?

Reeve Anderson said he was agreeable to Smith receiving allowance for the amount of their loss by the Hydro purchase of the Canada Cement Co., $31,900.

"On the figures quoted here North Monaghan would be assessed at $75 an acre as against Smith's $35," Reeve Milby said, "so you can see the absurdity of that argument. Our local assessment is $200,000 less than our equalized, and we tried to get an independent assessment this year by engaging an assessor from outside our municipality. He reduced the assessment $47,000 less than last year. The more complaints I hear from other municipalities the more sympathetic I feel about North Monaghan. Why should we lead the county with more expense after the terrific bill we got two years ago? That was our attitude."

Reeve Milby spoke of the high cost of education in the suburban section, and also pointed out that the rural ratepayers are bringing an appeal to the Municipal Board for separation from the suburbs. North Monaghan lost $170,000 in assessment when Mount St. Joseph appealed for exemption, "and we didn't come here complaining about it. It is appalling to see the amount of property exempted in our township, and the city takes a bite off our property every time they feel like it."

"Harvey was raised $43,000 in the equalized and we are not kicking," said Reeve Wallace Shearer. "On the assessment per acre we are more than most of the municipalities in the county."

Malton Airport Land Cost Said "Hold-Up"

TORONTO, June 21.—City Council payment of $12,300 for nearly 100 acres of Malton farm lands, expropriated for the airport, was branded by Alderman William Croft yesterday as "a hold-up."

The land, formerly the farm property of Victor Rowland, was described by him as having been "full of ragweed" with buildings on it that were far from being in good condition.

The Alderman told Council he had engaged an expert to make a private valuation of the property and had been advised it was not worth more than $6,500. He then urged his colleagues not to pay more than $8,500 or, failing acceptance of such a settlement, to take the issue into the courts.

Mayor Day pointed out the land in question had been in the hands of the Rowland family for more than 100 years. The original price asked had been $30,000 but Assessment Commissioner Farley had recommended settlement at $12,300.

"What does the Assessment Commissioner know about farm lands?" Alderman Croft demanded.

"Far more than you," his Worship retorted.

The Mayor then charged the Ward 9 representative with inconsistency and recalled that Alderman Croft, not long ago, had strenuously opposed the city's plan to sell surplus Malton airport land at $151 an acre.

"On that occasion you accused us of practically giving this valuable Malton land away," his Worship declared. "Now you stand up and say it's a hold-up if we purchase it at $125 an acre."

Other Councillors then pointed out that adjoining farm properties, of practically the same acreage, had been purchased by the city for even higher figures and this fact would be taken into consideration if the issue were taken into the courts. Only Alderman Shannon supported Alderman Croft in his attempt to pay no more than $8,500.

Slight Increase In Tax Rate Is Forecast By Warden In Opening County Council

Council Will Be Asked To Ratify Purchase Of Reforestation Land.

In his address to the county council at the opening of its June sessions Monday afternoon, Warden E. N. McDonald suggested that a slight increase in the tax rate might be necessary this year, but it was only a passing reflection without any further comment on what is customarily one of the main duties of the council in its midsummer deliberations.

After welcoming the members, Warden McDonald proceeded as follows:

To the Members of the County Council: Gentlemen:

It is with pleasure, I welcome you back to the June Session of the Peterborough County Council.

It is very gratifying to see the wonderful prospects on the farms of the County. Surely we are a favoured people, and have a great deal for which to thank Almighty God.

While in other nations of the world, war has devastated the landscape, and homes have been ruined, we have been free and safe from war.

Your Committee on Reforestation has about completed the purchase of a tract of land in the Townships of Dummer and Belmont. This, if properly conserved, should become a valuable asset to the County in future years. You will, no doubt, be asked to ratify the purchase and vote the required amount of money to take care of same.

Owing to a desire on the part of some of the Council to go into the Equalization of Assessment, I have called the Council on Monday. I trust you will give this your early consideration.

The small Committee on County Bridges has about completed its work, and will, I hope, give their report.

The County and Suburban-Area Road Committees have purchased a large grader capable of doing heavy work, and it is our hope in the near future, to offer for sale one more, if not both, of the light motor graders in use in our County roads.

Our finances are in an enviable condition, and while a slight increase in our County rates may be necessary, your various Committees have had economy with good service as their watchword.

The Chairman of the County Property Committee will report to you on work about the buildings considered necessary.

I wish to point out to you that the Grand Jury inspected the Public buildings on each of three consecutive Sittings. I have protested to the Attorney-General, and believe that a strong resolution of protest should be passed and sent to other Counties, as well as to the proper authorities.

In conclusion, I want to thank you for your unanimous co-operation and support. We are passing through very strenuous times, and public men have a great opportunity of service. I know by your activities that you are not shirking yours, and I pray God's Blessing on your work as County Legislators.

Thurlow Resident Injured In Crash

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, June 21.—When the automobile in which he was riding crashed on with another motor car, Arnold Babcock, Township of Thurlow, sustained severe head lacerations and body abrasions near his home on Saturday afternoon. Mr. Babcock was later removed to the Belleville General Hospital.

Provincial Constable William McBrien was called to the second concession of Thurlow Township shortly before 3 p.m. on Saturday. The officer stated that investigations revealed Mr. Babcock was riding in an automobile driven by Mrs. Lazeviuk, Thurlow, which collided head on with another car driven by W. H. Kerr, a neighbor. It is believed Mrs. Lazeviuk was attempting to pass another motor car travelling in the same direction, and failed to observe the oncoming Kerr motor car. The fronts of both cars were badly damaged. No other serious injuries resulted, however.

Campbellford Presbyterians Observes 102nd Birthday

Former Pastor Is Special Speaker

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, June 21.—Rev. J. C. Greir of Lindsay, who was thirteen years ago called from the Campbellford charge of the Presbyterian Church, returned on Sunday to take charge of the anniversary services which mark the 102nd year since the first recorded meeting of adherents in this town. Although it was on July 4th, 1859, that Rev. Thomas Alexander laid the cornerstone for the present edifice, the anniversary services are held annually during the month of June.

The evening service of St. John's United Church having been withdrawn, a large number of members of this congregation joined in the service in which Rev. Harold B. Neal assisted. Special music was rendered by the choir under the very capable leadership of Charles Allan, and there were given two anthems, the first of which was "Holy Father Cheer Our Way," and in this Mrs. Jack Cowell took the solo part. The second anthem was Gounod's "Sanctus," with Bill Richardson taking the solo work, while Mrs. Jack Cowell, Mrs. F. G. DeCarrol and Miss Mae Bell rendered "Consecration," by Jude. Miss Margaret Dickson of Peterborough, lyric soprano, was the guest soloist of the evening, offering two numbers, "I Will Extol Thee," by Costa, and the second Handel's "Come Unto Me."

Rev. Greir took his text from Exodus 21: 5, "I love my master, my wife and my children. I will not go out free." As an introduction he stated the text presented a picture in three panels. The first of these was of the fond Hebrew parents in early married life gazing into the cradle at their only son as the husband looks up to his wife, exclaiming, "I hope he will never have to work as hard as I did," to which the wife nods her assent.

In the second picture the years have passed and the son is now seen grown up with all the advantages of travel and education that the sacrifice of indulgent parents could bestow upon him. He doesn't know where the money to give him all these things has come from, nor does he care.

In the third picture the father is gone and the son tries to carry on the business but fails and his creditors step in and seize all and sell him into slavery. The picture is now of a dejected young man looking into the face of his master with hatred. But the master sensing his feelings gives him a wife and now the six years of toil in slavery have passed and he has become strong of body and muscle and his shoulders are broadened and his back is powerful from the many burdens he has carried. His wife has borne him two sons and now say the master your six years are passed you are free to go but according to the law your wife and children are to remain with me. The decision rests with the man and willingly remains to serve his master for the rest of his life.

By giving this old parable a New Testament meaning we find that life at its best means the renunciation of freedom, and obedience to certain rules. It would mean the wholesale destruction of our race were there no such bounds for man to stay within. At the very moment a man says "I will," he renounces his freedom for the sake of living a higher and better life. "Love means the renunciation of freedom. It is the effect of religion which accumulates until as the years roll by each of us become rich and grand in experience." Character is strengthened through the years of service. As our soul is expanding we must expect new experiences, but it is these experiences which we have had in the past which make us the men and women we are.

Muskies Scarce At Crowe Lake

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, June 21. — Powers that be may advance the all important fishing season by a few days but as far as the male anglers are concerned, the game battlers of Crowe Lake are not going to be lured too soon.

"They are not biting," mourned some of these gentlemen as they returned home on Monday minus a prize.

Without hearing of any large fish being caught up to 5 p.m. the Examiner fell back upon the subject of secondary interest, "Who caught the first one?" And Stan Lowe, who had for his companion, Manager Bert Kouri of last season's High School hockey champions, mentioned that the seven pound lunge they caught in Blairton Bay at 9 a.m. broke the ice, figuratively speaking. Later in the evening, it was ascertained that Mrs. C. Trembel of Toronto, a guest with her husband at Tipperary Hotel had landed the best fish of the day, a fifteen pound beauty.

Successful Tea Is Held At Lakefield

LAKEFIELD, June 21.—The lawn tea and sale of cooking scheduled to be held Friday afternoon, June 17, by the Women's Association of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Lakefield, on the church lawn, was most successful, despite the fact that tea had to be served inside because of inclement weather. A good crowd attended the function, several representatives from the Presbyterian Church at Omemee and Lakevale (the congregation's sister charges) being noted among those present.

The church basement, where the tea was served, looked lovely. The small tea tables were each centred with a vase of yellow roses, and yellow serviettes carried out the color scheme. The large tea table was covered with a lace cloth and centred with a bouquet of peonies.

Tea was served by the following ladies: Mrs. J. W. Ridpath, Mrs. J. C. Smith, Mrs. Clark Garbutt, Mrs. J. Blakely and Mrs. T. Chaplin

Mrs. Turk was in charge of the home cooking table.

91 Percent Are Found Immune With Dick Test

An absence of scarlet fever similar to the existing freedom of diphtheria is predicted in the monthly report of Dr. Murray Fraser, Medical Officer of Health to the Board of Health in which Dr. Fraser states that immunization against scarlet fever will be offered annually to school children.

"The co-operation of parents and the repeated administration of toxoid," says the report, "has stamped out diphtheria, and there is no reason, with continued co-operation why scarlet fever cannot be eliminated by this simple and harmless but effective method."

Referring to the epidemic of scarlet fever the report stated that there had been a total of 273 cases up to the end of May, with January with 97 cases being the peak month. A reduction in the number of cases was predicted for June.

Dr. Fraser said the disease was mild in character, the incidence of complications was low and the administration of scarlet fever toxin to school children checked the epidemic.

In regard to the latter feature it had been found by final Dick tests on those innoculated that 91 per cent. were immune to scarlet fever.

BORROWING AT THE BANK to operate more profitably

FARMING, DAIRYING, STOCK RAISING—and other lines of agricultural business often need improvements or new equipment, to stop waste and make better profits. Good managers in every line of business know where small expenditures would increase efficiency and profits. If they can spare the money from their working capital, they will spend it promptly for such purposes. If they have good security, but not the ready cash, they will wisely borrow.

Wherever, in Canada, agricultural business is carried on, there is a branch of the Bank of Montreal, acquainted with local needs and conditions, ready to consider applications for loans for such constructive purposes.

The Empty Factory

There are few municipalities in Ontario which have not had experience with vacant factory buildings. We doubt if there are any which have not had to contend with this problem, and there has always arisen that difficult question of trying to establish the value of such a building.

Bowmanville has such a problem and it is similar to others. Two years ago the Dominion Organ and Piano Company went out of business. The premises had been erected 66 years ago and they are large. Three floors and basement would describe it, and at the time of closing the assessment was $30,000. The taxes on the property are reported to have been in arrears for three years and the town then seized it. There has been no brisk demand for the place, and the report is the town has sold it for $5,000 on a five-year option during which time the purchaser is paying $100 rental annually. But the premises are not being used.

At first glance it would look as though an individual would be getting a lot of something or other for $5,000 by coming into possession of so great a factory, but the business man will tell you quickly that a purchaser of such a building has taken over a liability and not an asset.

The worth of a factory building is not in the premises which contain the industry but rather in the extent of business which is being done within the premises. When the business ceases to ship goods and receive money and pay employees then the whole thing comes to a stop, including the value of the building. The only value which premises then contain is speculative, and the element of speculation comes because the only chance for value returning is that some other industry may start which will once more put life within the dead walls.

Another obstacle which stands in the way of many of these old factory buildings being valuable is the change in design of such premises. The modern plant is built on entirely different lines. If Bowmanville has actually made a sale by which it will receive $5,000 for its empty factory building which was once assessed for $30,000, then it has done fairly well.

He Appreciated It

There was a great deal of evidence taken by the committee of the Ontario Legislature relating to Hydro and its administration. Much of it—in fact most of it—was merely the effort of the various men who appeared to justify the course they had previously taken.

We have placed at one side a small clipping which seems to remain as one of the most candid statements made during the entire proceeding, and it was the admission of Arthur Roebuck, former Attorney-General, that he appreciated his salary of $8,000 which he received as Hydro Commissioner. It is not often that a statement of that kind is made and a good many people will appreciate the fact that Mr. Roebuck made it.

The Hydro is big business as such things are called, and we have to pay more than that to a good many men who are named as commissioners. Ottawa has a good deal of experience and $10,000 and more is frequently paid; in fact that name commission seems to mean that the salary must begin at the $10,000 mark.

That is what makes it more significant that Mr. Roebuck admitted openly that he appreciated receiving his $8,000 when he was a Hydro Commissioner in Ontario.

Family Tradition

Illustrations published in the Brantford Expositor give a fair idea of the manner in which Preston Park is to be beautified. The park is named in honor of the late T. H. Preston, former publisher of the Brantford Expositor, and at one time member of the Provincial Legislature.

The work is to be done by the Board of Park Management, but the firm Preston and Sons, publishers of the Expositor, has made a contribution of $3,500 which will pay for the construction of a sunken garden and the installation of lily ponds.

There is an interesting and somewhat sentimental interest in the fact that this contribution should come from a firm bearing the name "Preston and Sons," because at the time that name came into existence, it embraced T. H. Preston and his sons, William B., and Harold. During the war period Harold Preston went overseas as an officer and was killed in action, and since then the father has passed on, leaving the present publisher, W. B. Preston as the remaining partner of the original family group. That is what lends a touch of sentiment to the firm "Preston and Sons" making provision to beautify a park named in honor of the one-time senior member.

He Liked The Name

William Simpson, 79, was a farmer near Goderich in Huron county; also he was a bachelor. For the most part he also worked alone. On his last day on earth William Simpson was driving a land-roller and he fell off, having been taken with a seizure. He recovered and after securing a drink of water proceeded to drive some more.

A neighbor passing a short time afterward saw the horses wandering rather aimlessly in the field and on making investigation found that William Simpson was dead.

He was a man of few preferences and generally took things as they came. At least that is what the neighbors said. But he had mentioned some time ago that when he died he wanted six pallbearers all of them with the name "Bill." Apparently William Simpson liked his own first name better than any other. So it was that on the day of the funeral there were six old friends, each of them a Bill to officiate at the funeral of William Simpson who seemed certain that the name Bill was better than any other.

Sitting Down Not The Cure

There was a rough time and plenty of damage when Vancouver police cleared unemployed from the post office and Art Gallery after they had been in possession of these buildings for more than a month. As the jobless men left the premises they started smashing windows of stores in the district and reports indicate they went the whole distance.

It was a case of forceful eviction, something which the authorites were not anxious to undertake, but they saw no other way out. The jobless folk showed no inclination of leaving the buildings, and they were there in defiance of all laws and customs.

One does not like to associate service sticks of policemen and tear gas bombs with people who are out of work, but we see no other way in which the post office could have been cleared of those who had squatted there. Nor was there any possibility of a man finding anything to do while he was sitting down in a post office. Even the odd job does not come that way.

The stated object of the taking possession of the buildings in Vancouver was to draw attention to the plight of the unemployed. No doubt it was a sharp method to use, but we doubt if it was one which would ever bring results. A man does not come into possession of any greater liberties or rights just because he is unemployed. He is subject to the same laws and regulations as the employed individual. The chances of some solution of their question is greater with the men outside the post office and the art gallery. Sitting down can hardly be regarded as the cure for anything.

The Jews of Germany

Germany is making it as hard and miserable as possible for the Jews. It had been felt that all money possible had been wrung out of them, and that existence had been reduced to the lowest ebb, but if former treatment was hard then the present is harder still.

When the week started Berlin Jews found that their store fronts had been painted with red signs or destroyed. There were blocks where the signs on store windows read "Whoever buys here is a traitor." It is becoming increasingly difficult for the Jewish folk to purchase food. Hundreds of these folk are now being arrested and sent to centralized camps. Germany makes no secret of her plans. She desires to be rid of the Jews after having taken from them all their possessions.

There is also the demand made on the Rothschild family for the release of Baron Louis Rothschild, now held in Vienna. The figure acceptable to the Berlin government for his release is $10,000,000, and this is asked on the theory that it is compensation for losses suffered when a bank with which he was connected collapsed in 1931. London financiers see in this policy of holding Jews for ransom evidence of an intense need for foreign currency on the part of Germany.

All these events are in themselves distressing to the Jews, but they have equal significance elsewhere. There is evidence of an entire lack of honorable dealing by official Germany, and it is this same official Germany with which Britain and other world powers must deal in framing of international policies. There are not two German governments—just one; there are not two sets of officials—just one. Persecuting Jews is not a British habit, and it must be galling to British statesmen to negotiate or deal with a government to which Jew-baiting is a matter of accepted policy.

Cows In The Day's News

It seems that cows are receiving more attention today than ever before. We would say a great deal more. Yesterday there was an item on the wire from Tacoma, Wash., and we dare say it was sent to every daily newspaper on the continent, and it told about the death of a cow. She had quite an attractive name, Stellacoom Prilly Ormsby Blossom, and what's more she died in the barns of the Western State Hospital, so we take it that Blossom (for short) was probably getting care and attention during her last illness.

She was a Holstein, 16 years and nine months old and had raised a family of fifteen. Her lifetime milk production was 258,209 pounds, and the claim is made this was the highest production figure ever recorded. So it may well be that some of these cows are earning the right to find a prominent place in the news of the day.

On the Tenth Concession a cow was just a cow. Now and then a cow might get her name in print, but it would probably be when some person was holding a clearing sale on the eve of retiring from farming and on such an occasion there would be eight, nine or ten cows all put in together. They might possibly have their ages given, but even so they remained just cows.

This famous cow lived until she was nearly 17 years old, but grandfather always made certain he never had a cow on his hands at that age. He admitted he had known of one cow that had lived to be 25, but was certain the man who owned it must have been full of sentiment.

It is not likely that any of the cows along the Tenth Concession ever produced 258,209 pounds of milk during a lifetime. There was no box score kept then for the cows to worry about, nor was there a record of the amount of cream in the milk. The cows just did the best they could; they lived happy and contented without the pressure of efficiency being placed upon them, nor was the urge for greater poundage continually emphasized. They were for the most part just cows, and for that reason never had things printed about them in the papers. Not even when they up and died.

SALADS

(By A. R. K.)

¶ My Cousin Ezra and his wife, lead quite a normal sort of life, it seems that way to me; it's when we strike a spell of heat, deciding on the things to eat, that they will disagree.

¶ Now Ezra's wife's a salad fan, she thinks they're good for any man, she makes a dozen kinds; she's always reading in a book, and learning of new things to cook, tries everything she finds.

¶ But Ezra's appetite is good, when he is feeling like he should, and he consumes a lot; he keeps right on at eating stuff, and seldom can he get enough, nor quits because it's hot.

¶ When Ezra sees a salad come, he thinks his meal has just begun, and there'll be plenty more; when Ezra finds he's had his meal, he's apt to shiver in the keel, and let out quite a roar.

¶ His wife explains to Ezra how, such food will cool his heated brow, then arguments begin; then Ezra's voice is filled with grief, he calls for heavy cuts of beef, his ribs are caving in.

¶ For Ezra claims that all this heat, don't change the things he needs to eat, he's got to keep up steam; he wants his spuds, he craves for stew, if he don't eat a pound or two—he'll start on turning lean.

Cement Bags In House Debates

(From Parliamentary Debates)

Mr. ROGERS: I have a telegram just received from W. L. Somerville, the architect in charge of the work at Fort Henry. He was president of the Canadian Architects' Association last year—

Mr. BENNETT: What has he to do with it?

Mr. ROGERS: —and I assume my right hon. friend will have no complaint to make about the quality of his evidence.

Mr. BENNETT: What has he to do with the cement?

Mr. ROGERS: I might place this telegram on Hansard. It is addressed to me as Minister of Labour:

In June, 1937, contractor at Fort Henry obtained permission to borrow cement which was duly returned.

He was the architect on the job acting for the provincial department of highways.

Mr. BENNETT: That does not give any power with respect to this. I asked, When did the contractor obtain the consent? The minister said he had the consent of the provincial government.

Mr. ROGERS: In June, 1937.

Mr. GRAY: Where is the dishonesty?

Mr. BENNETT: In treating the property of the crown thus. This is not a case of two contractors. This is a case in which I say that without anyone checking the cement out of these cars, Drinks was hauling it to the Crain contract at Queen's university.

Mr. ROGERS: Both ways, in fact.

Mr. BENNETT: And he also was taking some to the fort, and the paper bags are the basis of the count that determines who shall pay.

Mr. HOWE: The counting of bags went out when the cloth bags went out.

Mr. BENNETT: Excuse me; it did not.

Mr. HOWE: They have no more importance than the paper bags you buy full of pop-corn.

Mr. BENNETT: I admit the hon. minister has had considerable experience, for some of which this country has paid.

Mr. THORSON: And got value for it too.

Mr. BENNETT: Go to Prescott. Let us go a step further. The minister says that paper bags are of no importance. But they give the count for the delivery, because there was no man there. That is the reason why they were preserved. As a contractor he should know that.

Mr. HOWE: I know no such thing. The delivery of sacks of cement is counted by the sacks themselves; the paper bags have no value as counters or in any other way. The right hon. member is talking about twenty years ago when cement was delivered in cloth sacks, and the bags had to be returned for credit.

Mr. BENNETT: Surely the Minister of Transport is not going to get away with that sort of statement. He knows prefectly well the cloth bags were counted as they were delivered back to the company from which they came.

Mr. HOWE: And paid for.

Mr. BENNETT: And credit was given for them. The paper bags were counted merely for the purpose of ascertaining how many bags of cement had been delivered, which is an entirely different matter. This truckman loaded so many bags of cement, paper bags, he took them to Queen's, and from Queen's the empty bags were taken back to the fort. Why they were taken there I do not know—

Mr. HOWE: But the right hon. member insinuates.

Mr. BENNETT: I said the evidence was that they were taken there at night, and I asked why.

Mr. ROGERS: And you said it was dishonest.

Mr. BENNETT: So it is. It is a dishonest transaction for anyone to take cement belonging to the crown and use it on a private job on the say-so of the architect.

Mr. ROGERS: The architect was representing the provincial government and was in full charge.

Mr. BENNETT: He was in Toronto. The one to give the consent is the crown, who signed that contract.

Mr. ROGERS: He was representing the government.

Mr. BENNETT: He did not represent the government with respect to that. It is distinctly provided, unless this contract is different from any other—and what is more, these contracts for joint work by the federal and provincial governments provided for supervision by the federal government.

Mr. GRAY: Does the right hon. gentleman say that this government lost any bags of cement in the transaction? That surely is the question.

Mr. BENNETT: I was observing, Mr. Chairman, when I was interrupted—

Mr. GRAY: Will the right hon. gentleman answer that?

Mr. BENNETT: When I was interrupted, Mr. Chairman—

Mr. GRAY: Will the right hon. gentleman answer that question?

Mr. BENNETT: This is the hon. member who examined with respect to the cost of my living, and I do not answer his questions, if I can avoid doing so.

Mr. GRAY: I suggest I made a fair job of it.

Mr. BENNETT: I have never forgotten that.

Mr. GRAY: I noticed that.

POWER OF THE PRESS.

(Pittsburgh Press)

LORD ROTHERMERE, newly arrived from London, severely criticized the American press for publishing "war talk." Said he: "It spreads all over Europe and is doing harm."

We should really be more careful. The first thing we know, there'll be a war in Spain; and Germany may annex Austria, Italy may invade Ethiopia, Japan may attack China and the nations of Europe may even begin to arm.

The power of the press is an awesome thing. We on this side of the Atlantic should remember our responsibilities and learn to weigh our words. May it never be said that any careless phrase of ours became the cause of ill feeling in that now serenely happy family of nations called Europe.

• They Are Closing In On Bingo

(By Chester L. Shaw in Christian Science Monitor)

THERE ARE indications that the authorities of New York City are at last waking up to the evil of the game known hereabout as Bingo, and eventually will smash it just as they did the slot machine racket several years ago.

The two boroughs worst overrun with this game that making gamblers of women and children who never dreamed of it before—usually in the name of church or charity—are the Bronx and Brooklyn (though Queens is a close runnerup) and it is there that the broom has started sweeping.

District Attorney Samuel J. Foley of the Bronx began the cleanup early in April when he raided the North Side Republican Club, arresting not only two operators of the game but the president of the organization. The men drew sentences of thirty days in the workhouse, which were suspended on condition that they stay away from Bingo.

Charges of prejudice were immediately raised because Mr. Foley is a Democrat. Mrs. George Quimby, Jr., wife of the president of the club, declared: "Why, everybody in the Bronx plays Bingo. The ministers and the priests play it, too, and if my husband is guilty of a crime so are they."

The District Attorney retorted that it was the first complaint which had stood up under investigation and promised that the game would be sternly suppressed henceforth because professional gamblers and racketeers were taking it over. The authorities had first winked at it because it was held under charitable auspices.

Special Sessions Justice Bernard A. Kozicke added a warning:

"Bingo attracts people not accustomed to gambling. It attracts women and children. Bingo is moving into the home, and it is getting everyone excited. They expect something for nothing, and that is a fallacy. Remember, Bingo is out in the Bronx."

The next attack on the game occurred in Brooklyn after husbands had complained that their wives were spending grocery allowances on the game. Police raided a game conducted by a Veterans of Foreign Wars post and arrested five men while some 2,00 players—mostly women—rioted to get their 25-cent admission charges back. The next day Magistrate Sylvester Sabbatino refused to rule on the guilt of the defendants and paroled them for hearing later. He defended Bingo as a means of raising money for charity, saying that when he was Exalted Ruler of an Elks lodge "we gave away $1,000,000 worth of goods to hungry people in Brooklyn," and declared that the arrested men should be prosecuted only if it was proved that the bulk of the money was going to racketeers and not to the veterans' post.

Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine thereupon gave the police orders to watch for racketeers. He said the department would not make a concerted drive on games conducted by church, fraternal, or patriotic groups, but would go after those run by professional gamblers.

At present there is no question but that the game has grown into a major evil, not only in New York but in other cities, and by whatever name it may be known. In Boston and New England it is called Beano, in some places it is known as Keno (which is the old gambling house term), and in the movie theaters it passes as Lucky, Screeno, and what not.

• Making A Noise At A Wedding

(Welland Tribune)

POLICE AT London, Ont., recenty summoned several guests at a wedding and had them fined three dollars and costs each in court on charges of creating unnecessary noise.

It appears that the offenders drove cars and tooted the horns almost continuously, which is a familiar performance in many communities and one that is producing much adverse criticism.

Many people seem to be under the impression that a wedding is an occasion for all kinds of unorthodox behavior, forgetting that laws cannot be abrogated to suit the sentiments of a few people. The police everywhere have been lenient on the occasion of weddings and have overlooked conduct that otherwise would be brought under official scrutiny. The result is that things have gone from bad to worse and something that was tolerated as a special privilege has now become to be regarded as a right.

It may be more difficult now to suppress the after-wedding street parades where tin cans tied to automobiles and the use of other kinds of noise-makers produce a hideous din, but it seems as if something would have to be done about it for the abuse is being carried to intolerable lengths. The London case sets a precedent for restrictive action. The great increase of motor traffic on the streets is one important reason why the noisy wedding parade ought to be abandoned. There is danger of accidents in the manner of the car-driving that is characteristic of these celebrations. The revellers would be well-advised to modify their kind of celebration for no one likes to interfere with the manifestations of exhilaration associated with a wedding ceremony, but changed conditions render it necessary to abandon many ancient customs and the wedding street parade is one that is likely to come under the ban.

• Carrying Out Instructions.

(Toronto Telegram)

NOT THE LEAST interesting of the many briefs submitted to the Rowell Commission is that presented by Tim Buck, for the Communist party, Mr. Buck told the commission that "armed revolution, as an instrument of policy," had been "eliminated from the constitution of the Communist party of Canada, though retained in those of the Communist Internationale, to which it was affiliated." There are many points of interest here.

It confirms what was recently said in The Telegram about the policy of "Comintern," which calls itself the "General Staff of World Revolution" and instructs its agents in other countries how to conduct their campaign. Recently Comintern decided that the aims and intentions of Communists were to be camouflaged; that there was to be no talk of war, except of a war of peace, and that the word "peace" was to replace "war" on the program. Mr. Buck, recently returned from Russia, is now carrying out instructions and has told the Rowell Commission exactly what Comintern thinks it should be told.

He told the commission also that Communists were not extreme people and that he himself was a conservative individual. Replying to a question, he denied that extreme views on one side bred extreme views on the other—extreme views came from extreme needs, he said. There are two interesting points here. If armed revolution has been "eliminated" as an instrument of policy, it must have been at one time put forward as an instrument of policy, and by the very people, who, according to Mr. Buck, are not "extreme." This means that they were extreme," yesterday but are moderate today, a change that cannot be accounted for by any change in the needs, for these are as extreme as they ever were. There is the other point: From what "extreme needs" did the "extreme views" of the Fascists come?

The one thing that stands out in Mr. Buck's brief, is that the Communist party, here as elsewhere, acts on direction from Moscow. It is extreme when Comintern decrees that it shall be extreme, it is moderate when Comintern decides that it is the better policy, and it will be extreme again when Comintern thinks the time is ripe for a new change. It will be interesting to watch the efforts of Mr. Buck and his friends to persuade the people that they are devoted to peace, but it is always to be remembered that they are acting under instruction from the "General Staff of World Revolution."

HOUSE ON A GLACIER.

(House of Commons, Hansard)

MRS. MARTHA LOUISE BLACK (Yukon): May I say a few words, as probably the only member who can hope for nothing from this (housing) bill? It has been said that at 35 years of age the House would be too old. Our homes in Dawson are built largely on a glacier. The home in which I live, a frame house, is almost 40 years old. It still stands; it is still comfortable and I expect to live in it as long as our people up there send us here.

SUCH IS FAME

(Leonard Lyons, in New York Post)

THE YOUNG wife of a Federal Liquor Board member attended a Washington dinner recently and sat next to a distinguished-looking lady. She introduced herself and asked: "And now will you tell me your name?" "Certainly," the other informed. "I have two names— Dorothy Thompson and Mrs. Lewis" "Which Mrs. Lewis are you?" the young lady continued "Mrs. Sinclair Lewis," Miss Thompson replied. "My dear, the young lady returned, "if I had a lovely name like Mrs. Sinclair Lewis I'd never use such a common name like Thompson."

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

THE WORKS of the Lord are great, sought out of all them that have pleasure therein. . . .

They stand fast for ever and ever, and are done in truth and uprightness.—Ps. cxi, 2, 8.

But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is worth the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. . . .

But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up.

Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting into the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat?

Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.—II Pet. iii, 8, 10-13.

WHAT THEY EAT

(Glasgow Bulletin)

THE KENNEDY family, accustomed as they are to American newspaper ideas, must be a little startled at the amount of publicity they are getting in this country. Even their meals are considered "news" in London. Last week some one recorded the surprising fact that (a) they don't drink tea, and (b) they have dinner in the middle of the day and not in the evening!

In diplomatic circles, I suppose, that is unusual, but Mrs. Kennedy has nine children with hearty midday appetites, and no doubt she finds it more convenient to adapt herself to thm than adapt them to the conventions of London.

A Bit of Nonsense

RATED AS FORTUNATE

The earnest flower-seller waved a bunch of his wares in the face of the well dressed young man.

"Here you are, sir," he said, "buy a bunch of flowers for your sweetheart."

"No, thank you," said the young man, "I haven't got a sweetheart."

The flower-seller was prepared for this reply.

"Buy some for your wife, sir," he persisted.

"I am not married," snapped the young man.

"Well, buy the 'ole blinking lot to celebrate you luck," put in the flower-seller.

Seven Nurses Are Graduated From Nicholls Hospital

"The young woman who chooses to devote her time and energy to the nursing profession is admired the world over," said E. F. Mason in his opening remarks to the 1938 class of Nicholls Hospital, whose graduating exercises were held in the Collegiate Auditorium Monday evening, and attended by a large gathering of friends and relatives, members of the Hospital Board, and professional associates.

Mr. Mason spoke also of the high standing Nicholls Hospital nurses had achieved in their profession, which, he said, was due in great part to the efforts of the superintendent, Mrs. E. M. Leeson, and the instructress, Miss Edyth G. Young.

Mayor James Hamilton, in a brief address, congratulated the graduates on their attainment, and urged them to remain true and steadfast at all times to the high traditions of their training school.

In addressing the graduating class of seven, Rev. Canon W. P. Robertson, after extending a warm welcome to the large gathering present, spoke of an oft-mentioned dream of his that the nursing profession be placed on a salary basis, which would enable a nurse to earn a steady livelihood, and at the same time make her services, which are so necessary, available to every family. He stressed the need for recreation, cautioning the girls to take time off from their duties to read good books, hear good music, and cultivate a worthwhile hobby. "A cheerful smile, a kindly face, a gentle hand," said Canon Robertson, "can be as valuable in sickness as any technical knowledge which a nurse may possess."

Diplomas Conferred.

The impressive ceremony of the affirmation and the conferring of diplomas was conducted by the chairman, E. F. Mason; and Mrs. E. M. Leeson, superintendent, presented the medals to the graduates, radiant and smiling in their crisp white uniforms, and proudly wearing on their caps the narrow black band which signified the successful termination of three years of work and study. Each girl carried an arm bouquet of roses, tied with the hospital colors of purple and gold.

The graduates were as follows: Muriel Irene Baker, Hampton, Ont.; Marjorie Adelaide Ashie, Mille Roche; Laura Evelyn Davidson, Morganston; Leafa Mae Linn, R.R. No. 3, Campbellford; Jean Crighton Kingdon, Lakefield; Helen Marion Thom, Lucknow; Mary Ethelda Weidmark, Picton. The dedicatory prayer was offered by Canon Robertson.

Dr. H. V. Dobson, chairman of the medical staff, gave an interesting address in which he spoke of the remarkable advancement made in the field of medicine and surgery, and traced the history of medicine from its beginning in medieval times up to the present day, mentioning the contributions to the advancement of the profession made by such well-known personalities as Lister, Pasteur and Florence Nightingale. In his closing remarks, Dr. Dobson congratulated the girls, and wished them bon voyage on their journey from the three years of training into the actual practice of their profession.

Proficiency Prizes.

Two proficiency prizes awarded by the Trustee Board were presented. First, $25.00, to Muriel Irene Baker, and second, $15.00, to Marjorie Adelaide Ashie. These were presented by the secretary, E. B. Fowler.

The prizes for the second year students, donated by the medical staff for highest marks in examinations, awarded to Elva Bernice Bell, Campbellford, and Marjorie A. Huston, Peterborough, were presented by Dr. Agnes J. Moffatt. First year students who won prizes for bandaging were Anna Mae Renwick, Keene, and Agnes Irene Durand, Kingston, which were presented on behalf of the medical staff by Dr. W. J. Gordon.

A special feature was the presentation by Mrs. S. J. Graham, president of the Nicholls Hospital Women's Auxiliary, of a gift to each girl of the graduating class on behalf of the Auxiliary.

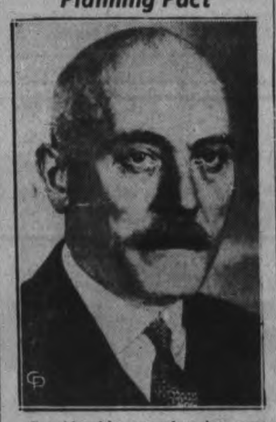
Secretary's Tributes.

In introducing Mrs. Graham, Mr. Fowler spoke of how greatly the splendid work of the Nicholls Hospital Women's Auxiliary was appreciated by the board, and expressed his gratitude to the many other societies and individuals who were taking such an active and helpful interest in the welfare of the hospital.

The program was interspersed with a musical program under the direction of Frederick G. Mann, organist and choir leader of St. John's Anglican Church, which included two delightful duets by Master Leslie Groombridge and Master Ernest Mason, and vocal solos by Victor Coleman, "Drink To Me Only With Thine Eyes" and "Scenes That Are Brightest." The National Anthem concluded the program.

A reception for the graduates, their friends, and members of the Trustee Board was held in the Collegiate gymnasium following the graduation ceremony.

Planning Pact



Considerable apprehension was felt as the result of a report circulated from Berlin sources to the effect that Count von der Schulenberg, ABOVE, German ambassador to Soviet Russia, is engaged in an attempt to negotiate a non-aggression pact with Soviet Dictator Josef Stalin. The report was vigorously denied by Soviet and German authorities.

Flood-Wrecked Train Carries Over 40 To Death

Plunging through a railway bridge weakened by sudden flood, the Olympian, crack train of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad crashed into the swirling water of Custer Creek, Montana, early Sunday morning in one of the worst disasters in U.S. railroad history. Twenty-nine bodies have been removed from the wreckage of the steel coaches, where a total of nearly 150 passengers were trapped, and the total death toll was estimated between 60 and 100 by observers. Of the rescued, 64 were classed as injured. Site of the disaster is about 20 miles from Miles City. These two views of the wreckage show the de luxe train crumpled and partially submerged in the bed of the creek as rescue squads worked with acetylene torches to cut through to the trapped victims. Custer Creek is normally only a shallow stream.

Rotarians Meet At Paul Farm Smith Township

The Peterborough Rotary Club had an unusual and beautiful setting for its weekly meeting Monday night when the members and their wives gathered at Springdale Farm, the Paul homestead in Smith township and partook of a most excellent chicken supper served by the women of Gilmour Memorial Church.

The long tables were set on the fine lawn of the picturesque farm home and the menu was enough to convince the Rotarians that Canada is still the land of plenty—especially rural Canada.

Springdale Farm has been in the possession of the Paul family since it left the hands of the Crown over a hundred years ago. The large and comfortable farm house erected some 85 years ago was built almost entirely of materials manufactured on the property itself, the timber being cut and sawn there and the bricks made in a home-made kiln.

Monday afternoon it was fittingly enough the scene of a tea that celebrated the 100th anniversary of Gilmour Church and many old time members attended the event. A feature was the wearing of old costumes by some of the women present, adding romance and color to the scene. Among the guests was Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe of Murray St. Baptist Church.

The centennial tea was barely over when the Rotarians arrived for their share in the program and tea was served to them shortly afterward with piles of chicken, an imposing array of salads and pickles and a march past of pies of all varieties but of uniform excellence.

Short Program Enjoyed

After this epic repast a short program was enjoyed, with the artists using the verandah of the Paul home as a stage and the audience the lawn as an auditorium. Rotarian John Smith led in community singing with George Nicholls at the piano. Margaret and George Young contributed an enjoyable duet, "Shine On, Silver Moon," Mrs. Audrey Patterson and Jim Goselin delighted with a tap dancing number and Jack Lewis and Jack Flagler, two young singers, each offered vocal numbers that were thoroughly appreciated.

Before the affair terminated with the singing of the National Anthem, Rotarian W. R. Morris expressed the thanks of the Rotary Club to the women of Gilmour Church for the much-appreciated hospitality.

Plows Up Gold Bars

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 21 — (AP).—Dallas Jordan, a negro, plowed up three bars of gold on his farm near here and to-day he was en route to Washington, D.C., to convert them into cash. It was estimated the gold was worth $2,000. A similar bar of gold was found by a negro woman on an adjoining farm a few years ago. Some residents of the section suggested the treasure was buried by Blackbeard, the pirate, who once operated in this section.

One of the big attractions on Saturday will be Jim Hunter's special radio broadcast at 6.30 p.m. (Standard Time), from Tweed, over CFRB. All may see and hear Canada's premier radio news reporter in action. Alf. Scadding, of Moose River fame, will appear at the amateur show at night, where $35.00 in prizes will be offered. Novelty sports, softball and a midway will be other features for Saturday.

Sunday will be devoted to fraternal church parades, decoration service, and band concerts.

On Monday morning, July 4, Hon. Colin Campbell, Minister of Public Works, will officially open Tweed's new bridge. The afternoon program will consist of power boat races, with leading drivers of the Province battling for the four beautiful trophies. An aerial display will be given by planes from Trenton Airport.

There will be dancing and floor shows every night at Tweed Pavilion, and various other forms of entertainment during the four days.

A big street dance, with Russ. Creighton's CFRB Orchestra supplying the music, will bring the celebration to a glorious conclusion on Monday night.

Just Warming Up

STRATFORD, Ont., June 21 (CP). —The little girl was the first at the table when officials called the Sunday school picnic party to the meal. She was the last to leave after a most consistent performance as an eater. Just as she was leaving an amazed Sunday school official suggested perhaps she would lie down for a while. She floored him with the news she was attending a family reunion and had to hurry or she would be late for the meal.

SCHMELING CONFIDENT OF VICTORY DESPITE AGE HANDICAP

Gamblers Pay 9 to 5 Odds On Louis Win

NEW YORK, June 21—(AP)—Max Schmeling, bronzed and ready after five weeks of hard training in the mountains, comes into town tonight for the crucial fight of his long career, tomorrow night's 15-round tussle with Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis at Yankee stadium.

It will be a far different entry from the one made by the German schlager two years ago, when he came in for his first bout with the wonder Negro. Fight experts on that other occasion thought they heard the tumbrils rolling through the streets, and the odds were 6 to 1 and up that Schmeling was a goner.

This time he comes as the proud, confident conqueror, certain that by midnight tomorrow he will be hailed as the first man to regain the heavyweight title. He knocked the young Negro out in the 12th round of their first meeting, and he means to do it again before an expected throng of 75,000 and a $900,000 "house."

Again the weight of expert opinion is against the 32-year-old German, but only a slight degree by comparison with the 1936 fight, when Max predicted his own victory almost exclusively. This time a comprehensive poll of the experts reveals about 40 per cent of them like his chances.

The gamblers still are offering attractive odds. They will lay $9 against your $5 if you fancy Schmeling.

Latest ex-champion to toss in his nickel's worth is Old Jack Johnson. He is approximately the same color as Louis, but he thinks Joe still has a lot to learn, and that Schmeling will repeat his victory. Jack Dempsey by this time has picked each man a half-dozen times. Officially he likes Schmeling; privately he thinks Louis will win by a knockout.

Heavy Advance Sale.

The town is filling up fast with ticket-holders, and the advance sale continues brisk. It is evident, though that the weather must remain elegant today and tomorrow and there be a hefty sale at the stadium if Jacobs is to realize his dream of a $1,000,000 gate. Radio and screen rights may boost the gross over the charmed figure.

As for their first fight, Schmeling has purchased the movie rights for Germany, and they will bring him a chunk of money if he wins. He cleared over $50,000 on the 1936 reels.

Max Cocksure.

Max's latest observations reveal that he is as cocksure as ever of the result, and even a little spiteful in his evaluation of Louis.

"He talks much about knocking me out," said Max, "but he remembers how I hit him. Don't worry—he remembers. He knows that he hit me, too, and that I took it."

Louis, who appears to have developed a genuine distaste for the German, repeats doggedly that he will score a quick killing.

George St. Leads Juvenile Section

George St. Juveniles copped a 25-14 win over Mark St. last night in a Church Softball League affair to decide first place and put a team into a bye for the finals. George St. took advantage of wildness on Davis' part in pitching and erratic fielding by his teammates to win easily. Bedford and Duncan led the hitters. Except for the fourth frame, Mark St. were pretty well stopped by Routley's flinging. Nichols and Eason led the hitting attack for the losers. The teams:

George St.—Willshaw, c; Hamilton, 1b; Bedford, 3b; Parnall, lf; Graham, lf; Routley, p; Henry, 2b; Saunders, ss; Duncan, cf; Woodgate, rf.

Mark St.—Moore, 2b; Manbeck, cf; Nichols, 1b; Curtis, 3b; Eason, lf; Agnew, rf; Davis, p; Robinson, c; Scriver, ss.

NEW YORK, June 21 (A.P.).—It's Louis in 10 rounds (or less) in this book....There is no danger John Roxborough and Julian Black, who manage Joe Louis, parting company despite reports.

Jack Dempsey was surprised the other day to get a letter from Belfast, Ireland, thanking him for an autographed picture he sent a sick boy there two years ago....Jimmy Braddock, now refereeing in small clubs here, will be on the big time soon and shows promise of becoming one of the best.

Lou Ambers will train at Napanoch, N.Y. (where Schmeling prepped for the first Louis fight) for his July 26 lightweight title fight with Henry Armstrong....Armstrong's newly-won welterweight title will not be at stake....Reporters had Tommy Farr steaming by telling him Max Schmeling said he wasn't even a good sparring partner (which Max didn't)...."Why, the bloody blighter," yelled Tommy...."I'll fight him for nothing and in Hitler's back yard."

Bill Terry is convinced his present lineup won't win the National League pennant and has sent out an SOS to his scouts.

Dick Merrill, the aviator, who travels with the sports crowd, cleaned up $7,400 at Aqueduct the other day....Harry Sharpe, 68, of St. Louis, is a fight visitor....This may not mean much to the present day crop, but Mr. Sharpe knocked out Frank Crosby in Mameoki, Ill., on February 5, 1893, in the 77th round of what is said to be the longest fight ever held under Marquis of Queensbury rules to end in a knockout.

Motorists Win From Westclox

Motorists climbed into first place in the City Softball League standing last night at the Bowl with an 11-9 win over Westclox. It was a hectic game before a big crowd of fans, with each team scoring three runs in a wild-eyed ninth heat. An argument resulted in the fourth when Kearns belted a long drive, Westclox maintaining it was a two-base hit — according to a ground rule — but the umpire ruling it a clean homer. Parsons and Strickland were the opposing twirlers and both were hit hard, besides issuing several walks and having but a few strikeouts. Their support was mostly fair.

Dormer led the losers at bat with four bingles in six times. O'Leary got three, while Mowry hit a double and two singles, and Foster came through with a double and single. For the winners, Kearns got a homer and three singles. Starr belted out a four-bagger and single, and Weir hit a double and single, with Crowe also having a double. Fielding features were turned in by Weir, Crowe, Kearns, O'Leary and Ellis, the latter piling into the stand, but hanging on to a foul fly. The teams:

Westclox — Dormer, 3b; Ellis, 1b; O'Leary, cf; W. Calladine, 2b; Foster, rf; Curry, lf; Gainey, ss; Parsons, p; Mowry, c; Bateman.

HASTINGS, June 21.—The Clerks lengthened their lead in first place in the local softball league when they defeated the Outlaws 10 to 9 last night. McKee, the Outlaw pitcher, walked 6 men in the first inning, which saw the Clerks bat around. L. Gibson clouted 2 triples, I. Bonds of the Outlaws led all batters with 3 hits in 4 times up. The teams:

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

ALL ROADS, IF they're not running water, will lead toward the lacrosse arena down George St. tonight. On account of the stupendous, magnificent and colossal exhibition lacrosse match at nine o'clock. Fooling aside, it'll be quite a spectacle with the noted Orillia Terriers, headed by Bucko McDonald, playing the Petes. Ought to jam in a record crowd of local and district customers. Bucko is the main star with the Terriers, being a bruising bouncing player who scores a lot of goals in pro hockey and in lacrosse. But there are other stellar performers aboard the Orillia outfit. Piper Bain, ex-pro gutted-stick expert. Don Willson, who is also with Montreal Canadiens. And Jerry Connell, just signed with Toronto Leafs. Not forgetting the veteran goalie, Bill McArthur — though young Hall is shining in goal for 'em now. The Curran boys, Bottger, Snowden, Steggall, et al. Their numbers are listed elsewhere.

* * * * * *

TWO TICKET booths will handle the crowd efficiently this e'en ducats being 35 cents for adults and 15 for kids. Frank Randle will have his Petes at top strength and ready to crowd the smart Terriers all the way, but don't lay more than a deuce or so on the locals to win out! But it will be a mighty interesting exhibition and with gents turning it on who know all the answers in the gutted-stick game. They don't make lacrossers any better than these Orillia Terriers. At that, we imagine there'll be several of the homesters tonight who will not look very much outclassed — gees like Worthy Crowe, Whitton and a few more. Don"t pass up this number, folks.

YOUNG PETES play Bowmanville here tomorrow eve at Riverside Park in a Lakeshore Junior Baseball League tilt. Shapes up as a scrappy affair between well-mached teams, the probable loop finalists as the schedule winds up. Or are we too high on the locals? Herb Ralph has a smart squad lined up here this season and they'll take a lot of beating. Meaning, it'll take a lot to lick them. Dunno who'll hurl maybe Gee Clark. The kids deserve some support from the fans as they haven't many home games and can use the dough. Can't we all? But folks will see a snappy ball game between good junior teams.

* * * * * *

THE JUNIOR City Ball Loop is running along okey-doke these days at the Exhibition Grounds. Cubs clash with Tigers tomorrow at 6.15 p.m., and Greyhounds play Pirates on Friday. Good ball is played before slim crowds and the kids are really hot for the big diamond game after a long layoff. They need more balls, though, and donations will be received with gratitude. Bantam teams will organize for their schedule tomorrow eve at 7.00 in the Ex. and all interested should attend. First half of the junior schedule concludes June 29th, and second section will be drawn up then. It is likely the winner will ankle into O. B. A. playdowns. But more again.

WE HEAR THERE are all sorts of applications rolling in these days to the Orfuns' Rugby Club officials for jobs for senior gridders. Ever since it was made known that Peterborough would play senior rugby this fall out-of-work huskies from all over Ontario have been writing in. But none are being taken at this time of year. A meeting will be held next month and the big list of prospective players checked over. Meantime plans are going ahead to raise finances to start the season off. Kingston scribe writes: "Leo Deadey, Petes' outfielder in the C. O. B. L., who played on the end of the line for Argos Canadian football champions, will turn out with the Petes' senior grid team next fall. The Petes are looking for a good kicker and have considered Johnny Munro, the Tricolor star." Likewise Dyte of Barrie.

NOT SO VERY long ago Manager Shorty Barrett was on the spot with his Motorists of the men's City Softball League. He was having trouble rounding up a good team and was tempted to throw up the sponge. Then he got going but the Westclox crew kept knocking his gang off and there was a bit of dissension in the ranks. But last night at the Bowl, the scrappy gang of Motorists took an 11-9 nod over Wesclox to move into first place in the loop standing. And you can't go much higher — if you can even manage to hang in there. Neither team got much pitching as it was strictly a hitters' night. With plenty of bingles, and a goodly share of arguments. Chuck Kearns had quite a night of it with the winners, bashing out a homer and three singles in six tries and pulling off a fine catch in the right garden. His homer was disputed by Westclox but allowed by ye umps. A lovely game all around. Westclox are at Omemee on the morrow.

CHURCH Softball tilts tonight are: George St. vs. All Saints Bantams at Prince of Wales, winner gaining first place and a bye to the finals; Knox Bantams vs. St.James at King Edward school, winner earning a third-place playoff berth; and tomorrow—Park St. Juveniles vs. Mark St. at Central in a semi-final playoff. Senior squads affected have decided to have a knockout series and the result of the draw has Knox playing Murray St. at the Oval Thursday, winner meeting Mark St. on Monday. Last night Murray St. Seniors took a 9-6 nod over George St. Buzzers, whilst the George St. Juveniles larruped Mark St. by a 25-14 count. Won't be long now in this big and lively softball circuit.

TO DATE IN the C. O. B. L., Oshawa leads in club hitting, followed by the Petes, with the Ponies the weak ones with the willow. Kingston, however, tops us in fielding, while the GM-men trail in that department. Lefty McNally of the locals is the leading twirler so far, with two wins in as many starts. Petes head the standing by half a game, and the oPnies are in the cellar by half a contest. GM-men play in Kingston this eve. Doc Rowden is main hitter to date with a lovely .500 mark in four games, as Tip Miller and Peg Hurst follow him closely. McNally is our best bet at bat, and Bob Elliott leads the Ponies. Wallace, Kitchen, Jamieson, Doll and Foley are others in the charmed .300 circle. Schedule has six more weeks to run and then top two teams playoff in three out of five.

DESE, DEM AND DOSE: Local lacrossers are at home twice this week, playing Orillia Terriers here tonight and Long Branch here Friday. . . . "High-Pockets" McCabe pitched Oshawa Juniors to an 11-2 win the other day in Cobourg, as he hurled two-hit ball and fanned a dozen. . . . A 'Hollinger-Timmins' ball game recently showed five Central Ontario gees, Scarlet, Ford Prout, Hann and Quinn — of Kingston, Napanee or Belleville. . . . The fight broadcast tomorrow night at 10 bells will come over WHAM, WBEN, WGY and WLW. . . . Westclox gals took their sixth straight softball win last e'en in Keene, and now Keene must beat Lindsay here Friday or there'll be a three-way tie for second place. . . . Lacrosse fans should clip out the Orillia list of numbers in tonight's sheet so as to know the players; Bucko McDonald is 7. . . . Those Oshawa junior ball recruits on the senior squad aren't hitting so well Dalton batting .077 and McGarry clouting at a .000 rate! . . . The two U. S. pitchers with the Ponies alsos lap the ball at a .000 clip. . . . Petes have an exhibition game in Port Hope on Thursday and play the Ponies here Sat'day. . . . We know a canoodler who was caught by a lunge yestiddy and yanked overboard but managed to get away after a hard fight; no doubt the lunge will stretch its fins when telling of the big one it lost!

Murray St. Seniors Take 9-6 Victory

Murray St. Seniors of the Church Softball League last night took a 9-6 nod over George St. Buzzers to finish the schedule in a three-way tie for second. Good hurling by Wilson, who fanned seven, and timely hitting, led by Johnston and E. Spencely with three apiece—and F. Spencely and Wilson with two apiece—downed the George St. gang. The Buzzers were fielding better than usual and made five hits count. Parnall with a homer and Ash with two singles accounted for four of their runs. It was a neat game. Teams:

Buzzers: Galley, ss; Skitch, rf; Rennie, p; Weir, cf Ash, 3b; Parnall, 2b; Metcalfe, 1b; Brown, lf; Akers, c.

John L's Scraps Dawn of History In Prize Fights

On the grassy turf of a 24-foot ring pitched among towering, concealing pines in the woods near Mississippi City, Miss., John L. Sullivan knocked out Paddy Ryan in America's first important heavyweight prize fight February 7, 1882.

The Boston Strong Boy, powerful, rough and loud, became fistiana's first generally-accepted world champion.

Boxing was then an outlawed sport. The bout was arranged in great secrecy and the site was shifted several times. Sullivan knocked out Ryan in nine rounds, after 11 minutes of fighting.

Battling with bare knuckles, with a round ending when either boxer should be knocked down or thrown down or should slip deliberately to one knee, the Boston bully battered Ryan so badly that his seconds threw in the sponge.

After seven years of fast living, Sullivan returned to Mississippi for his next major fight—a murderous 75-round duel with Jake Kilrain. Sullivan had won renown and experts thought him unbeatable. Drinking and carousing continually as he travelled, Sullivan required a long siege of conditioning to get ready for Kilrain.

"The champion bore his most fearsome ogre grin as he rushed out, bent on wiping out the ignominy of Kilrain's late rally," a contemporary description of the eighth round read. "Streaked with blood, his bristling black hair on end and his lips drawn back savagely, he presented a terrifying spectacle, an effect of which he was fully aware.

Jake Ran For Life.

"He went at Kilrain like a sledge-hammer upon the other's guard, broke it and drove his quarry a merry dance.

"Stand up and fight like a man! I'm the champion boxer, not the champion foot-racer!' the Boston man cried as Jake sprinted to safety. Sullivan launched the pursuit, cornered his adversary and beat him to grass with a volley of well-timed blows."

Sullivan's courage carried him to the front in the late rounds and Kilrain was so weak he couldn't answer the call for the 76th round. So ended bare-knuckle fighting.

Argos To Conduct Football School

TORONTO, June 21 (CP).—Toronto Argonauts, Canadian football champions, will deploy as gridiron guinea-pigs for a week before settling down to training this fall. The champions will be exhibition "A" when Coach Lew Hayman lectures at the annual University of Toronto coaching school.

Hayman, boss of Argos; Vic Hanson, head coach at University of Syracuse, and Warren Stevens, U. of T. athletic director, make up the faculty. The Scullers are to demonstrate fundamentals and plays for the student coaches. School opens August 29.

Coaches from many parts of Ontario are expected to enroll for the course on latest methods of teaching football and basketball.

Another Edition

HAMILTON, Ont., June 21 (C.P.) — The Dead Horse Corner Gazette, first regular battalion newspaper published in the front lines, has just issued its latest edition, an annual. The paper was started by the Perth Canadian Infantry Battalion in 1915 when they found a press near Dead Horse Corner. They carried the press with them throughout the war, right to the front lines, and continued publication after the war.

Tonight (Tuesday) is the last date for receiving entries for the Central Ontario singles elimination series. . . . On Friday night of this week we will hold a tournament for men — commencing at 7.30 p.m. Draw from the boon and 25c fee. Announcement has been made regarding the Tip Top Tailors competition on Friday, July 1. This is for schedule rinks or rinks of schedule calibre. This is the request of the donor of the cup and the committee intends to support it fully. Games will commence at 1.30 p.m. The 2-1-0 system will be used and the fee is 2.00 per rink.

Continuing the little argument about the rules, how about looking up the book and see what it says about a kitty toucher; about a burnt bowl or kitty; what to do in case someone should fail to score an end on the blockboon; and remember if the other fellow knows the rules and you don't, that's your hard luck. Ignorance of the rules gets you nowhere.

JERSEYS BELT WINGS FOR 7-5 WIN TO REGAIN THIRD PLACE

Orioles Sell Puccinelli To Coast Loop

TORONTO, June 21 (CP).—The baseball-loving burghers of Jersey City are feeling much more friendly toward Bill Terry.

After supporting their International League Club through long years as cellar champion, they had hopes of better things when the Little Giants became the No. 1 club in the New York chain. They had another cellar club last year and didn't complain much, but this spring they felt a trifle peeved because Terry, who handles the "farm" affairs as well as the Giants, didn't send them more good players. They wanted to compete on even terms with the Yankees' Newark farmhands.

When Terry got Alex. Kampouris from Cincinnati to do his club's second-basing, his first move was to send Mickey Haslin to Jersey City, and for that the burghers are giving thanks. Likewise Boss Bill needs a third baseman now since Jo-Jo Moore is laid up and Mel Ott has had to go back to the outfield. But he has declined to summon George Myatt, capable short fielder, from the Little Giants. That calls for another dose of gratitude.

Regain Third Place.

Haslin and Myatt did practically all the work last night as the Jerseys belted over Rochester Red Wings 7-5 and regained third place after Sunday's double defeat had dropped them to fourth.

Mickey, although guilty of two errors afield, hit four-for-four and crossed the plate four times. George belted two doubles and a single in four times up and drove in two tallies. The Little Giants had a breeze up to the last few innings, scoring four in the sixth to lead 6-0, but Glen Gaoler weakened and Rollie Stiles had to step in and check a Rochester rally in the ninth.

Baltimore Orioles, who found threatening weather a good enough reason to call off their game with Buffalo, started a rebuilding program by selling George Puccinelli, slugging outfielder of former seasons, to Hollywood of the Pacific Coast League. "Pooch," slumping with the rest of the Orioles, is well below the .300 mark this year.

The Toronto-Syracuse and Montreal-Newark combinations were idle yesterday, having played their games in Sunday doubleheaders.

He Started It

As teams of tennis players from the fours corners of the world battle for supremacy and possession of the Davis Cup, nobody feels better about everything than Dwight F. Davis (above), donor of the trophy. Davis, an American, donated the cup for international competition back in 1900, and has seen the number of aspirants grow year by year from three or four countries to over 30.

Reds Benefit By Frick's Game Ruling

NEW YORK, June 21—(AP)—If you look far enough down in the National League pitching records, you'll find the name of Lou Fette of Boston Bees, and figures to show he has won only one game and lost eight this season. And right beside it you can imagine a big black jinx.

Lou was one of those oldsters who won 20 games for a second-division Boston Club last year. This season he has been making up for that surprising showing by getting all the bad breaks.

In the normal course of events, Fette likely would have had a victory yesterday instead of watching the Bees go down to a 13-inning 3-1 defeat by Cincinati. And at the same time the Reds would have been returned to third place in the standing.

Benefit by Ruling.

The Reds were officially moved ahead of Chicago's Cubs yesterday when League President Ford Frick altered his original ruling on the protested game against St. Louis May 31. Instead of letting it stand as a cardinal victory until it is replayed in August, Frick decided to call it a tie game for record purposes and thus Cincinati moved a few points ahead of Chicago in the percentages.

The Reds remained there when Ival Goodman's triple off Johnny Lanning, Fette's successor, broke up yesterday's game. The Cubs, meantime, were knocking off Brooklyn Dodgers 5-1 behind Bill Lee's seven-hit flinging to keep pace. The only other game yesterday returned New York Yankees to second in the American League by a three-point margin over Boston Red Sox as they conquered St. Louis 8-4 in the replay of Sunday's tie.

In the nine innings Fette pitched, he gave only five hits and one walk, but that pass cost him the victory. Lonnie Frey drew it, took third on an error by Debs Garms and scored after Goodman's fly.

The Bees didn't tie it up until the ninth when Bob Reis, batting for Fette, singled to bring home Bob Kahle. Then in the 13th, Goodman's triple brought in Wally Berger with the winning run and Goodman followed after Buck McCormick's fly.

Cincinnati's rise paved the way for another red-hot series as the Reds come to New York today to take on the league-leading Giants. There's a similar affair starting in the American League. The Yankees, who tied a Major League record when Lou Gehrig, Joe Gordon and pitcher Spud Chandler all hit homers in the fifth to give the Browns a good licking, invade Cleveland. Although virtually tied with Boston, the Yanks are 1½ games behind the pace-setting Indians.

'Aw, Come On, Diz, Don't Take It So Hard'

Last season for Jerome H. Dean was pretty bad, but this one is terrible. The great man, as all the world knows, was traded by Branch Rickey and Co. to the Cubs for $185,000, and after registering three games in the win column, found himself burdened with a sore arm. Now, while his team-mates are battling to overtake the Giants in the east, old Diz is left behind in Chicago, Manager Grimm hoping a complete rest will restore his salary wing to some semblance of its former self. How Mr. Dean feels about everything is illustrated here as he and Mrs. J. H. took in one of the Yankee-White Sox games.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press).

Ival Goodman, Reds—Drove in first run with outfield fly and deciding run with triple as Reds beat Bees 3-1, in 13 innings.

Bill Lee, Cubs—Set down Dodgers with seven hits and three walks and fanned five for 5-1 victory, his eighth.

Flash Gordon and Spud Chandler, Yankees—Gordon smacked two singles and ran out homer inside park; Chandler hit homer and single in addition to pitching eight-hit ball that beat Browns 8-4.

Orillia Terriers Are Here Tonight

Bucko McDonald and his famed Orillia Terriers are billed to play the Petes here to-night at nine o'clock in an exhibition lacrosse match. It should be the outstanding lacrosse game seen in Peterborough this year, and ought to pack in a record crowd of fans. A huge gang last year saw a fine battle between the locals and Terriers here, and they should all be back again. The great Bucko is a colorful and classy player, one of the big scorers and a hard-hitting performer. The N.H.L. star is every bit as good in the gutted-stick sport as in pro hockey ranks. And he has a strong squad built around him, a team that is burning up the O.L.A. Senior A series right now.

The Terriers will likely line up like this, with numbers: Goal, Hall; defence, Connell (2) and Bain (3); centre, Snowden (5); wings, W. Curran (12) and E. Curran (13); rover, McDonald (7); alternates, Steggall (4), England (8), Boetger (6), Coles (9), Willson (10), Smith (11), Brunskill (14), Cassidy (15), and Bill McArthur (16), the latter the veteran goalie. Bain used to play pro lacrosse, McDonald is a Detroit puckist, Don Willson is with Canadiens, and Connell has signed with Toronto Leafs. The Petes will be at full strength, and ready to make it a real lacrosse battle all the way.

Ball Scalper

For lo these many years it has been a custom of sports scribes to refer to the Indians as having "scalped" some team or other when the Cleveland entry in the American League wins a game. One of the Tribe's very best hair-removers is Hal Trosky, smiling at you above. Hal and team-mate Earl Averill have been running one-two in the batting averages all year and knocking runs over the plate in old-time style.

Nationals Lose To Cogs, 5 to 3

Cogs defeated Nationals, 5-3, last night in a snappy South-end Softball League set-to at the Brinton field. It was the Nats' sixth straight reverse. Bateman, in his hurling debut for Nats, pitched nice ball as he fanned five and walked one, but his teammates flaled to hit opportunely behind him. Todd twirled good ball, too, for Cogs, giving the same number of hits, fanning five but walking four. He aided his own cause by getting a double and two singles. A. Pilling and Loucks landed six of the Nats' hits. McDonald looked best for the losers defensively, and Akers and Heal starred for Cogs. The win gives the latter a tie with DeLaval for second place. Teams:

Nats — A. Pilling, rf; Bateman, p; Loucks, 1b; Masters, c; McDonald, cf; Cameron, 2b; D. Pilling, lf; Adamson, ss; Thompson, 3b.

Cogs — A. Heal, 2b; Leggitt, 1b; Todd, p; Mowry, ss; Akers, rf; Murduff, cf; Watkins, c; Mackness, cf; Ridley, 3b.

Score by innings:

Nats	101 000 001—3	10	4
Cogs	101 011 01x—5	10	3

Umpires—Smith and Maloney.

To-morrow night the Little Harlem team goes to Keene and a win will clinch first place for them, while a win for Keene will give them a three-way tie for second place with Cogs and DeLaval. With but four games left in the first half, six of the eight teams are very much in the runnig for the three play-off berths. Remaining games this half will be played at the Brinton diamond on Thursday and Friday evenings.

Keene Loses 9-1 In Girls' Game

Westclox won their sixth straight Girls' Softball League game last night with a 9-1 decision over Keene on the latter's diamond. A win for Keene would have cinched them second place in the first-half race, but now they must play Lindsay on Friday and must win it or they will be in a three-cornered tie for second place. Keene has wone two in five starts. G.C.E. two in six, and Lindsay one in five. The Fletcher squad and Lindsay will clash on Friday at the Bowl at seven o'clock.

The Armour Hill girls last night bunched hits and took advantage of miscues to score twice each in the second and fifth frames, four times in the sixth and once in the seventh. Keene got their lone tally in the sixth, but had runners on base in almost every inning. T. Stalter and B. McDowell divided twirling duties for the losers, with H. Bradley pitching nice ball for the victors. G. Nelson and M. Hawthorne provided fielding features, and two double-plays were run off. The teams:

Westclox — I. Pavy, c; M. Ferguson, ss; M. Allison, 2b; M. Hawthorne, 3b; G. Mortimer, 1b; A. Sturgeon, cf; D. Merrett, lf; McCall, rf; M. Snowden, rf; M. Selkirk, lf; H. Bradley, p.

Keene. — H. Nelson, ss; M. Belle, 1b; D. Cocks, rf; G. Nelson, cf; B. McDowell, 2b, p; T. Mills, c; H. Mongraw, lf; R. Wood, 3b; T. Stalter, p; J. Patterson, rf.

Referees—Batten and Bennett.

Soccer Notes

Deloro will be the guests of the Canadian General in a league game tonight (Tuesday) at King Edward Park. Kick-off at 6.45 prompt. Referee, Jack Hart, Sr.

Permission was granted the Canadian General to travel to Toronto on Friday, July 1, to play the Kenwoods in a return game on Earlecourt Park. Arrangements have been made to carry up a number of fans on that day, and the Toronto executive have guaranteed a splendid banquet and entertainment for the visitors.

Saturday, July 9, has been allocated to the Brinton Athletic Club for the purpose of the Field Day that will include a pre-week of five-aside football in which handsome prizes will be awarded to the finalists. They ask for the co-operation of all soccer players in the city.

Deloro Club will be notified that the field must be put in order before the game next Saturday afternoon in Deloro. The grass must be cut and the goal-posts fixed properly.

The executive was notified by William Downer that his club, the Corinthians, will be ready for action in the Cup competition by next week and he requests that all the veterans who have co-operated with him in fielding this team attend a meeting tonight at King Edward Park. They will have a special practice for Thursday night.

The draw for the Father Phelan trophy resulted as follows: Brinton a bye. Tuesday, June 28—C.G.E. vs. Deloro. Thursday, June 30—Corinthians vs. C.C.F.

The games scheduled for the holiday and the Saturday following were held in abeyance until next Monday night.

Bowmanville Here In Junior Ball

Herb Ralph's entry into the Junior Lakeshore Baseball League, the Young Petes, will play Bowmanville here tomorrow (Wednesday) evening at 6.15 in Riverside Park in a loop fixture. It will be the locals' second home gave of the season and their fourth scheduled match. They have won two and lost one so far and hope to knock over the young Rubbermen here Wednesday. It deserves a big crowd of fans as these junior squads play good baseball and the whole four teams are quite well matched. The Young Petes nosed out a 6-3 decision over Bowmanville last week but will have to hustle tomorrow to repeat the win.

Manager Ralph is uncertain which pitcher to start in this contest, while Hooper, husky right-hand speedballer, is expected to do the throwing for Bowmanville, with Lefty Slemon in reserve. Bowmanville, rather than Cobourg—who beat the Young Petes once this season—is considered the team to beat for the league title this year, and the homesters tomorrow will be hot after a win. Several of the local players, especially their first-sacker, second baseman and Kelly in the outfield, look like good senior prospects. Also a couple of the twirlers. It should be a tidy tilt throughout.

Ontario Government Increases Expenditures In Effort To Decrease Forest Fires

Almost Two Millions Of Dollars Be Spent To Fight Forest Fires.

By PHILIP A. NOVIKOFF
Central Press Canadian Writer

TORONTO, June 21.—Resolved to decrease the tremendous losses caused by fires in provincial forests during past years, the Ontario government has appropriated almost two million dollars ($1,738,000) to be expended on fire-fighting during the coming summer. This is an increase of approximately $200,000 over last year's expenditures.

Already several small fires have occurred in practically every reserve in the province, but little damage was done because of frequent rains during the late spring season. Special parties of firefighters as well as the regular staff, however, have been taken out to strategical points to be prepared to combat the flames in event of another dry spell.

Lightning Chief Fire Cause

Contrary to popular belief, the majority of forest fires are not caused by campers and tourists, but by that forerunner of rain storms—lightning. From statistics shown in the annual report of the department of lands and forests (March 1937), out of a total of 2,264 fires in 1936, 755 were attributed to lightning, 474 to campers, 347 to careless smokers and 272 to incendiaries. Settlers, railway companies, loggers, road builders and prospectors made up the remainder of the parties responsible for starting the forests blazing.

The year 1936 saw the greatest devastation by fire in 13 years. A total of 1,264,433 acres of timber land were razed. Last year, due to a wet season, the loss reached only one-quarter of this acreage. According to forestry experts, it requires two or three years for a second growth of burnt-over jack pine to appear and 65 years before it grows to commercial size. Spruce, a slower growing tree, takes 100 to 200 years to make a comeback. Areas that are swept consistently by fire will eventually revert to unproductive wasteland.

Lookout towers are coming into greater use for guarding forests and locating fires. This year an additional 30 steel structures are being raised in various parts of the province. Many makeshift wooden towers are being erected on high points for use by forest rangers on routine patrol.

Fires Easily Located

In determining the location of a fire, simple rules of geometry are applied. Each tower house is equipped with a circular table, the top of which is divided off into 360 degrees. When the ranger in charge sees smoke billowing from some locality within sight of his binoculars, he brings into use an instrument called the alidade, which is fastened to the centre of the table. After lining up the front and rear sights of the alidade with the smoke he reads the bearings on the table dial and telephones district headquarters, the exact angle of the smoke from his post. Headquarters, in turn, get in touch with another towerman in the locality of the fire and secure his bearings on the fire. With both readings known two straight lines are drawn on a map of the locality at angles reported by the rangers. At the point where the two lines intersect is the exact area where the fire has broken out.

Towers too remote for telephone are equipped with high-frequency two-way radio telephone.

Every possible mode of transportation is utilized for getting fire-fighting crews to the endangered areas with the least possible delay. Aeroplanes, trucks, power boats, railway gas cars and pack-horses all have their part to do. Where the affected areas are inaccessible the men go in on foot carrying pack-sack plunger-type hand-pumps. When the other means are used, small gas-driven pumps, weighing from 88 to 116 pounds, are carried. These small power units are so efficient the stream from them has been known to rip the bark off a tree when more than a mile of 1½-inch hoses and a small nozzle were in use.

Airplanes Play Important Part

Whereas airplanes were considered useful solely for reconnaisance during their inception in 1922, today their importance lies in carrying crews and equipment speedily and safely to distant or isolated points in the lakeland forest districts. There are 17 forestry air bases in the province, the largest of which is at Port Arthur, where three machines are in operation. Four new airplanes have been added to the total provincial quota this year. For contact between airplanes and ground stations each machine is outfitted with a two-wave radio telephone. With such satisfaction have these wireless sets performed that experiments are being made by fire patrol boats and trucks in their use.

Permit Necessary.

In order to enter any provincial forest reserve, one must first secure a permit from the forest supervisor of that district. Annually, an average of 10,000 such permits are issued, covering more than 25,000 campers and sportsmen. The purpose of a permit is to enable the forestry branch to check up on the movements of all persons passing legally through the reserve in case of a fire and to determine, when possible, who caused the outbreak.

To do this the ranger often has to turn detective to establish tangible clue. In one case, a short time ago, the chief of one of the northwestern Ontario districts was flying by airplane over the Rainy river valley when he noticed smoke belching up from a dense bush on the edge of a small lake below.

Ordering his pilot to land the machine near the crackling inferno, they succeeded in extinguishing the conflagration before it ate its way beyond control into the main body of the forest. Upon searching the smouldering ruins, they discovered a charred camper's tent. Poking through the debris, they uncovered a half-burned prescription blank bearing the name of a Minnesota doctor.

Returning to headquarters, the ranger searched through his duplicate file of trespass permits and found that a doctor bearing the same name and address shown on the prescription slip had taken out a permit sometime previously. The medical man was duly informed of the fire and was told that not only was his permit cancelled, but the provincial police would be waiting for him if he dared set foot in Ontario.

In a return communication the doctor admitted his guilt in setting the fire, which first broke out in his tent. So terrified was he when the flames spread to the bush that he fled without attempting to retard them. But, he said, he would like to have his permit reinstated, as he had been making Canada his fishing retreat for several years and was quite willing to pay for all damages caused by his negligence if he could only return. The forestry branch acceded and a few days later received a fat cheque from the Minnesota fish enthusiast.

Modern Equipment Plays Big Part In Fighting Forest Fires

Modern equipment plays an important part in the warfare that Forestry officials are unceasingly waging against forest fires which annually cost Canada millions of dollars. A closeup of a forestry department railway gas car, showing firehose reeled up at the rear is seen top LEFT, while a forest ranger is shown sighting through an alidad from the top of his 100-foot steel tower. A typical forest fire, similar to ones that will be blazing in the next few weeks, is this one, lower LEFT. Small gas driven pumps, lower RIGHT, can develop such a pressure that bark will be ripped from a tree when more than a mile of hose is in use.

SHIP DRUGS BY 'PLANE

To advertise its products a drug and medicine maufacturer in Germany recently flew a shipment of drugs to Athens, Greece, in its specially constructed delivery airplane.

made the subject for political argument.

He agreed that two years ago, when the government acquired a majority share ownership, leaving the original $5,000,000 of capital stock in the hands of the public, he had believed that was the best solution.

But he was now convinced it was better to have the constitution of the bank placed beyond controversy than to sustain his own personal conception of that constitution. To expressions of fear the bank would become a political arm of the government he replied that he personally would never agree to any action of that character.

It was important to have the bank so administered by independent men that such a tradition of non-interference would be built up it would be difficult to break it.

Any government that took office with a majority of followers controlling the House of Commons would have power to change the bank to suit its beliefs, Mr. Dunning replied when Opposition Leader Bennett suggested the move would make the Bank of Canada "a political bank." That was democracy, the Minister added.

Mr. McGeer welcomed the change as "conceding that in money matters even the minister of finance, the Bank of Canada and the government should bow to the will of the people.

"I am satisfied that this is a step toward fulfilment of promises upon which some of us won our elections, and which indicated that the policy of the Liberal party was that it would establish our parliament as a Canadian democratic institution which would be superior to the private money system.

"Under the present practice neither the government nor the Bank of Canada exercise one single bit of control over the volume of credit or currency that is placed in circulation through the chartered banks who are the only ones that can put currency and credit into circulation."

Chartered banks obtained their legal tender from the Bank of Canada without even the cost of printing which they paid before the Bank of Canada was created, Mr. McGeer said. They now had $247,000,000 in legal tender which cost them nothing for interest and enabled them to secure deposits of $2,800,000,000.

With their surplus reserves the chartered banks could increase those bank deposits to $4,800,000,000. "How preposterous then to say that the bank rate policy, which includes a change in the re-discount rate, is one of the major weapons by which we control, through the Bank of Canada, the issue of currency and credit in this dominions."

The Bank of Canada was established first with a share capital of $5,000,000 all held by private investors. In 1936 an amendment was passed adding 102,000 new shares of a par value of $50 and owned by the government, giving it majority share ownership.

Now the government proposes to redeem the 100,000 shares held by private investors, at a rate of $59.20 a share. They were originally sold for $50 a share. The capital will then be reduced to $5,000,000 all held by the government.

clerks being employed, property losses by fire within the last few years have not been restored.

The council agreed with Warden McDonald that an entire day would probably be required for the consideration of these petitions against the equalized assessment which was revised only two years ago. The municipalities were directed to bring their local assessment rolls for 1938, except the northern townships whose representatives would not have time to return for their books.

"If there have been losses in assessment those amounts should be taken off," Reeve W. A. Anderson, Otonabee, remarked, "but at the same time we should be in a position to know what gains there have been during the same time."

Tax On Cottages.

Reeve Anderson said that some of the townships were collecting a county tax rate on summer cottages, but were putting the money in "their own pockets," money which, he said, should go into the county treasury.

"Dummer township hasn't put in a claim," Warden McDonald said, "and some of our ratepayers may think that our council has been letting them down. The fact is that we had a new equalization two years ago at a great expense to the county, and I thought that assessment was set for the next five year. That is my understanding of the law, that the assesment was for five years unless there was some outstanding reason for opening up the assessment question again."

Reeve Milby said North Monaghan had taken the same position, and with that preliminary survey of what is likely to be a major issue of the sessions, the council went on to other business, including the adoption of daylight saving for their meetings.

A suggestion last year by J. J. Duffus, M.P., that assistance might be obtained for a grade separation at the C.N.R. crossing at the county road north of Keene and west of Keene station has apparently encountered some financial impediment. The Dominion Railway Commissioners wrote that they could allot only 40 per cent. of the cost from the grade crossing fund. The estimated cost of putting a highway bridge over the railway was $10,000. Hence, the amount available from that source was $4,000, leaving $6,000 to be contributed by the county council and the C.N.R.

The council had decided that it could afford 15 per cent., or $1,500, the C.N.R. was willing to pay $1,000, leaving $3,500 still unprovided for. It was stated that a local representative of the railway had remarked that the traffic over the line did not warrant any undue expenditure from the railway's funds.

Reeves Milby and Tanner and Deputy-reeve Harry Reid were appointed a committee to consider the Warden's address and prepare a reply.

A communication from the Peterborough city council announcing that the cost of the Governor-General's visit was $199.93, and as the county had expressed a willingness to assume part of the expense, a contribution for that purpose would be acceptable.

Louis Fry, superintendent, and Mrs. Fry, matron, of the House of Refuge asked for an increase in their salaries. Originally they had received $1,000, Mr. Fry wrote, in 1929 it was increased to $1,200, and is now only $840. They have been employed at the county's institution for eleven years.

The inspector of Houses of Refuge in Ontario congratulated the Board of Management on the fine condition of the home and premises, and suggested a few minor improvements.

Church Filled For Services At Bailieboro

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BAILIEBORO, June 21. — Rev. Frank Langford, M.A., D.D., of Toronto, secretary of the Religious Educational Department of the United Church of Canada was the special guest speaker at the annual United Church Sunday School anniversary services on Sunday morning and evening. The services were largely attended by not only members of the local church and Sunday School, but from neighboring church in the district, and Dr. Langford in his usual magnetic way, thrilled both congregations with his impressive and powerful messages, speaking during the morning service on the origin and value of the Bible, and at the evening service on the strength required of Christians to meet and deal with the present-day problems. The local church choir ably rendered the music at the morning serivce, under the direction of Miss Frances Watt, while the local choral class provided the music for the evening service under the capable direction of George Campbell with Mrs. Campbell presiding at the piano. The Bethesda Male Voice Quartette was also present and added much to the evening's service by rendering two beautiful numbers.

Rev. E. M. Cook was present at the evening service and assisted the guest speaker during the worship service.

A thankoffering was asked for and the free-will offering was subscribed to by not only members of the school, but many from outside the local Sunday School.

The church, which has recently been decorated by the Ladies' Aid, looked its best for the occasion, and was beautifully decorated with roses and June flowers.

Find Cockpit Seat In Lake Ontario

HAMILTON, Ont., June 21—(CP)—Walking on the beach at Lockside, three miles east of Winona Sunday, Kenneth MacNaughton, 20 found the leatherette cockpit seat of an airplane an da man's waterproof windbreaker with a zipper attachment and a patched elbow. The seat is believed to be part of the wreckage of a plane lost over Lake Ontario in 1934.

MacNaughton first noticed the seat in two feet of water. The seat was identified at the airport here, as a type used in open airplanes.

It is believed that the seat may be from the ship of two mining men, Jack Nichols and Bert Ashley, lost over Lake Ontario in 1934, and parts of whose plane have been picked up on peninsula beaches since.

Lack Of Funds Forcing Clinic To Cease Operations M.O.H. Reports To Health Board

Well Babies Clinic To Close July 31 Operating 20 Years.

That the Well Babies' Clinic will cease operations at the end of July, because of lack of funds, was the report given to the Board of Health at Monday afternoon's meeting by Dr. Murray Fraser, M.O.H., who recommended that the clinic should be carried on as an activity of the Board of Health.

Dr. Fraser said the Well Babies' Clinic had been operating for 18 or 20 years but was now obliged to discontinue because the sources of its funds had dried up. He was strongly of the opinion that the Board should not allow this work to drop but should undertake it as part of its program.

"The giving of advice as to feeding infants and as to hygiene is an imporant part of health work," Dr. Fraser said as he pointed out that the Board could carry on at a cost of around $100 a year.

It was decided on motion of Ald. Dutton and McCannan that the M.O.H. should present a complete report at the next meeting as to the reasons why the Well Babies' Clinic is dropping out and as to the cost of the Board undertaking the work.

Also over to the next meeting went a suggestion from the M.O.H. that barber shops and beauty parlors in Peterborough should be licensed so that the Health Department might have some control over such establishments. At present, Dr. Fraser pointed out, these places can spring up anywhere and carry on regardless of conditions, so far as the department is concerned.

A motion instructed the M.O.H. to present a report on this question at the next meeting.

Deplorable Conditions

A report from Relief Officer Arthur Metheral as to conditions existing in a house at 362 Mark street which showed seven people living in one room and amid deplorable conditions in regard to sanitation was referred to the relief committee.

"The relief officer might just as well start in now to get another place for that family," commented Ald. Dutton.

A resolution from the city council asking for a report as to stalls and sanitary conditions in local restaurants produced the information that in so far as sanitary conveniences were concerned the restaurants were all up to standard but in the matter of stalls, none of them complied with the bylaw which said there should be no stalls.

Dr. Fraser questioned the responsibility of the Board of Health in regard to stalls which he pointed out were not a matter of health at all but of morals.

Will Amend Bylaw

It was decided on motion of Ald. Dutton and McCanan that as there are no stalls allowed at present, the bylaw should be amended to meet the requirements decided upon by the city council.

The point was raised that if the proprietor of the Home Lunch was ordered to remove the stalls from his place a similar move should be taken against all the other restaurants, all of which have stalls.

The result of the Board's action will probably be that the council will amend the bylaw to permit stalls with partitions some 3 or 4 feet high and all the restaurants will be required to meet that condition.

The Review Printing Company which submitted the lowest price was awarded the contract for printing inspection forms required by the Health department.

Present were: Ald. Walter Stocker, chairman; Ald. Dutton, Ald. McCannan and Dr. Fraser, M.O.H.

The Rambling REPORTERS

THE LADY KNEW HOW

A lad of some eight or ten years was coming along George St. N. last evening swinging a bathing suit. Now and then it would get a shot in the air to indicate the feeling of its owner. Between Edinburgh and Antrim on the west side of the street the garment finally landed in the branches of a tree and the immediate problem was how to dislodge the thing.

The lad went through several movements; he secured a stick to throw at the lodged suit, but that did not work; he secured a slab of some sort and tried to shinny up the tree but he made poor progress. It looked bad.

Finally the lady of the house where the tree was located came out and then things progressed rapidly. She apparently understood exactly how small boys should climb trees for she gave the lad the needed boost and up he went. There was vigorous shaking of a limb and the suit came down. Then as the lad came from out the limbs the kindly lady was on hand to act as support and guide in the business of descent. She seemed to understand exactly how the thing should be done. — K.

Three Teachers Named To Staff

Appointment of three teachers to the staff of Grove Preparatory School, where four of the staff resigned at the end of this term, has been announced by Principal Kenneth Mackenzie. They are Gordon W. Smith, B.A., Queen's University; R. F. Ketcheum, B.A., University of Toronto; Rev. R. J. Howden, St. Clement's Church, Toronto.

Fatherless Boys Honor Dr. Barnardo

The Brotherhood of St. James' United Church on Sunday studied with their leader, Rev. F. W. Craik, the drama of the Crucifixion, with all its cruelty, bigotry, and mob-clamor, confident that Golgotha would extinguish the ministry of Jesus by physical death. Instead, that Good Friday lit a spiritual Flame that opposition only makes burn more ardently.

It being both Flower Sunday and Father's Day the church was beautifully decorated with fragrant blooms. In honor of a famous Father to the Fatherless, Dr. Barnardo, his former wards' society here placed their remembrances about the Communion table. The pastor, Rev. F. W. Craik, spoke feelingly on "The Christ, the Children, and the Church," and in a masterly yet plainly understood sermon he emphasized the necessity of children placing their hands in those of Christ and being led gently and happily along the way to the sanctuary. The musical service was appropriately for the children among the large congregation, with a lovely solo by Mrs. G. Butchart, "The Stranger of Galilee."

Coughs Up Blanket

LONG BEACH, Calif., June 21 (A. P.). — Roma, the 14-foot pet python of Grace Olive Wiley, former curator of the Minneapolis Public Museum, is feeling much better today. A large lump formed midway of her length. Miss Wiley, an expert on diseases of snakes, thought Roma had a tumor and tried all the remedies, but none helped. Miss Wiley tossed a guinea pig into Roma's cage. Hunger outweighing her moodiness, Roma ate. In a few minutes, she began to hiccough. That went on for a day until she coughed up a blanket 4½ feet square.

Not Even Flustered

ST. THOMAS, Ont., June 21 (C. P.). — James McIntyre, Port Stanley, drove his automobile into the side of a speeding Pere Marquette Railway freight train here the other day in a spectacular accident. The 70-year-old man emerged unhurt and almost unexcited, demanding to know why there had been no watchman at the crossing.

Snaring Lunge Nets Fine Of $10

On a written plea of guilty Clifford Calvert of Nogie's Creek was convicted before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., this morning of snaring a maskinonge and was fined $10 and $2.50 costs.

Another fishery charge laid by Fish and Game Overseer I. J. Lyons was also disposed of when D. McNaughton of Young's Point pleaded guilty to a charge of preparing to spear a maskinonge in Lake Katchewanooka on May 1, and was fined $5 and $3.35.

McNaughton was represented by Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., who asked for a minimum fine, pointing out that while the man was technically guilty, he had not attempted to spear a fish on the occasion in question, and that he had a clean record.

Miss Isobel Duke, the millionth visitor to the Empire Exhibition in Glasgow, Scotland, received the freedom of the exhibition for the day and was entertained at dinner.

Two Are Injured When Tire Blows

A motorcycle pilgrimage that had as its goal Montreal and its object the finding of employment terminated disastrously on Monday evening near the Central Smith Cheese Factory when two men, Edmund T. Eberts, Regent Street, and Clifford Drummond, St. Lawrence Street, Lindsay, were injured when a tire on their motorcycle blew out and they and the machine hurtled into the ditch.

The two were en route for Montreal looking for a job when the accident occurred. After a number of motorists had sailed by them after the crash without noticing their plight, the Lindsay men were picked up by Rotarian Ian McRae en route for a Rotary supper at the Paul farm, and taken to their homes in Lindsay. They were not seriously injured, one having his hand hurt and the other suffering from an injury to his side.

Provincial Traffic Officer Lloyd McClure was notified and investigated the accident.

OBITUARY

There was great profusion of floral tributes to the deceased woman, and hundreds of friends were present. Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe of Murray Street Baptist Church officiated. He paid high tribute to the sterling qualities of the deceased woman, told of her keen interest in the work of Murray Street Baptist Church, where she was last year president of the Mission Circle, and where she has always been actively associated with foreign missions. Mr. Sutcliffe also officiated at the graveside service at Little Lake Cemetery.

Registration Of Unemployed As High As Any Time During The Depression

REGISTRATION of job seekers at the Employment Service of Canada here is at as high now as it ever was during the depression, according to Dan Douglas, manager.

Nearly a thousand men are listed on the "live file" and are calling at the office at least once in every two weeks, Mr. Douglas said this morning. Relief recipients must call at least once each week. The number of unemployed registered is twice the figure last year. "Things are just about as slow now as they have ever been," he stated.

A few farm jobs are coming in and the posts are being filled almost as rapidly as they are offered. Increased building in the city is providing work for only a few of the men registered. "There's not much coming in for the men to do." Mr. Douglas said.

Woman Is Given Two Months Selling Liquor

Convicted by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning of the illegal sale of liquor on the night of Saturday, June 4, Mrs. Minera Chew, 212½ Hunter Street, was sentenced to two months' imprisonment in the county jail.

W. J. Arthur Fair, who defended her this morning, announced that he would enter an appeal.

A young man testified that he had visited Mrs. Chew's apartment on the night in question and had asked her for three bottles of beer. She had asked, "Is it safe?" and he had replied, "I hope so," whereupon Mrs. Chew had produced the three bottles and he had paid her $1.20. Upon leaving the apartment with the bottles in his pockets, he was arrested on Hunter Street by P.C. John Stevenson and taken to the police station.

Mr. Fair cross-examined him at length as to what had happened at the police station, and as to any promises that might have been made to him in regard to the statement he gave the police but witness held no promises had been given. No charge had been laid against him so far.

Police Constable Stevenson told of arresting the previous witness and of taking him to the police station.

Identifies Bottles.

He identified three bottles put in as exhibits as those that had been found on the young man, and swore that he had tasted the contents of one of the bottles and it contained intoxicating liquor. The witness told of visiting the apartment of Mrs. Chew shortly after midnight that night, of finding nobody there, of Mrs. Chew being afterward arrested at the home of her daughter-in-law and of her returning with the officers to her apartment, which was searched. Three cases of empty beer bottles and five bottles of whisky were found, the officer testified.

Constable Stevenson told Mr. Fair that the police had a warrant to search the apartment and the document was produced. He said that when he arrested the first witness, a car belonging to Mrs. Chew was on the street outside the apartment, and it was gone when the police afterward visited the place.

The whisky, he told Mr. Fair, had been found behind a chesterfield.

"You found no beer, nothing but empty bottles," asked the defence counsel.

"That was all," said the witness.

Constable Stevenson said that he had only tasted the contents of the bottle, not enough to be intoxicating.

Police Sergeant John Thompson also told of the arrest of Mrs. Chew and of the searching of her apartment afterward. The bottles put in as exhibits, he said, had caps of the Liquor Control Board upon them.

No Charges Laid.

To Mr. Fair he said that the question of what information should be laid rested with the Chief Constable. So far as he knew no charge had yet been laid against the young man who swore he bought the beer from Mrs. Chew.

This completed the Crown's case and no evidence was offered by the defence.

Mr. Fair said that no positive identification had been made of the contents of the bottles as intoxicating liquor and that the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice should be viewed with suspicion.

"The only feature of the case," commented Magistrate Langley in giving judgment, "that in which can be found anything in the nature of a substantial argument is the question of whether there is proof that what was purchased was intoxicating liquor or to justify the Magistrate in drawing that inference. It is a great pity that there should be any doubt when the bottles and all are here and definite evidence could have been given. However I have to deal with the case as it is before me."

Having regard to all the circumstances, Magistrate Langley said that a conviction should be made basing that finding particularly upon the evidence of Constable Stevenson that the content of the bottle allegedly purchased from Mrs. Chew was intoxicating liquor. He was satisfied there was ample corroboration of the first witness's story.

Magistrate Langley then imposed a jail sentence of two months, and Mr. Fair gave notice that he would appeal, the Magistrate agreeing that that course was worth a trial.

Financial Critic

Hon. J. Earl Lawson was selected financial critic of the Conservative party to reply to Finance Minister Dunning's budget speech. The selection of Mr. Lawson, one of the younger candidates for the Conservative leadership at the forthcoming party convention, is significant in view of the fact the convention is only a few weeks away.

Lindsay Hires New Principal

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, June 21—Shortly after midnight Monday two persons were injured in a car accident south of Norland. A car driven by R. Gregory, who had as a passenger, Miss Ena Fleming of the Lindsay Post staff, was returning from Minden when it was sideswiped by a car driven by Atkin Archer, of Norland. The Gregory car turned over on the side of the road and was badly damaged. The occupants sustained scratches. The police are investigating.

Provincial Constable Adair and the county police are investigating a burglarly which took place at Woodville early Sunday morning. Thieves entered Britnell's bakery and stole five dollars after trying to open the safe.

An airplane accident occurred south of the village of Minden on Sunday morning, but the pilot escaped unhurt. The plane was en route from Ottawa to Trenton, and the pilot, realizing that his fuel supply was short, tried to pick out a landing spot. The visibility was poor and what looked like an ideal spot for landing turned out to be a bog. When the plane landed the undercarriage sank and the machine turned over on its nose, breaking the undercarriage and damaging the propellor and wings. A truck from the Trenton airport took the plane back to that town.

T. H. Eberlee, M.A., of Vankleek Hill, has been appointed principal of the Lindsay Collegiate Institute. He was selected from 52 applicants for the position. The new principal is 37 years of age and has an enviable reputation in educational circles.

Lindsay Rotary Club is planning a swimming pool in Kawartha Park. The tank will be 100 x 40 feet and will cost $2,000.

The lunge season opened Monday morning and local fishermen were out bright and early. Fishing appears very promising this season although no big catches were reported.

Sterilization Is Found To Be Inadequate

That the methods of sterilization of dishes and utensils used in a number of Peterborough restaurants and beverage rooms are inadequate, is the finding of Sanitary Inspector R. M. McPherson, after a preliminary investigation of the cleansing of glasses and dishes in local public dispensaries of food and drink.

The Sanitary Inspector reports that a method of sterilizing with chlorine germicide has been proposed which it is felt is effective and yet inexpensive and the proprietors of all food and drink establishments have been instructed as to the use of chlorine sterilizers. Further tests will be made when the educational program is completed and if better results are not shown then prosecutions will follow.

The Ontario Department of Health recommends that the bacterial counts on wash and rinse water should not exceed 5,000 and those of eating utensils, 100, says the report. It will be noticed that the bacterial counts per utensil range from those which were sterile to those with counts of 35,000. The counts on wash and rinse water ranged from 30 to 400,000. The washing of utensils in water of such enormously high bacterial content would only cause their gross contamination and lead to the infection of many persons when such waters are contaminated by utensils used by persons harbouring disease producing germs.

Diptheroids Found

In four samples of rinse water in which the so-called "washed dishes" are immersed before drying, numerous diptheroids were isolated. Although these organisms do not themselves cause disease, nevertheless, they are of the diphtheria group and if the sterilization is not sufficient to destroy them it would not destroy diphtheria bacilli. In almost every case staphylococci were present and there is some evidence that these germs are contributing factors in the cause of disease. In no case were streptococci discovered. This is rather satisfying to the department since this germ is the causative agent of scarlet fever and septic sore throat.

Many of the establishments under observation were inadequately equipped for proper cleansing and sterilizing and in some places having adequate equipment and materials, it was noticed that they were not being applied properly. Ten of the twenty-three establishments included in this survey were supposedly using a chlorine rinse, seven of these being beverage rooms. In these at the time of inspection, tests were made of the amount of available chlorine present and it was found that five were using as a sterilizer, water with no chlorine content or it was in such small concentration as to be useless as a bactericide. In the majority of beverage rooms the glasses were immersed in chlorine solution, then in a tank of cold or warm water and placed on a rack to dry. This procedure would be effective if the concentration of the first wash water was maintained at 400 parts per million and the rinse water was constantly being changed. The organic materials in beverages quickly neutralize the chlorine in the wash water, consequently a high concentration is necessary if sterilization is to be effected. A more satisfactory method is to wash the glasses first in hot water then to rinse in water having a chlorine content of 100 parts per million and allowing the glasses to drain. The residual water continues to act as a sterilizer while the glasses are draining.

Fine Catches Of Maskinonge Are Made Within Peterborough City Limits

SOME FOLK when they go fishing hie off to fairly distant waters and there sitting in outboard motor boats and using fancy plugs they seek the hard hitting but often elusive maskinonge. Not so with Percy Dunford, 383 Queen Street. When he wants to do a little angling he simply embarks in the faithful old canoe on the placid waters of Little Lake and there only five minutes away from the town clock he pays out a trawling line and goes to work. The lunge season opened yesterday and Mr. Dunford celebrated by snagging his legal catch for the day two fine looking muskies. This morning he was at it again and came back with another nice lunge and intimated he was going out again tonight to complete the day's catch by adding Musky No. 4 to the string. Incidentally he was not the only angler to have good luck within the city limits yesterday. A nice fish was hooked off Burnham's Point and another was caught in the river near the ball grounds.

FIESTA

BY OREN ARNOLD

RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Entranced by the southwest country, and in love with a footloose Texan, Ellen Dale, Hollywood screen star, has just decided to purchase an Arizona ranch and forsake her film career. A few days at the ranch of the wealthy Mexican Montoya family, which extended is hospitality to Ellen and Bill after a lucky parachute jump from Baron's plane during a storm, had given both the young actress and the Texan a new viewpoint on life. At Nogales, where Bill had driven Ellen to return to Hollywood, she makes her new decision and asks him to manage the ranch she plans to buy. He accepts but is hesitant to speak of his love for her because of his position and her wealth.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 19

The ranch properties that Bill had spotted tentatively in the Santa Catalinas and the Rincon mountains turned out to be unattractive for several reasons. Since he was to be foreman of the as yet non-existent Dale ranch, he was exacting in his demands. He and Ellen rode to both places, and voted against them.

Next, Bill telephoned to Phoenix, and got wind of the neglected Durango acreage. This had been a Spanish land grand dating back to 1760, passed on from Mexico to Uncle Sam by the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo in 1848, still held by the heirs of the old Trinidad Durango. But it was unused now —6,000 acres where the once elaborate ranch house had been destroyed by Indians in 1885. From time to time its grassier plots had been leased to other ranchers, but it had been in litigation since 1924—the younger heirs squabbling in courts about selling or dividing it—and had only just been given a clear title and put up for sale. Bill told Ellen it might be something.

It was. It turned out to be the wildest piece of land Bill had set eyes on since he left Mexico—and just about the most isolated.

"It would be a swell place to hide, anyway!" Bill said, when they had reached the place.

They had taken a good dirt road from Nogales northeast a few miles toward Patagonia thence over a winding trail that finally ended in a grassy valley between the Santa Rita mountains and the Canelo hills. Bill had a map that showed all boundaries.

"The air is invigorating, isn't it?" Ellen declared, enthusiastically.

"We're up pretty high," Bill explained. "I don't know just what the altitude right here is, but that big hazy peak to the northwest—that's Mount Wrightson—is 9,432 feet. This must be a mile itself."

"It's grand I want to run and do things!"

"Cut loose," he grinned at her. "Here's 6,000 acres of old man Durango's, and all around that is about 6,000 square miles, I guess, with probably not a dozen people to get in your way."

He was evaggerating considerably, but she got the point. This was not a "ranch" in the California sense. There, any family that buys half an acre and tries to raise a few chickens in the suburbs of Los Angeles, prides itself on having a ranch. In Arizona, Bill saidl ,aconically ,a man requires that much space just to spit. He wouldn't insult a steer by putting it on less than a thousand acres.

They rode considerably in their rented car, walked three or four miles. Bill verified the existence of a stream, which appeared to be a year-round water supply. Ellen rhapsodized ove the view across the rancho to the east—the Whetstone mountains were a theatrical backdrop, there, blue-gray in the daylight, touched often with red.

"You oughta see them in the sunset, I betcha," Bill suggested. "They'll catch the evening glow and be spotlighted like nobody's business."

Ellen had seen that magnificence in the southwest already. She knew what magic a sunset can do. She had seen sunsets over Manhattan's skyscrapers; and over the breakers off Catalina island and off Malibu, and twice from an airplane when she was above clouds. But none of them compared with the pageantry that sundown creates on rocky mountains. She told him so.

"I know it," Bill said.

Ellen didn't want to show too much enthusiasm, lest it influence Bill's business juldgment. But he recommended that she buy the place. Together they took several pictures, specially around the site of the old ranch house which was now nothing but ruins.

"Durango picked the best spot," Bill suggested. "Everything considered, I mean. The view is perfect —look how the grass slopes away off in front, like a huge pie pan! You can sit on your front porch and count all your cows with a field glass. And the distant mountains make a sort of back fence. Or front fence. The stream winds back there in the gulch about 300 yards, Ellen. It's higher'n plenty of mountain water, gravity flow."

Ellen didn't say much.

For one thing she was too happy, and it made her even happier to see her foreman talking enthusiastically about the place, as a boy would do.

"You wouldn't have many neighbors," he went on. "I think the mines around Alto have a few families left, but that's eight miles or so. There are some scattered Mexican homes here and there—helpers on other ranches, or prospectors mostly. But you won't hear any elevated railway noises, Ellen. Nor any newsboys."

She laughed. "No Bill. But that's what we want, isnt it?"

"Yep. You'll be surprised though, how you'll make friends up here. These hills have more people than they show at first. You'll have to bring in some families, too. For ranch help."

"It looks wonderful. But I feel so—helpless and all."

"You'll get adjusted. Say, did you know all that back that way—" he pointed westward and southward, into the closer mountains—"is a part of the Coronado National Forest?"

"No."

"Yep. Shows it on this map. I'll bet it's got plenty of game. Say, you like to hunt, Ellen?"

Ellen Dale, Ellen Daggs legally, had never shot a top-knot quail, a Sonora dove, a white wing, a cottontail ,or a jackrabbit in all of her 23 years, much less a buck or a mountain lion or a wild turkey or a bear. But something told her, in this instant, that the precise truth is not necessarily always golden.

"Yes, Bill. Surely!"

"Say, that's great! Your ranch ought to be full of fun, then."

He had a map on a rock, and was bent over it intently. Ellen noted happily his use of "your", as if the place was already hers; and his frequent use of "we" as if he and she were potential partners in ownership. Ellen Daggs had never had anybody of her own, since she was old enough to remeber. Nobody to share with. Nobody to enjoy that priceless mutuality of love and interest and possession which families have, and which lovers have. It is something money cannot buy, something which God often holds away from His otherwise favored ones.

She sat cross-legged on the ground to wait for him. He was reading his map and doing things with a pencil and a note pad, and humming a little while about it. He put a sample of the stream water in the bottle he had brought, and took several samples of the soil in paper bags to their car. He stepped off several short distances, estimated longer ones with his eye. He drew a sketch of the mountain skyline just back of the house site. Near the house, and half-concealed between two rocks, he picked up the rowel of an old Spanish-style spur.

"Silver!' he said, and brought it to Ellen. "Don't lose it, hunh!"

It was dirty, but when she had washed it and rubbed it, the original brilliance shone. It was a little wheel, a star with seven sharp points, two inches or so across and delicately carved al lover.

"Bill, it's beautiful! It's like a piece of jewelry!"

"Yep.' He was kicking in the house ruins. "I wonder if this 'dobe clay came from around here? We will need more for building."

He was ready to leave presently, and they started back to Nogales without much conversation. Riding there beside him, Ellen could fairly see his mind at work, planning, envisioning, dreaming. She was infinitely at peace. She had hired a good foreman. She liked his enthusiasm, his devotion to his job. She would have liked it very much indeed if he had wanted to make love to her now, but—men are queer animals.

"I can wait," she said to herself, drinking in the vastness of the landscape, the grandeur of distance and mass and color. "I can wait. Just so he is near me.'

Etiquette of Fork and Finger Foods

Avoid These Blunders

Fork or fingers — which? It's certainly important to know!

Olives led Mary Jones to make a slip. Wanting to be oh, so nice before a new man friend, she speared them with a fork, instead of eating them with her fingers. An innocent piece of loaf cake (not iced) inspired Alice Drey to flourishes with a fork. She really should have known that fingers are permissible. (A fork is strictly necessary only on gooey cake.) And that club sandwich! Best tackle it with a fork next time, Jean—if you value your social reputation!

Easy as pie to avoid such slips as these! Order our 32-page booklet and make yourself complete mistress of table etiquette. It tells the full story of how to be the perfect charming companion at table!

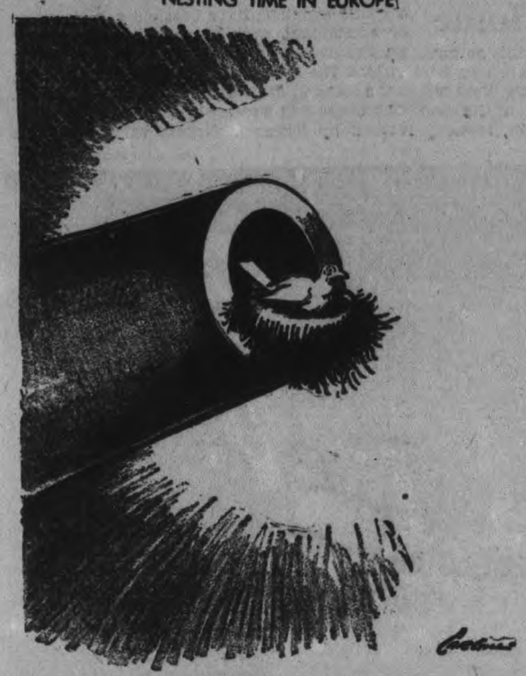
NESTING TIME IN EUROPE!



DOROTHY DIX

About this time of year there is enacted in many homes a little tragedy that might be entitled "When the Children Come Home From College" or "The Shattering of a Thousand dreams," in which both the parents and the children take part.

The parents are fine, sturdy, ambitious, go-getting men and women, who from a humble beginning have risen to a respected place in the world by their own efforts without asking help of any one. They have plenty of native intelligence, plenty of the shrewd useful knowledge that they have learned in the University of Hard Knocks, plenty of the wisdom that life has taught them, but of schooling and what we mall formal education they have little.

Oftener than not the man had to stop school and go to work before he even finished high, and the woman married while she was still in her teens and was a ma at an earlier age than her daughter was when she got an M.A. degree. Their concern was not with the problems of higher mathematics, but how to make the dollar do the work of five. And the question that was vital to them was not the trend in modern literature, but the ups and downs of the grocery trade.

But one thing these men and women possessed, and that was the superstitious reverence that parents have for a college education. The daily newspaper, the comic strip and the Browning Club might be good enough for them, but they were determined that their sons and daughters should be taught the classics and belong to Greek letter fraternities and sororities. Their children should have the "advantages" that they missed, and in that end they toiled and scrimped and saved, and the proudest and happiest day of their lives was when they sent Ben and Sadie off to College.

And now Ben and Sadie have come back from college—not the young godlings who will bless the home with their presence, as their parents fondly expected, but two supercilious youngsters, who are satisfied with nothing, who patronize father and mother and plainly show that they regard them as fossils from a prehistoric age. Not overflowing with gratitude and appreciation for the sacrifices that father and mother had made for them, but resentful that they haven't done more. Not the companions that father and mother believed they were preparing for themselves, but utter strangers with whom they have nothing in common.

Ever since the day Ben was born, father has been working building up his business and thinking how fine it would be when Ben came home from college and went into the factory with him to make it a big concern, but Ben simply scoffs at the idea of his devoting HIS talents to anything so picayunish as making clothespins or selling hams.

Mother has dreamed how happy she will be when Sadie comes home from college and she has a beautiful daughter to show off at parties, go to church with and help with the housekeeping. But Sadie soon lets her know that she is set for a career, loathes parties, hates domesticity, thinks mother's taste atrocious and her ideas childish and that she doesn't believe in religion or a single thing that mother believes in, or see anything from the same point of view.

So there they are. The parents and children who should be closer together than any people on earth are farther apart than the most casual strangers. Many a father knows his office boy better than he does his son, and many a housemaid is more companionable to a woman than her own daughter. Father grows grim and sardonic over Ben and calls him a young fool. Ben considers Father a dotard. Mother weeps over Sadie and Sadie defies mother and announces that she is going to live her own life. Mother and Father sigh when they think of the darling little children that Ben and Sadie were and repeat the old saying about babies stepping on your feet and grown children treading on your heart.

Of course, in the end, Time, the great adjuster, does straighten the situation out. Father finds out that Ben isn't an ass after all as he seems and Ben discovers to his amazement that a college education has not automatically turned him into Solomon, so he begins to respect Father when he observes that bankers seek his advice and kowtow him. Sadie and Mama get together when Sadie marries and has a house of her own and has to run home to mother to find out how to keep a budget and cook food so it will be edible.

But when the children first come home from college, it is a hard and periolous time for all concerned.

"The Authority on Authorities"

DANGEROUS DOUBLES

MANY A GAME has been handed to opponents by doubles of less than game contracts. Usually some feature of distribution has proved a vital factor in the result. It is especially hazardous to double a two-suiter, especially when the declarer has entered the bidding via the overcall route. Then you should be wary of extra long suits and short suits which he can ruff, perhaps setting up a cross-ruff that makes your own side's honor cards worthless.

(Dealer: West. Neither side vulnerable.)

West started the bidding of this deal with 1-Heart, North passed, East responded with 1-Spade and South bid 2-Diamonds, which West doubled. When this came around to South he tried 3-Clubs. West, of course, could not very well double that bid, but East did, because of his partner's previous double.

The hand arose in a duplicate and doubling this contract gave this North-South pair a top score. After the lead of the spade 10, South had a perfect cross-ruff situation and had no difficulty in making his contract.

Had West kept silent after the 2-Diamond call, the contract might have been played there, whereas the double drove South into a far better one. As West could not double clubs, the diamond double was rather dangerous.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

After the children had gone off to bed, Knarf and Hanid, who were their shadows, went down to the playroom. tI was dark and still. They stood by the window and looked at the stars.

"There's the Dipper," Hanid said, pointing up at it.

"And there's the Milky Way," Knarf put in. "I wonder why it's called the Milky Way. Do you suppose it's real milk which got up into the sky?"

"It's real milk all right."

Hanid was about to say no, she didn't think it was that at all, when all at once they heard Mr. Punch, who lived with his wife, Judy, in the little playhouse on the other side of the room, answer: "It's real milk all right. It got up there in a very curious way."

He Was There.

The two shadows turned at once to Mr. Punch. He was sitting on the edge of the ipayhouse stage with his legs dangling down. "Yes, indeed," he went on, smiling, "I know exactly how it got there. In fact, I was there at the time."

"You were up in the sky," the shadows exclaimed in surprise.

Mr. Punch nodded. "It happened this way. When I was a boy—oh, many, many years ago—my father used to let me go out into the pasture to mind our cow. It wasn't a very hard thing to do. Susie was a very nice cow. All she did all day was eat grass and say moo once in a while. But one afternoon a very strange thing happened. It was quite warm, so I picked out a shady spot under an elm tree and stretched out. I guess I must have closed my eyes, too."

"You mean you fell asleep?" Knarf asked.

Wide Awake.

"Not at all. I was quite wide awake. I just had my eyes closed. Well, it was very pleasatnt lying there. I heard the bees humming and the birds chirping and the brook babbling. All of a sudden I heard a very different sound. I heard someone playing a fiddle."

"A fiddle?" Hanid said in surprise.

"Our cat, Florabelle, was playing it. I was so surprised I almost climbed up the tree. But the next minute an even stranger thing began happening."

"What was that, Mr. Punch?"

"Susie, the cow, started dancing around the cat. I wouldn't have believed it if I hadn't seen her with my own eyes. And, even so, I thought for a minute I must be dreaming. Then Susie began to sing. This is what she sang:

'I'm just a cow
But I know how
To dance a jig
Hiddle-dee-dig.'"

"My goodness," said Hanid excitedly. "And what happened next?"

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, June 22.

This may be a day of mixed influences among ruling planets. While there may be much activity and possibly excitement, it may be difficult to accomplish much of a constructive nature, since delays, obstacles and disappointments are presaged. A change or a short journey may prove profitable, and strangers may lend a hand in straightening out difficulties, but progress may be slow.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may experience a year of contradictory circumstances, with much tension and activity, but little accomplished, as there are crystallized conditions to break up, with signs of delays and disappointments.

A child born on this day may be serious, possibly morose and stubborn, although not wanting in some bright and progressive ideas and objectives. Such a child should be given much early encouragement and an optimistic outlook upon life.

Daughter will be so happy to wear this cute peasant dress. It has the full gathered skirt that's so popular with grown-ups. It is cunningly made of a peasant cotton printed percale. The contrasting puffed-up sleeves are sheer white lawn. The Peter Pan collar, ruffling and apron repeat the lawn. The pattern for apron is included. A peasant kerchief to tie about the head is fetching. It may be cut from the dress fabric, triangular in shape from a twenty-two inch square. Hem it around the edges. Plain cotton in skipper blue with matching sleeves, crisp white collar and apron is another adorable scheme. For parties, pastel or organdie is quaint and pretty.

Martin—Moore

A quiet wedding was solemnized Monday morning at 10.30 in Trinity United Church, Rev. G. S. Easton officiating, when Dorothy Lenore Moore, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ira D. Moore, Margaret Avenue, became the bride of Dr. W. A. B. Martin, B.Sc., D.D., of Milton, Pa.

The bride was charmingly gowned in peach triple sheer with large leghorn hat, and carried a bouquet of peonies and Talisman roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Marion Eula Moore, sister of the bride, wore a gown of blue triple sheer, large white hat and accessories. Her bouquet was of peonies, roses and spirea. Gordon J. Davis of Millbrook was best man.

Following the marriage ceremony, a reception and dinner was held at the Empress Hotel, where Mrs. Moore, the bride's mother, received in navy chiffon with rust hat and accessories.

The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl and diamond pin, to the bridesmaid a gold locket necklace, and to the best man a leather bill fold.

For going away the bride wore a beige and pari sand suit with matching accessories. After a trip to the West Indies, Mr. and Mrs. Martin will make a return visit to Canada before taking up residence in Milton, Pa.

Piano Pupils Give Brilliant Recital

The senior pupils of Marguerite Rome, whose fine work is well known in Peterborough, and who leaves shortly for Toronto to take the summer course for teachers at the Toronto Conservatory of Music, presented a brilliant program of piano music Monday evening in Trinity Sunday School Hall.

Beauty of tone and great flexibility in technical work was noticed particularly. The violin trio, whose splendid work was so well received, are pupils of Roy Rome.

During the evening Miss Rome was presented with a bouquet of flowers on behalf of the senior pupils, and at the completion of the program the Orpheus Music Club served refreshments to the artists who took part in the program, which was as follows:

Joyce Cribbis' rendition of "Pink" by Litchner was played with ease and assurance; Eleanore Carol played with delicate touch, "Heather Rose" (Lange), "Ballet Music from Rosamunde" (Schubert), and "The Flower Song" (Lange) were played with confidence by Edna Wilson.

The violin trio played a dainty minuet by Bach, members of the trio being Menzies McLaren, Kenster Reid and Douglas Ferguson. Patricia Watson played the lovely 'Amaryelis' by Ghys, and the "Pizzicato" by Delibus.

Jean Leach's excellent technical work showed to advantage in Paderwiske's Minuet and "La Paloma." Agnes Pogue played in brilliant style "The Glow-Worm" (Lincke) and Anitra's Dance (Greig). The trio next offered Handel's "Gavotte," which was most beautifully done, and brought an enthusiastic request for an encore.

Isabel Pogue offered a most delightful arrangement of the "Gypsy Love Song" (arr. by Klun) and Dvorak's "Humoresque." Keith Sproule was brilliant in "Serenata" (Moskowski) and "To the Rising Sun" (Torjussen) was played with exquisite tone. The National Anthem brought the program to its close.

Two Hundred At Centennial Tea

Favored by delightful June weather, the Centennial Tea Monday afternoon, which marked the beginning of celebrations for the hundredth anniversary of the founding of Gilmour Memorial Church, was a very successful occasion, attended by about two hundred guests. The affair was held at the home of Miss Mabel Paul, Lindsay Highway, and was under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of Gilmour Church.

The large lawns with their magnificent borders of flowers of every hue, including bright and enormous poppies, were an ideal setting for the tea tables, which were laid with lace cloths, and decorated with graceful bouquets of yellow roses in silver baskets, and matching candles in tall silver holders.

Tea was poured by four former members of Gilmour Church, Mrs. D. Eastwood, Mrs. A. H. Campbell, Mrs. S. Cottingham, Peterborough, and Mrs. Alex Scott. Tea convenor was Mrs. G. Telford; the program was under the direction of Mrs. Jos. Mann, and the guests were received by the hostess, Miss Mabel Paul, and the president of the Ladies' Aid, Mrs. A. B. Mann.

Of interest were the many quaint costumes worn by the ladies, which were reminiscent of a hundred years ago, and which were complete in some cases even to bonnets and parasols.

The interesting program provided was as follows: Vocal solos were given by Mrs. W. F. Lillico, Toronto, Miss Doreen Magee, Master John Lewis, Mrs. C. Telford and Mrs. Jas. Young, Peterborough. Vocal duets by Mrs. R. D. Wright and Miss L. McGregor; Mrs. A. K. Nicholls and Mrs. J. Mann, and the Misses Doreen and Maxine Kidd.

Instrumental music by Jean Prophet and Barbara Clark was a piano and violin duet, and piano duets were given by Miss Jean Paul and Mrs. H. Lewis, and Greta and Chrissie Huffman. Little Betty Mathers delighted her audience with song, and a fine solo was given by Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe of Murray Street Church. Readings were given by Mrs. Geo. Tully and Miss Evelyn Ruth. Visiting accompanists included Miss Lily Bacon and Mr. Wm. R. Potter.

Many former members of the church were present, including Miss Mabel Darling of Centreville, Mrs. Montgomery of Dundalk, Mrs. T. A. Young of Springville, Mr. and Mrs. John Stinson of Shanty Bay and their daughter, Mrs Morley Johnston of Oakwood.

Observes Birthday

MRS. BRIDGET QUINLAN

A long resident of this city and widow of the late Patrick Quinlan who celebrated a birthday anniversary on Monday. She was the guest of honor at a party given by her friends at her home, 281 McDonnel street.

Girls Sponsored Sewing Display

In their first venture of the kind the Teen Age Branch of St. John's W.A. sponsored a very successful concert and display of their sewing work in the parish hall Monday night with Mrs. F. D. Craig as chairman. The event was featured by a very enjoyable play, "Peggy Makes Up Her Mind" in which the young members of the cast did excellent work. They were Eva Clark, Doreen Groombridge, Theresa Laws, Madge Mycroft, Edith Harte-Maxwell, Hazel Harte-Maxwell, Edith Train and Florence Gynane.

Tap dancing numbers were given in most effective fashion by Shirley Garner and Kenneth Simmons, in a duet number and Phyllis Lidell, in a solo dance, these pupils of Miss Thelma Buller excelling themselves. Jean Magee delighted with a piano solo, a guitar trio by Velma Scott, Gladys Blewett and Jean McElwain, was much enjoyed, a Hill Billy number by Jean McElwain, Jean Coleman and Agnes Bowler, was a comedy success and Georgina Demos scored with a piano solo before the guitar trio closed the program with a farewell number.

Under the direction of Mrs. Geo. Groombridge refreshments were served and a sing song was held with Kay Chivas at the piano.

Coffee

MONDAY

Strawberries and Cream. Coffee

Note.—We suggest a hot casserole dish at this point because it goes well with cold cuts and cabbage is so fine this month. For "slimmers" we suggest using a wedge of cabbage on your bread and butter plate in place of the roll that is so hard to give up. We have done this for the whole family—the fresh green cabbage being so mild and sweet it is eaten with much relish, and breadstuffs are not missed.

THURSDAY (Hasty)
Poached Eggs on Toast with Tomato Sauce
New Potatoes with Parsley Butter
Shredded Green Beans
Sliced Bananas and Cream. Coffee

FRIDAY (Economy Meal)
Baked Fillet of Haddock (see note)
Shredded Carrots with Milk Sauce
Boiled Beans (Navy)
Lemon Jelly. Toasted Crackers. Tea

Note.—For the Baked Haddock have your oven at 500 deg. Fahr. Brush the fish after it is wiped clean, with cooking oil, and lay on oiled pan, sprinkle with salt and pepper and, if liked, 2 teaspoons onion juice and bake for about 20 minutes at high temperature. Remove from oven as soon as fish is opaque throughout. The carrots may be done in the oven in a casserole to conserve heat.

SATURDAY
Cream of Tomato Soup
Three-decker Ham and Tomato Sandwiches
Celery Hearts. Sliced Cucumbers
Rice and Raisin Pudding. Coffee

Only One Booster

KITCHENER, Ont., June 21 (C. P.). — Anglers back at work to-day after a disappointing week-end at the "Fishing Paradise" of Bridgeport Dam, were devising alibis for the meagre catch at a place, heavily stocked with fish, just re-opened to the public after three years. More than 3,000 fished, but Bobby Slack, who caught a 10-inch fish, was the only one able to boast any luck.

Three Nations' Experts To Visit Spain

LONDON, June 21 — (CP). — The British Government announced today that a commission of British, Swedish and Norwegian experts would leave for Spain soon to determine whether aerial bombardments in the civil war have been directed at military objectives.

The announcement, made in the House of Commons by Richard Butler, under-secretary for foreign affairs, indicated the United States had rejected an invitation to participate in the investigation.

The commission wil lhave its headquarters at Toulouse, France, Mr. Butler said, and "will go to any part of Spain at the request of either side to report facts."

He said it was expected the commission's report would "rouse world opinion" if it were found that the bombardments were directed against civilian populations and not regular military objectives.

The Barcelona Government has offered to cooperate with the commission but the Insurgent Regime has made no commitment.

"Much of the international interest in curbing aerial attacks arose from insurgent bombardment of Barcelona and other coastal cities and towns of the Republican government."

Mr. Butler said the Burgos government had responded to a British protest against "indiscriminate aerial bombing of towns and villages" with the statement that Alicante and Granollers, targets or recent attacks, contained military objectives and that "therefore bombardment was unavoidable."

Want Friendship in Action.

Mr. Butler also told the House that both Great Britain and Italy are "anxious" to bring into full force as soon as possible their pact of friendship signed April 16.

He added that the "conditions by which entry into force of the agreement are governed have been publicly and repeatedly stated and I have nothing to add to what has already been said."

Numerous members pressed the Under-Secretary to make a statement in the light of comments published in the press this morning but he refused to add anything.

Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, was asked by Philip Noel Baker, Labor, for the significance of the term "Spanish settlement," but Sir John declared that "the Prime Minister has nothing to add to the statement made in debate on May 2."

"Does this mean that the government still accept that Signor Mussolini's conditions for settlement in Spain shall mean victory for General Franco?" Mr. Noel Baker pressed.

"No, no," Sir John replied. "The Prime Minister, on the contrary, in debate gave good reasons for not defining the question more closely and that is what my answer means."

Wilfred Roberts, Liberal, asked for assurances that the government did not envisage in connection with the negotiations the granting of credits or financial assistance to Italy for the purchase of wheat.

Mr. Butler replied: "The question of credit in any form was not raised by either side during the negotiations which led up to the agreement of April 16. No other negotiations with Italy on the subject are contemplated by the government."

U.S. Steamer Bombed In Barcelona Harbor

HENDAYE, France, June 21 (AP) —Spanish insurgents today reported slight advances both on the eastern front and the Cordoba front in southern Spain. On both fronts the insurgents were slowed down as they reached strong goverment positions.

Along the Mediterranean south of Castellon de la Plana government militiamen were making a strong stand in fortified positions.

Government troops felt secure enough in their new positions to take the offensive inseveral sectors, notably before Villarreal where they reported the insurgents had fallen back slightly.

Barcelona and Valencia were bombed numerous times by the insurgents, with 42 reported killed in Barcelona. In a raid on Barcelona yesterday by eight Savoia (Italian) planes, a bomb tore a hole in the port deck of an American steamship identified as the Wisconsin. The crew escaped injury.

Spurned Millions For Love

Rosemary Webster, 21-year-old debutante of New York, is shown with her husband, Paul Gilson, a $21-a-week-clerk, after they were wed despite her mother's threat of disinheritance The whole fuss started when Rosmary's parents, Dr. and Mrs. David Webster, learned of the romance while attending the commencement exercises at St. Lawrence university where the girl was a senior. They frowned upon the youth and forbid the girl to see him again. Rosemary left school and, ducking her parent's detectives for almost a week, wed him at his parent's home.

Plant Poison Black Alkali May Yield Juicier Fruit

TUCSON, Ariz., June 21—(AP)—Black alkali, historic "poison" of plants in irrigation areas of the southwest, can be controlled by discoveries reported today from the University of Arizona department of agricultural chemistry and soils.

The name comes from the black color which appears in water where soil contains too much of this alkali. Crops of all sorts die when much of the black stuff appears. But scientific studies show that black alkali is pure white and that it is not always poisonous. Knowledge of its real nature indicates the alkali may be controlled to improve citrus fruits and other crops.

The black color is due to organic matter dissolved by too much alkali in the soil. Death of plants in due to starvation from improper nutrition.

The new work at Arizona is discovery of a previously unknown source of black alkali—limestone. Heretofore agricultural chemists have attributed the alkali to sodium carbonate, which is washing soda, and to sodium hydroxide, which is lye.

The limestone source has been verified by W. T. McGeorge and T. F. Buehrer, agricultural and physical chemists respectively. The cure for each of the three sources of black alkali is different. For limestone is the remedy in turning over the soil or other methods to give it plenty of air.

For citrus fruits alkalinity control can be used to modify the flavor. The alkali tends to add a little sweetness. More important, the Arizona agricultural chemists think, is the possibility of regulating alkalinity to the point of causing the trees to yield a more juicy grade of fruit.

Bailieboro Tea Is Huge Success

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BAILIEBORO, June 21. — About one hundred and fifty ladies attended the hostess tea sponsored by the ladies of the United Church on Mrs. Welford Bateman's beautiful and spacious lawn on Thursday afternoon. Twenty-six beautifully arranged tables were placed on the lawn and service was rendered by the ladies and girls of the church. Mrs. W. Gainer, president of the Ladies' Aid, voiced her appreciation during the afternoon for the interest taken by the ladies of the various churches. At the conclusion of the tea the ladies adjourned to the United Church where an enjoyable program was rendered. Those taking part were: Misses Winnifred Gainer and Elva Jewison, who contributed a piano duet; a violin and guitar duet by Misses Maretta and Nettie Elgar; a reading entitled. "Scrub and Preach," by Miss Hilda Thompson; a reading by Miss Clara Seens; a vocal duet by Misses M. and N. Elgar. A sing-song led by Mrs. W. Gainer, with Mrs. M. Perrin at the piano was also enjoyed.

During the program Rev. E. M. and Mrs. Cook were invited to come to the platform and an address was read by Mrs. N. Thompson. The presentation of a beautiful floor rug was made by Mrs. Harry Gainer.

Rev. Mr. Cook, though deeply touched, voiced his appreciation in his usual capable manner.

Cavan Institute To Hold Picnic

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, June 21.—Cavan Women's Institute held their June meeting at Mr. and Mrs. Milford Byers' home. There was a good attendance.

Among other items discussed was a treat for the members but nothing was definitely decided. It was decided to hold the July meeting in the form of a picnic, the place to be decided later.

It was carried that the Institute should again pay the rent to Mr. Davis for the ground used for ball games. At the September meeting there will be a sale table towards which the members are asked to contribute.

Mrs. Kennedy's group was in charge of the program and lunch.

Mrs. R. A. Sutton gave a good paper on Agriculture. Mrs. Will Howden contributed a humorous reading on "Taxes." Miss Malone gave an interesting talk on Agriculture.

A feature of the delicious lunch served was strawberries and cream.

Among the visitors present, a few of whom joined, were Mrs. Leslie Pritchard, Mrs. J. Braithwaite, Mrs. T. Madill and Miss Norma Gillis.

Peace Descends On Head Of Two Battlers

After the trouble of last week the dove of peace was fluttering serenely in police court on Monday when Stephen Costello, of Peterborough and Hugh Given, former reeve of Harvey township were arraigned before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., on charges of having created a disturbance on Hunter street.

The two had pleaded not guilty to the charge on Friday but today both changed their pleas to guilty while a charge laid by Costello against Given of assault was dismissed when no evidence was offered by the prosecution.

"I do not think a little time in jail would do any harm" said Magistrate Langley.

Crown Attorney McElderry, however said that he felt that suspended sentence would meet the situation. The two men had become friends again and he did not think there would be any more trouble.

The magistrate decided to suspend sentence for a year on bonds of good behavior being signed.

He issued a stern warning to both men that they would be dealt with strictly if they got into trouble again.

"Why don't you stay up there at Nogie's Creek?" he asked Given. "You would be better off there where there's good fresh air and the birds are singing."

"There's no beverage rooms there", remarked the Crown Attorney.

"I won't say anthing to you about the air", Magistrate Langley remarked to Costello when the latter said he lived in Peterborough.

Norwood A.Y.P.A. Gets Invitation

The regular meeting of St. Michael's A.Y.P.A. Westwood opened with Miss Price reading the scripture after which Miss Elmhurst led in prayer.

The president being absent Miss Bray took the chair. There was no correspondence or old business. Scott Elmhurst moved that the A.Y.P.A. have a picnic on August 3. This was seconded by Joe Lancaster. Miss Seaborn moved that the Westwood A.Y.P.A. invite the Norwood A.Y.P.A. to their picnic. Edithe Bray seconded the motion. It was decided Alfred Reed would take charge of the booth. Mrs. Birdsall moved that Miss Price and Miss Bray look after the games and the prizes. Miss Price moved that Scott Elmhurst, Charlie Bray and Everett Elmhurst prepare the races.

The program was then handed over to Alfred Reed. He gave a report of the Hasting's A.Y.P.A. banquet. A nursey rhyme contest was enjoyed by all. Miss Bray gave a very comical reading called "Experience With a Cow". Then numerous charades were enacted. Alfy Reed sang "Always Take A Girl Named Daisy." This ended the program.

Supper was served and a hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Godfrey for the use of their home. The meeting closed with the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

When A King's Guard Swooned

Films For Future

WASHINGTON, June 21—(AP)—Whether Hollywood likes it or not, people living in the year 4,000 will be able to see and hear today's history in the making.

Although a Hollywood chemist estimated the maximum life of film at 25 years, government scientists said no apparent limit has yet been found.

The Bureau of Standards recently completed "accelerated aging" tests in which films in six months went through the effects of years' storage in a cool dark room.

These tests showed that cellulose, or explosive, film, would last from 50 to 100 years.

Hastings' Church Observes 80th Anniversary

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, June 21.—The 80th anniversary of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was observed by the congregation on Sunday, June 19, and this event in the church life marks the wonderful progress, both spiritual and congregational, that has been made in this section from the time before Hastings existed as a village of any importance, and was only a small hamlet known as "Crooks Rapids," and a place without a church of any denomination.

At this memorable service the Rev. John W. Foote, B.A., B.D., of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Port Hope, conducted the service, the pastor, Rev. D. K. Perrie, having exchanged pulpits. The church was most beautiful with its numerous bouquets of summer flowers, pink and white peonies and ferns.

At the morning service the Presbyterian congregations at Havelock, Norwood and Hastings united, and at the evening service they again united and the Trinity United Church service was withdrawn in order that the congregation may attend.

The choir of many voices, including the Hastings and Norwood choir members, were led in the singing by the organist, Mrs. H. B. Wilson. In the morning two anthems were "All is Light Along the Way" and "In the Garden With Jesus." At the evening service a duet, "The City Four-Square," was beautifully rendered by Mr. Godin and Mrs. J. Rogers of Norwood, and the choir sang the anthem, "Pilot me, Gracious Saviour."

Rev. Foote, who expressed his pleasure for the honor bestowed upon him in preaching for the anniversary, delivered a very impressive sermon, choosing his text from I. Corinthians 13, 11: "When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a man, I put away childish things."

Rock Boom Stops Japs On Yangtse

SHANGHAI, June 21 — (AP). — Striking both from land and air, the Japanese today sought to blast out the barricade of rock-laden boats at Matowchen which is blocking their drive up the Yangtse River to Hankow.

While Japanese planes continued to bombard the boom, an overland column forded the swollen Tsien River and marched into Hotow, 30 miles northwest of Matowchen, threatening a rear attack against Chinese forces guarding the barrier.

Another Japanese column, which captured Taihu yesterday, prepared to move southward against Susung, 30 miles away, in an effort to reach Kiukiang overland. Kiukiang is 135 miles by river below Hankow.

British and United States gunboats are waiting at Kiukiang, prepared to protect property and evacuate neutrals if necessary.

The Chinese reported four Japanese vessels were sunk in a raid by eight heavy bombers late yesterday. A Japanese naval communique confirmed the raid, but denied any ships were sunk.

At Kaifeng, Canadian Mission centre in the Yellow River flood area, Engineers expressed the belief the present flood had reached its peak and said the breached dikes could be repaired before a second rise is expected in July. They estimated at least 30,000 persons were drowned and missing as a result of the flood, while 100,000 had lost their homes.

Reports from Hankow said General Lung Mo-Han, commander of the 83rd Chinese division, had been executed for failure to obey orders in the defence of Lanfeng, Lunghai Railway town.

Problem For Conant

TORONTO, June 21 (CP)—Attorney-General Gordon Conant has a neat problem to solve when he returns to his desk tomorrow.

The question is whether all 11 members of the special Legislative committee appointed to investigate affairs of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission are entitled to the $15-a-day allowance. The committee met 11 days and finished its study Friday.

Times Boycotting Olympics To Japan

NEW YORK, June 21 (CP)—The New York Times came out to-day for a United States boycott of the 1940 Olympic Games in Japan.

The Independent newspaper argued in an editorial that the Olympic ideal of peace and goodwill was not promoted by the Berlin Games of 1936, "even though the German Government saw to it that the groans of the victims in the concentration camps were not audible to the Olympic spectators." And peace and goodwill, it continued, will not be promoted by the Tokyo meetings.

Contending the sending of United States athletes to Japan two years hence would "seem to be bestowing approval on a government which has lost the right to command it," The Times said:

"Hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, of Chinese are marked for death because of what the Tokyo government has done. The right of an ancient and highly civilized people to be free and to lead its own life is being ruthlessly assailed. It is hypocrisy, or worse, for us to make any gesture that conceals a natural horror and revulsion."

Subway trains in Moscow, Russia, carry nearly 490,000 passengers daily.

Indian Band At Burleigh Is Not Wanted There, Protest Is Made By County

Twenty-Eight Children Not Receiving An Education—Fear May Become Charge Entirely Upon The County

Protests will be sent to the County Council to both the Federal Department of Transport and the Provincial Government against the establishment of a settlement mostly of Indians along the road west of Burleigh Falls. They are said to be occupying Crown lands belonging to both governments, that they are not assessable, between twenty and thirty children are growing up without education, and generally that they may become a charge entirely upon the county.

"The superintendent of the Children's Aid Society may go up there some day and pick up a whole carload of them, and we'd have a new bill of expense," Reeve Anderson commented.

A letter from the Department of Transport advised that the colony of summer guides, a few of whom are said to be whites, all of them living in the settlement the whole year round, should not be disturbed because they would only move somewhere else. They are squatting on government property, but the possibilities of becoming a public liability for sanitation, health and education, are apprehended by the county. Their buildings are said to be of little value, and the consensus of the council is that these people should not be permitted to remain there, with the exception as guides during the fishing season.

"A. L. Killaly created the settlement," Reeve Wallace Shearer of Harvey told the council. "He didn't want them living along the canal, so he moved them around the bend."

The attention of J. J. Duffus, M.P., has been called to this settlement, it was said, but there has been no action from that quarter. For that reason, the county's protests will be renewed.

"If the Department wants to set up a village there they should give them a deed of the property," one of the members said.

Another statement was to the effect that the Indians had received money to move away from the reserve, and they were now free to do as they wished.

"We should protest against this settlement becoming established in Harvey," Warden McDonald declared in committee. "It is entirely wrong. Their doctors' and hospital bills are chargeable to the county, and we shouldn't be responsible for them."

Reeve Anderson said he understood there were twenty-eight children in the settlement, who were not receiving education. "What kind of citizens will they become when they grow up?" he queried. "The Department of Education might create a school section there, but who would support it? It would take 95 per cent. of Department money to keep it going."

It was also said that the county had no way of collecting money from the squatters, neither had Harvey Township.

"Well, let us write Mr. Duffus again. Sometimes a member does nothing until he sees we are in earnest. We should also write the Ontario Government and point out that some of those people are on Crown land of the province."

Reeve Mann's Reply.

Fires Are Raging On Wide Front In Western Area

WINNIPEG, June 22.—(CP)—Commercial air activity in Alberta and Northern Saskatchewan was practically at a stand-still today as smoke clouds from forest fires in Northern Alberta and in the foothills district northwest of Calgary cut visibility to fog-like proportions. Flames also ravaged Manitoba forests.

Airplanes in Edmonton, unable to take off because of the smoke pall since Monday, remained grounded yesterday. Flights from Prince Albert and other Northern Saskatchewan points were also cancelled. A pilot who took off from Lethbridge, Alta., returned to the airport there after he found himself unable to see the ground from an altitude of 500 feet.

The lone flight reported was made by Bill Smith of Calgary. On a survey of the fire situation he flew over Caroline, 90 miles northwest of Calgary, to find that the town and its 50-odd inhabitants were not in the immediate path of a fire raging over a wide front west of there.

Earlier fears were expressed the town had fallen prey to flames when communication lines went out of order.

Worst In History

J. A. Hutcison, Alberta's assistant director of forestry, described fire conditions as "the worst in Alberta's history." Throughout the Peace River district fires were reported, burning wild unsettled areas but causing only scant damage to farms and settlements. Fire guards set up by settlers were credited with keeping the loss at a minimum.

In the lesser Slave Lake area, where at least one point, Driftpile, has reported only 1.16 inches of rain this year, fires honeycombed the tinder-like bush lands.

From Watino on the Smoky River in Northern Alberta came reports few buildings had been destroyed so far despite the numerous fires. Trappers, however, feared the blazes would take a heavy toll of fur bearing animals.

A blaze was reported northwest of Jasper National Park, 250 miles west of Edmonton, but so far no fires have been reported in the park itself.

Blazing timberlands to the north and northwest of Calgary sent a smoke pall rolling over the city to black-out the sun throughout yesterday.

C.N.R. Stand Is Called One Of "Defeatism"

OTTAWA, June 22 (CP).—Answering a series of questions posed by Government Leader Raoul Dandurand, Sir Edward Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, today gave the Senate Railway Committee a measure of insight into his unification plan and attacked the Canadian National Railways' stand as one of "defeatism."

He refused to commit himself to the discussion of details of a possible unification arrangement, declaring them a matter for negotiation. Listing assets the C.P.R. might bring into unification, he said if the government desired to include ocean steamships "arrangements could probably be made."

In an attack on the C.N.R. stand that unification would not be in the public interest, Sir Edward said in his brief the committee had been informed little or nothing could be done about the railways problem, "that railways in the wrong place and duplicate railways must always remain in existence and must always be paid for from the taxes because, for some extraordinary reason, it is in the national interest."

Not Proper Solution.

He could not accept this "attitude of defeatism as the proper solution of an admittedly grave national problem." The government would have to choose between spending money for unnecessary railways services or using that money for more effective and constructive purposes. The Canadian National would "do nothing and wait for times to get better."

Sir Edward held to his estimate that $75,000,000 could be saved through unification in normal times and objected to the compulsory co-operation of suggestion of President S. J. Hungerford of the Canadian National. Coercion would not overcome the objections to unification.

Sir Edward proposed the committee recommended that independent experts check the various estimates and conclusions presented to the committee by officials of the two railways.

Everybody Insists His Hottest Job Reporter Finds In Seeking Hottest Place

"You might find out where is the hottest place to work in Peterborough today," the editor told a reporter. And this is the answer he found on his desk when he returned from lunch. The reporter is still missing.

"Dear Boss: Everybody I meet insists he has the hottest job in town. Everybody wants me to come and stay for a while so I can see for myself how hot it is.

"I was in gravel pits, on piles of lumber, on top of freight trains, in cabs of shunter engines, in a moulding plant, in a dry kiln, in a bakeshop, in a stoke hole, and I got so run down I went home. I found my wife in a bad humour because she was washing. The baby was crying. It was hotter there than any place else.

"So this note is just to tell you that it's pretty hot in a lot of places but I was too hot to get temperatures execpt at the Stock Bread company where the thermometer was registering 100 degrees in the stoke hold. I know it's only noon, but I've become so heated I'm taking myself off to a nice cool lake and I'll see you tomorrow if it has cooled down by then."

Army Of 100,000 Mobilized To Guard King and Queen

PARIS, June 22 (AP).—An army of more than 100,000 men—troops, reserve officers, guardsmen and police—has been mobilized to protect King George and Queen Elizabeth during their four-day State visit to France next week.

In the minds of those responsible for their safety are two bits of European history—the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria at Sarajevo, the spark that started the Great War, and the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia October 9, 1934.

Next Tuesday, when the King and Queen travel from Boulogne to Paris, will be the 24th anniversary of Sarajevo. The slaying of the Yugoslav King occurred just after he had landed at Marseille on a visit to France.

As early as February, when the King and Queen accepted President Albert Lebrun's invitation to pay France the first State visit of their reign, the government started taking precautions. A mass round-up was started among foreign refugees.

100,000 Expelled.

More than 1,000,000 persons were questioned. A number estimated as high as 100,000 were expelled.

Then began the task of raising an army of protection for the Royal visitors. The government ordered that 20,000 police be prepared for duty throughout the visit; 20,000 reserve officers in Paris were recruited as plainclothesmen; the War Ministry assigned 50,000 troops to the task and the Interior Ministry about 10,000 mobile guards.

British authorities approved the plans, leaving the job entirely to the French except for Scotland Yard inspectors who serve as the Royal Family's bodyguard.

Guard The Route.

The principal problem is to guard the route of processions through Paris. An open but armored automobile with high sides which no bullet could pierce has been made ready. Only the heads and shoulders of the King and Queen will show over the armored sides.

Walls of guards, five men deep, were ordered to line all routes over which the car will pass in State drives—a row of troops on the outside, backed by two lines of police and mobile guards and two tiers of reserve officers. All buildings along the routes will be searched and watched by inspectors.

Roofs, basements and subways will be guarded. Planes in wireless communication with police will fly over Paris.

Drunkometer Test Not Awaiting Supply Of Liquor

Grants Pass, Ore., June 22.

A SCIENTIFIC test of Sheriff A. Donley Barnes's new "Drunkometer" has been postponed indefinitely. The Sheriff not only declined to furnish the liquor for volunteers but declared duty would compel him to arrest any volunteer shown by the machine to have imbibed too much.

Cheaper Money Is Urged By J. J. Duffus

OTTAWA, June 22 — (CP) — Joseph Duffus (Lib. Peterborough), participating in the budget debate in the House of Commons yesterday declared the budget had been well received in the country. It showed Finance Minister Dunning had performed his task well, he said.

"I am one who believes that due consideration should be given to our manufacturing industry," he said, "to enable them to make reasonable profits, pay fair wages and supply their goods to the public at reasonable prices."

In financial matters balanced budget should be brought about, Federally, Provincially and Municipally to be followed by a gradual reduction in debt and taxation. The present government had a sincere desire to accomplish this result.

Mr. Duffus urged the government to make it possible for farmers with adequate security to borrow money at four per cent. interest nothing would do more to restore agriculture to prosperity, stimulate the building industry and increase employment throughout the country.

Barcelona Suffers Heavy Air Attack

BARCELONA, June 22 (AP).—Barcelona was heavily attacked by Insurgent aircraft early today in a series of eight raids by 15 big Caproni bombers. The raid lasted two hours.

Ten bodies have been recovered but the death toll is expected to rise.

More than 100 bombs were dropped.

Two Women Suffer Critical Injuries

TORONTO, June 22 (CP).—Two persons were injured critically and two less seriously when an automobile crashed into a tree on Lakeshore Boulevard early today. Mrs. K. Hallet and Percy Fork both suffered a fractured jaw and nose. The couple in the rear seat only suffered leg injuries. The car had passed police just before the crash at a safe rate of speed, police said.

Rain In Alberta

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., June 22 (C. P.). — South-eastern Alberta ranch and wheat lands received a drenching in many areas last night and early to-day, breaking a rainless period that had caused some anxiety. Lethbridge received .16 inch in a three-hour shower, while at other points it was heavier.

The rain cleared the air of smoke from northern forest fires which had reduced the ceiling at Lethbridge Airport on Tuesday to less than 500 feet, forcing T.C.A. pilots to fly blind from Swift Current, Sask., to the Rockies.

Canada's Penal System To Be Administered By Federal Commission

Ottawa Government Gives Notice Of Its Intention To Establish Commission To Administer System

OTTAWA, June 22 (CP).—The government today gave notice of its intention to establish a commission to administer Canada's penal system.

A resolution, which is preliminary to a bill, appeared on today's House votes and proceedings, and read: "It is expedient to introduce a measure to incorporate a commission with power under the Minister of Justice to administer, control and manage the penitentiaries; to provide for salaries of the commissioners and assistant commissioners and to amend and consolidate the Penitentiaries Act and amending acts and repeal the same."

Follows Investigation

Decision of the government to set up a prison commission follows recommendations made by the royal commission headed by Mr. Justice Joseph Archambault of the Quebec Superior Court. The royal commission report was tabled in the Commons by Justice Minister Lapointe June 14.

The report recommended a three-man commission to replace the superintendent and three inspectors now managing the penitentiaries under the justice minister. The commission in addition would act as a central parole board and administer remissions and tickets-of-leave, now separate branches of the justice department.

Retirement of Major General D. M. Ormond, superintendent, and transfer from the penitentiary service of inspector J. D. Dawson was urged in the report.

No mention was made in the resolution of General Ormond or Mr. Dawson and details of the bill will not be known until it is introduced in the Commons.

T. A. Thompson (Con. Lanark) listed several questions on the votes and proceedings dealing with the prison probe.

He asked if the evidence heard by the royal commission was taken under oath in all cases; was any assurance given any witness that evidence would not go on the official record; will the evidence be printed; was General Ormond, before giving his evidence, furnished with copies of evidence previously taken and was he permitted legal counsel.

British Vessels Torpedoed In Air Attack

VALENCIA, Spain, June 22.—(AP)—Two British ships were sunk just outside Valencia harbor today by a lone sky raider in a continuation of the long series of attacks on foreign shipping in ports of government Spain.

The 3,054-ton Sunion, British ship formerly of Greek registry, struck by incendiary and explosive bombs, burned furiously for six hours and then settled to the bottom.

Previously the 4,789-ton freighter Thorpeness, shattered by an aerial torpedo, had gone down with 7,000 tons of grain.

All the Sunion's crew of 32, including a German observer for the non-intervention committee, were taken off safely.

Flames from the Sunion's burning cargo lighted the whole roads. After torpedoing the Thorpeness, the plane returned and machine-gunned her, splintering the captain's cabin.

Today's attack brought to 54 the total of airplane attacks on British ships since the Spanish war started—nearly half in the last three months.

Chief Officer Norman Goater of Southampton managed to get away in one boat with 25 members of the crew. The captain, William Kermode, and eight others jumped into the sea.

Cargo Fired.

The seaplane returned later and dropped explosive and incendiary bombs on the 3,054-ton Greek freighter Sunion, firing her cargo. Flames from the ship lighted up the whole roads.

Captain Kermode swam a mile in his lifebelt to the Sunion which put out a boat to help rescue some of the Thorpeness' crew.

The Thorpeness' non-intervention observer, Jean de Mersuay of Paris, said the raider barely cleared the British vessel's masts before loosing the torpedo which crashed into the engine room and tore a huge hole in the side of the ship.

Second Attack on Vessel.

It was the second attack on the Thorpeness during the Spanish Civil War. She was bombed on January 20 in Tarragona harbor and four members of her crew killed.

The attack by the lone raider was similar to others in the recent series of attacks on British ships.

The captain declared it was a "deliberate and premeditated attack to sink a British ship anchored at sea."

He was unable to identify the plane.

Goater said that he signed with the Thorpeness a week ago because of the large bonus offered.

Two Young Men Get 5-Year Terms

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., June 22—(CP).—"If you were older I would give you quite a long term in the Kingston Penitentiary, but I am going to sentence you each to five years in the penitentiary, Magistrate J. H. Campbell told Jack Beatty, 22, of Stamford, and Beverley Robinson, 21, of Niagara Falls, when he convicted them in county court to-day for the armed robbery of Sidney Goit, St. Catharines taxi-driver, on May 13.

Boyd C. Englehart, 16, of Niagara Falls, third person charged in connection of the robbery of $4,50 and the taxi from Goit, was dismissed yesterday when no evidence was offered.

Robinson's record dated back to 1931, while Beatty was first convicted of an offence in 1934.

100,000 Expected To Attend Eucharistic Congress

QUEBEC, June 22 (C.P.).—Greatest influx of visitors in this city's historic centuries was under way to-day as thousands of Roman Catholics from all over Canada and the New England States streamed into the Ancient Capital for the Dominion's first national Eucharistic Congress.

The narrow streets of the city were filled with members of the clergy, sandalled friars in robes of brown and white, veiled nuns in flowing black robes and men, women and children.

Though the Congress gets under way to-night with a reception for Cardinal Villeneuve, Papal Legate, the visitors have been arriving in throngs since the start of the week. Vanguard of the 100,000 visitors crowded the city's main streets last night.

Lights adorning streets and public buildings were lighted last night for the first time and gave the city a colorful appearance with the chattering crowds moving slowly along the brightly-illuminated thoroughfares. Fluttering from hundreds of buildings were innumerable flags and bunting of red, white and yellow, the Congress colors.

Imposing Sight.

One of the most imposing sights was the illuminated repository on the Plains of Abraham, named after the first St. Lawrence River pilot, Abraham Martin. The towering repository, rising 125 feet above the Epidemic Of Measles Hits Labrador Taking Heavy Toll

St. John's Nfld., June 22.

THE ST. JOHN'S Daily News published a story today that twenty persons had died on Spotted Islands, Batteau and Black Tickle, on the Labrador Coast, this winter as a result of an epidemic of measles and a shortage of food. No source was given.

The dead included six mothers leaving twenty children orphans, the paper said. They were said to have been trapped on coastal islands by ice as they were returning from their winter quarters. The ice prevented them from fishing or hunting, and their plight was made more serious by the epidemic of measles.

The situation was eventually relieved when supplies reached them from Cartwright.

Whisky Keg Explodes

FENNVILLE, Mich., June 22.—(AP)—A whisky keg retained a lot of "kick" today even though it was empty. Edward Felker, 30, mill worker, pulled the bung and lighted a match to inspect the keg, which had been lying for hours in the sunlight. The keg exploded, hurling Felker 10 feet. Felker's left ankle was broken and he was burned severely about the face, arms and chest.

Best Cheddar Cheese Is Made In Peterboro' Area

The best Cheddar cheese in the world is made in this section of Ontario, but little or none of the highest grade reaches Peterborough stores and consumers, W. J. Moore, dairy instructor, frankly admitted at this morning's session of the County Council in replying to an inquiry by Warden McDonald as to whether it was customary for factory salesmen to dispose of their second grade and other low scoring cheese locally.

Not only is the best Cheddar made here, equalled only by a small quantity produced in England, but on the other hand Canadians consume less cheese than most of the other countries with whom comparisons should be made.

The anomaly, it was remarked, spoke volumes, and Reeve Anderson added the comment that it was a ridiculous situation when cheese that left the producer last fall at less than 14 cents a pound should be quoted at 26 and 29 cents at the present time over retail counters. "And I can hardly believe that cheese passed the graders," Mr. Anderson added. He suggested that Ontario needed a "quicker curing cheese" than that which is made for export and must be held in cold storage for seven to nine months to mature.

Mr. Moore told of cheese he had recently seen in a Lindsay warehouse that was made in 1936. It was perfect in flavor and would surely find a large domestic sale if it were obtainable. The inference from this interesting discussion was that Ontario consumption of cheese was seriously affected by the marketing of far too many second grade cheese, while the highest grade product was shipped to the British market.

Car Thief Is Caught When He Tries Roads In The North

Sudbury, June 22.

STEALING a car in Hamilton was an easy job for William Duncan, but he made the mistake of trying to sample some of Northern Ontario's roads — the kind that provide Northerners with excuses to write indignant letters to Queen's Park

After three blowouts near Esponola, Duncan decided the game wasn't worth the candle. So he walked into the police station and gave himself up to Provincial Constable George Taylor.

"I give up," said Duncan dejectedly, "These roads have beaten me. I've repaired flat tires until I can't repair them any more. I stole this car at Hamilton Sunday. Lock me up and notify the Hamilton police."

Provincial Premiers Are Undermining Confidence Liberal Charges In Commons

Two Want Of Confidence Motions Are Moved In Budget Debate Tory Critic Calls For Higher Tariffs

OTTAWA, June 22 (CP).—Statements of "certain provincial premiers," because of exagerated importance attached to them, are creating bad feeling throughout Canada, aggravating sectional differences and undermining confidence in the Dominion, in the opinion of H. E. Brunelle (Lib. Champlain).

An attack by Mr. Brunelle on the "anti-national" attitude of provincial premiers of whom he named personally only Premier Duplessis of Quebec, coupled with his demand for abolition of the Senate, lent color to the budget debate in the House of Commons last night.

Playing the role of financial critic for the Conservative opposition, Hon. Earl Lawson (Con. York West) moved an amendment that, if adopted, would defeat the government. It expressed regret that the government had failed to adequately lighten the burden of taxation.

Adds to Amendment

Speaking for the C.C.F. party, M. J. W. Coldwell (C.C.F. Rosetown-Biggar) added to the Conservative amendment the further regret that the government had not implemented certain tariff pledges placed in the Liberal platform in 1919. He said he would be interested to see how Liberals would vote on what was their own party program.

Mr. Brunelle, speaking late in the evening, declared the time had come when it was no longer safe to "treat the anti-national attitudes of certain premiers with silent contempt."

Premier Duplessis of Quebec would be better advised, Mr. Brunelle said, if he bent his energies toward finding permanent constructive employment for the people of Quebec instead of "provoking political quarrels."

Unemployment insurance was a needed legislation in Canada and if provinces could not provide it they should stand aside and let the federal government do it. Workmen should not be deprived of this insurance because of the narrow attitude of some provincial premiers.

The Senate was an expensive and useless body, Mr. Brunelle declared. He advocated abolishing it and forming its members into a national Chamber of Commerce to seek new industries for Canada.

Mr. Lawson struck the keynote of his want of confidence amendment at the outset of his speech when he expressed gratification at finding in the budget that the government "had become converted to so many Conservative doctrines and policies, and disappointment to find no provision in the budget to give relief to the hard-pressed taxpayer of this country."

Aided Unemployment.

Criticising the government's trade policy Mr. Lawson declared the treaty made with United States in 1935 was contributing to unemployment. Imports from that country were increasing rapidly while Canadian exports to United States were steadily falling off.

"No wonder," Mr. Lawson said, "the government is struggling to make a new trade agreement with United States to avoid complete destruction of the Canadian market as a result of the last agreement."

Now the finance minister was claiming for the present administration the Canada-United Kingdom

Inquest Into Girl's Death Is Adjourned

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, June 22.—Due to the contradictory nature of the evidence presented by the witnesses last night (Tuesday) at Havelock Town Hall, at the inquest into the death of Zella Payne McCulloch was adjourned until Tuesday, June 28 at 7.30 p.m., standard time. The adjournment was granted by Coroner Dr. J. C. Smith of Lakefield at the request of Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry who explained that further investigation of the fatality would be necessary.

The jury, under the direction of B. Puffer, foreman, was as follows: Harold Yeo, William Platt, Cecil Watson, Bernard Smith, William McBurney, Jack Brown, Judson Yeomans and William Buchanan.

The inquest was conducted by Coroner Dr. J. C. Smith of Lakefield.

The young girl died in hospital here on Friday morning from a fractured skull sustained in an accident at Cordova on the previous Wednesday evening during a ball game, when she fell off the running board of a car.

The driver of the automobile and two other men who were passengers testified last night that they did not see anyone else on the running boards of the machine but the injured girl, but other witnesses followed who said there were two or three other persons on the running boards when the car moved off from the ball game.

When this testimony came to light the Crown Attorney decided that further light should be thrown on the whole case and there was an adjournment ordered until Tuesday of next week when it is expected a number of new witnesses will be heard.

Conclude Debate On Budget Friday

OTTAWA, June 22—(CP).—Termination of the Budget Debate on Thursday night or Friday loomed as a possibility today as whips made a check-up of their lists of speakers. The lists showed 15 Liberals, three Conservatives, five Social Crediters, J. S. Taylor (Ind. Nanaimo) and J. S. Woodsworth, C. C. F. leader, yet to speak in the debate but a number of Liberals were to confine their remarks to 10 minutes each.

With the budget out of the way a rush will set in to clear up the Legislation on the order paper although there is considerable doubt whether it can be completed in time for prorogation on Saturday July 2. Three sittings daily will probably start sometime next week.

General Franco Plans Drive To Clinch War

HENDAYE, June 22—(CP).—Insurgent advices indicated today General Franco was preparing a fresh offensive against Barcelona in the belief a successful drive through Catalonia now would clinch the Spanish Civil War.

Running into impenetrable defences in the Villarreal sector and forced to retire from the municipal cemetery there, Insurgents slackened their drive on Valencia.

Steady progress ox the government in building a formidable series of fortifications along the coast made the going slower.

Government reports said their "Milicianos" won a definite victory between Villarreal and the Mijares River when the Insurgents were forced to retire.

Meanwhile, General Jose Miaja had put thousands of sun-tanned workers to digging formidable fortifications out of solid rock near Nules to bar the Insurgent march on Valencia, should a retirement from the Villarreal-Gonda line be forced.

Stripped to the waist the workers toiled in baking heat to complete defences between Cagunto and Almenara, 14 miles north to Valencia.

Thick barbed wire protected machine gun and artillery nests behind deep broad trenches to trap tanks.

The Valencia press bragged that that city woud be another Madrid.

Nules was the worst-wrecked city in Spain as a result of a terrific air raid a week ago yesterday.

With most of the regular inhabitants gone and the city filled with refugees at the time of the raid, no one was left to search for the dead. An estimated 500 bombs fell on the luckless city, wrecking it block by block.

Master Farmer Awards Being Planned

TORONTO, June 22. — Farmers who have made outstanding contributions to the development of agriculture in Ontario are to be given formal recognition under plans announced yesterday by J. A. Carroll, Secretary of the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies.

In addition to awarding diplomas to men who have advanced agriculture in their communities, the association has under consideration a scheme to grant master farmer awards to leaders in the profession.

Each of the 300 member societies in the association will have the right to nominate one person each year for a diploma. Each nomination is to be investigated by a district agricultural director and the award will be made largely on the basis of his findings. Nominations will be made in the autumn and the diplomas will be presented by the member societies at the end of their fiscal years.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, June 22 (C.P.). — Winnipeg wheat futures closed 1¼ to ⅜ cent lower to-day after a dull session in which prices moved listlessly within a two-cent range.

July finished at $1.08, October 86⅜ to ¾, November 85⅞a, December 83⅞ to 84.

Prices opened firm and at the half-way mark were fractionally lower due to influence of lower outside markets. Brokers generally lacked inducement to lift prices out of a rut though continued lack of rain in Northern Alberta and Saskatchewan kept offerings light.

Canadian export sales were small, mostly a few loads of durums.

Censure Roosevelt

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark., June 22.—(AP)—The General Assembly of Cumberland Presbyterian Church yesterday censured "the serving of champagne after the Roosevelt-Clark wedding because of the exemplary nature of every act of the chief executive of the land." The criticism was made in a report by the committee on temperance and law enforcement which the Assembly adopted unanimously.

Hard Lumps Came On Her Legs

Ankles and Feet Swollen with Rheumatism

Rheumatism sent this woman to bed with lumps, swellings, and inflammation. Yet these symptoms soon disappeared, as they always will do when the root cause is removed. This letter tells you the method she used:—

"I was taken ill with terrible rheumatic pains in my legs. They were badly inflamed, swollen, and they were partly covered with red, hard lumps. To put my foot down to the ground was agony. After I had been in bed for 16 days, suffering agony all the time, my husband said, 'You can't go on suffering like this, let us try Kruschen Salts.' He got a bottle, and almost from the first I felt benefit. Before long, I was completely relieved — swellings, inflammation, and lumps all gone—and I am up again and doing my housework."—(Mrs.) E.L.

Do you realise what causes a good deal of rheumatic pain? Nothing but sharp-edged uric acid crystals which form as the result of sluggish eliminating organs. Kruschen Salts can always be counted upon to clear those painful crystals from the system.—Advt.

OBITUARY

MRS. ELIZA McBRIDE.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CENTRETON, June 22. — The oldest resident of the village passed peacefully away at her home on Wednesday afternoon in the person of Mrs. Eliza McBride, who had reached the age of 90 years. She was born in Haldimand Township, and was a lifelong resident of Centreton. She was the last surviving member of her family. She was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Prettie, who were of Irish descent. Mrs. McBride had led an active life until about eight weeks ago when she broke her hip. She was a mother to the community, and was known best as Aunt Eliza by all. She was well loved by many; all were welcomed to her home. Many a helping hand she had given to those in need, and took a keen interest in those about her. She never seemed to grow old and was a friend to the young people. She led a quiet home life, but great was her faith in her Master. She was a member of the Methodist (now United) Church. Her husband, the late William McBride, passed away many years ago.

The funeral service was held at the United Church on Friday afternoon, Rev. H. W. W. Bromwich and Rev. P. H. Neville, former minister, officiating.

Left to mourn her loss are one son Stanley McBride, Deputy-Reeve of Haldimand, and seven daughters, Mrs. John Honeywell, Centreton, Mrs. Archie Lamont, Winnipeg, Mrs. Cyril Beaumont of Calgary, and Thomasena, Georgenia, and Jean, all at home, and Mrs. Charles Blogett, Centreton. One daughter, Mrs. Mitchell predeceased her about 30 years ago, and a son John four years ago. There are also eighteen grandchildren and three great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

The remains were laid to rest in the family plot in Centreton Cemetery. The pall-bearers were her six grandsons, Gordon and Thomas McBride, Billy and J. D. McBride, and Henry and Vernon Honeywell.

ALEXANDER COFFEY

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CENTRETON, June 22. — Word was received of the death of Alexander Coffey, of Rochester, N.Y., who passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. S. Chapple of that city on Tuesday. The deceased was in his 84th year. And was born in Centreton on the William McBride farm North of the village; his boyhood days were spent in the village. In 1876 he married Mary Eddy and resided at Eddystone and in 1892 the family moved to Honeoye Falls, N.Y., where all are still living within a twenty-five mile radius.

This is the first break in the family, in November Mr. and Mrs. Coffey celebrated their 60 wedding anniversary.

He is survived by his wife and three daughters, Mrs. H. S. Chapple Honeoye Falls, Mrs. H. F. Chambers of Honeoye Falls and Mrs. Warren of Canada, and five sons, Thomas of Fairport, William, Fred and Roscoe all of Rochester and Jay of Fairport, one brother John of Castleton and one sister Miss Lizzie Creighton of Eddystone and 14 grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

The funeral service was held from the home of Mrs. H. F. Chambers, Honeoye Falls, N.Y., on Thursday, Rev. John Buyer of Honeoye Falls Presbyterian Church officiating. The burial took place at North Bloomfield Cemetery.

The pallbearers were the five sons and Mr. Warren a son-in-law.

AGNES LOUISE HAWKES.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

APSLEY, June 22. — The funeral of Agnes Louise Hawkes, who died in Nicholls Hospital on Saturday after a somewhat protracted illness, was held at St. George's Church, Apsley, on Monday afternoon. A short service was held at the family residence in Chandos, during which Mrs. Russell Campbell sang "The Home of the Soul," the funeral cortege then proceeding to St. George's Church. The service was conducted by the Rev. F. C. McMulkin and the sermon was preached by the Rev. C. A. G. Spence, who also said the prayers of committal at the grave.

The pall-bearers were: Messrs. C. Caverley, George Campbell, Tom Mahoney, W. Quigg, Jerome Campbell and James Downing.

The deceased's husband, Charles Hawkes, predeceased her only three months ago. The late Mrs. Hawkes graduated from Queen's University, Kingston, in 1896, and for nearly twenty years taught school in Chandos. Her many estimable qualities won for her the affection of a large circle of friends, by whom she will be greatly missed. Her college gown was placed in the casket with her body. One brother, James Campbell of Rose Island, and one sister, Mrs. Henry Hubble of Colborne, survive her.

Among those attending the funeral from a distance were: Mrs. Grant, Dummer, Mr. and Mrs. Blewett, Bridgenorth, Mr. and Mrs. Puffer, Lindsay, George Campbell, Castleton, Mrs. Henry Hubble and Miss Christina Hubble, Colborne, Mrs. C. Caverley, and Clinton Caverley, Bowmanville, Mr. and Mrs W. B. Quigg and Miss Mary Campbell, Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. D. Menogue, Indian River.

DO YOU EVER HAVE THAT "ALL-GONE" FEELING?

"You needn't—not if you follow the lead of the millions who know the health value of Eno's "Fruit Salt". Just about nine times out of ten, physical disturbances are caused by some form of constipation. Incomplete elimination causes headaches, dizziness, nausea, sour stomach and many other minor and major ills. Strong purgatives—harsh mineral salts, of which Eno has no trace, are likely to do more harm than good. A dash of Eno's "Fruit Salt" in a glass of water morning and night soon gets at the source of the trouble. Eno safely rids the intestines of those toxic poisons which slow a man up and make him miserable. Doctors prescribe Eno and take it themselves. It is both effective and safe —for young and old. Eno is pleasant-tasting, acts mildly — a simple, natural way to good health. Life today calls for Eno's "Fruit Salt". Order a bottle from your druggist now. Handy size 50c: Household size, 85c.

A Tremendous Catch

BRANTFORD, Ont., June 22.—(CP)—Clayton Warner was fishing in the Grand River when he got a tremendous catch, so big he couldn't move it. So he tied his line to a tree and dove to the bottom. He found he had hooked a big truck tire. It was in such good condition, he showed it to police. Police found it was stolen and Warner will likely get a reward.

I.O.D.E. Garden Party

A cool place during Tuesday afternoon's wearing heat was the 57th Regiment Chapter, I.O.D.E.'s annual garden party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Dodds Engleburn avenue. Towering trees with heavy foliage threw the wide lawn into shadow and from the adjoining broad Otonabee river came a strong breeze. At TOP are some of the ladies responsible for the success of the event. From left to right they are Mrs. F. J. Frape, treasurer; Mrs. R. G. Cottrell, second vice-regent; Mrs. R. E. Clarke, regent; Mrs. H. Dodds, first vice-regent; Mrs. W. Gordon Hall, past regent. A fashion show added a woman's touch to the party. At CENTRE is Joan Eldred, well chosen to model bathing suits. BOTTOM shows a party of four enjoying the afternoon, seated on the Otonabee's banks. (Examiner Staff Photos.)

Real Estate Drops

SANTA PAULA, Calif., June 22 (A.P.). — Real estate is dropping hereabouts—nine feet to be exact. When hay baling crews arrived at a 4½-acre tract for work yesterday, they found the field had sunk so far they were unable to get equipment on to the property. Possibility that the roof of a subterranean cavity had collapsed was suggested by H. R. McConnell, soil conservation service engineer.

CHILD-MOTHER DIES.

PERU, Ind. — A healthy, cooing six-pound baby girl lolled to-day in a hospital crib here, but its child bride mother was dead. Fourteen-year-old Mrs. Florence Keller Lahee, wife of a Peru basket factory worker, died last night after giving birth to the child by a Caesarian operation.

Looking Back
On This Date

On this date, June 22, in 1869, Lord Lisgar, then governor-general gave the royal assent to a bill which ended the shameful spectacle of public executions of crim- in Canada. Although this horror had been continued from the French regime through successive stages of British rule, there had been little change from the primitive idea that the way to prevent crime was to punish as publicly as possible. It is true that during the later years these public executions had been confined to the front of the prisons, instead of being held in the market squares or other places of public gathering, such as the Citadel and the Plains of Abraham at Quebec, where despite appeals of the clergy, the morbid would gather to watch the gruesome event.

Fred Williams

Opinion, however, gradually grew that public executions tended more to encourage than to halt crime, with their added opportunities for public drunkenness and rowdyism, and after the hanging of Patrick Whelan, the assassin of Hon. Thomas D'Arcy McGee, at Ottawa February 11, 1869, it reached such proportions that Sir John Macdonald, as minister of justice, passed through parliament the bill which became 32-33 Victoria, chapter xxix. This stipulated that death sentences were to be carried out within the precincts of the prison in which the doomed man was confined, and that only the sheriff, the jail surgeon and "such other persons as the sheriff would require," would be permitted to be present.

Of recent years there has been a tendency to refuse reporters access to executions, and we are now spared the unpleasant details of what happens on a judicial scaffold. Which is as good for the reporters as for the public. I saw one execution at Montreal over 50 years ago, and never wanted to see another. Once was, indeed, enough.

It had no connection and no significance, but it is a coincidence that both Wilfrid Laurier and Robert Laird Borden were knighted on a June 22, the first in 1897, the latter in 1914.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, June 23

A fairly lively day is presaged from the predominant planetary configurations. There may be rather surprising but not entirely profitable transactions, except in connection with writings and renewal of contracts. An undertone of intrigue or subtility prevails in all relations, calling for circumspection, particularly in private affairs or intimate associations. Romance or sentimental situations may have a tendency to complicate matters or cause perplexity.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is face a year in which subtle, intriguing or complicated situations may cause much confusion and uncertainty. Although new contracts, agreements and all pertaining to writings might prove profitable, yet there is need for vigilance and wise management.

A child born on this day may be keen, lively, adventurous and romantic, with talent for the unusual and leanings toward the unorthodox, which may precipitate it into peculiar situations or intrigues. It may be a money maker, but funds will not "stick to is fingers" very long.

Story Fails To Click

SUDBURY, Ont., June 22—(CP)—An overworked story failed to click on the third telling, so Arthur Giroux to-day was serving a jail sentence here. Leo Gagnon, first up, told the court he just wanted to go to North Bay, and was released. Arthur Gill ,also charged with vagrancy, asked for a chance to go to North Bay and got it. When Giroux made the same request everyone laughed, except Giroux. He got 10 days in jail.

27-Pound 'Lunge Hastings Catch

HASTINGS, June 22. — Mrs. J. H. Fisher of Rittman, O., proved she is not only Fisher in name, but is a capable fisherman. Six hours after the 'lunge season opened she hooked a 27-pounder in the east end of Rice Lake. Mr. Fisher who was with her helped land the big fish. By actual weight and measurements the fish was 27 pounds, 48 inches long, and 19 inches in girth. A pikie minnow was used as bait. Mr. and Mrs. Fisher have been coming to Hastings in the summer months for some years. They are staying at Henry Scriver's cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Milne and sons Bush, Bill and Fred, of Struthers, O., were successful in making a fine catch in the Trent east of here. They caught three 'lunge, 18, 11, and 8 pounds respectively, and 20 pickerel for their day's catch on Monday. They are on their first trip to Canada, and are staying at Old Orchard Beach, operated by Bert Preston, two miles east of here.

Messrs. E. Logue and M. Burnett of Greenville, Pa., caught a 12-pound 'lunge and 12 pickerel, the largest being 7½ pounds, for their Monday catch in the Trent west of here.

George Wilson and party of Rittman, O., caught 20 pickerel and a 5-pound 'lunge at Rice Lake on Monday.

It takes eight sheep to string a tennis racket, declares a London expert.

Pointing At Germany

A special Federal Grand Jury sitting in New York dealt bluntly with the work of the German spy activities in United States. The word "spy" of course is not the one used in official language where they refer to it as espionage.

United States had developed a new pursuit plane, said to have been the fastest machine in the world. The plans for that machine were stolen and are probably in Germany today.

The U.S. Army and Navy radio telegraph and telephone procedure book was also stolen, and it was highly regarded because it contained all the secret codes.

There were eighteen persons named as having been engaged in work of that nature, but only four of them are in United States at present; the others have returned to Germany.

As a rule when official action is taken to head off or bring to light foreign espionage the name of the offending nation is not mentioned, but in this case the Grand Jury said plainly and definitely it was Germany, and Germany and United States are on the basis of friendly nations.

The espionage system is not confined to Germany. Other governments maintain similar agencies, and their continued operation is evidence that nations have little confidence in each other. It is also a fact that this sort of work plays a major part in keeping alive the feeling that some other nation is planning extensive military movements against which other nations will be forced to protect themselves. We know of nothing else which fits in so nicely with the desires of the relatively small group of people in the world who wax fat from the building of new and greater and more deadly armaments.

The finding of that jury in New York has been expressed in terms which are admittedly blunt. A great deal of the courtesy and gentle wordage in which such messages are often enough couched has been taken away in its entirety and the official finger has been pointed straight at Germany. United States may prefer to go its way separate and apart from the rest of the world, but each day brings its own new evidence that other nations are much alive to the fact that United States is very much part of the world.

Should Attend To It

Royal Commissioner Fred H. Barlow, K.C., has submitted a report after making an investigation into the conduct of the Homewood Sanitarium in Guelph. Although a number of other matter were mentioned during the taking of evidence, the central point in the proceedings was the case of Angus McIntosh, a man from Montreal who claimed he had been forcibly detained in the institution and had been improperly taken there in the first place.

So it is that one would look at the finding of the commissioner and his recommendations on that point, and it is worded in this way:

"That legislation be passed providing sufficient safeguards to prevent any patient being detained in a private mental institution at the will of relatives or others."

"That the committal of a patient to a private mental institution be placed under the control of the Department of Health."

"That an officer of the Department of Health inspect each private mental institution at stated intervals to be fixed by the Minister of health."

This paper believes that all these recommendations should be adopted and incorporated in the laws of the province for the regulation of private institutions dealing with mental cases. If there is one condition which people might well have cause to fear it is that an individual might be sent to an institution by relatives who for reasons of their own desired to have him indefinitely confined. And that of course is taking a person's liberty away, and the liberty of the individual is something on which we place a rather high value in this country. And rightly so.

Our regulations should be made so plain and so readily workable and so well and generally understood that there would be no danger left of an individual being sent to a private mental institution from a wrong motive. Admission should be as well regulated as admission to our provincial institutions.

Ladies Prefer Scrubbing

The Examiner's Campbellford correspondent tells of a meeting of the Seymour West Women's Institute at which the ladies present answered the roll call by replying to the question "The Work I Like Best." There were 62 present at that meeting and we are informed the majority selected scrubbing as their favorite occupation.

We read the report twice and there is no mistake in it. Scrubbing received the majority vote, and it can be regarded as a free and outspoken expression of opinion and preference. The ladies attending could have said anything they liked; could have mentioned making baking powder biscuits, sitting in the shade on the side porch and shelling the peas, setting the table or washing the dishes, doing the mending or darning the socks. But no—the majority replied in favor of scrubbing.

How far that belief holds we do not know. The very word smacks of action, direct and effective, it tells of a desire for cleanliness and a willingness to launch a frontal attack on anything which appears to be soiled or which by its appearance gives evidence of falling inside the catgory of things which offend the eye or might possibly give refuge and asylum to germs and such like.

It does seem to indicate that the spirit of the pioneer lives in Seymour West. There is no expressed desire on the part of the ladies for a life of ease; it seems they have not slipped in the least. Now and then we come across something which seems to express the feeling of the times and the age in which we live. We admit being a trifle surprised but none the less pleased to find the majority of the ladies offering testimony that they actually preferred just to scrub.

Paying Interest

The auditor of York Township has been indulging in what is a rather popular procedure—breaking down the tax levy and showing where the tax money for the year 1938 is actually being spent.

Education receives 24.34 per cent. of the total, but the money required for paying interest amounts to 36.25 of all the tax money for the year 1938.

If that statement is correct just as it stands then it indicates a serious enough state of affairs. It means that of each dollar the taxpayers contribute only 63.75 cents is effective in meeting the current expenses of the municipality. The rest of the dollar is going to carry existing debt.

It is probable enough that this particular community passed through the stage of rather rapid development where population was increasing rapidly and where there were unusual demands for all the services which a community can provide via the route of borrowed money. It was like a great deal of instalment buying being done at once with the idea of paying for the goods in the future. If that statement is correct about 36.25 per cent. of all tax money going for interest payments then that would be a poor invitation to a prospective citizen to enter the community.

An Opportunity To Learn

The Kiwanis Club of Peterborough intends to build a model home. The site has already been selected, and it was considered advisable for members to have a little ceremonial when ground was broken for the new building. That of course is often done; the Mayor might have been asked to take a spade and turn the first sod—that is if there were sod to turn.

The Kiwanians decided on something a little more intimate. The members gathered while the president of the club, L. J. Pettit and Dr. J. J. Craig laid hands on a scoopshovel. At the business end of the shovel there was a team of horses attached. The Examiner camera man was present and took a picture of these two gentlemen, each of whom laid a hand on a handle of the up-ended scoopshovel. The picture was fine we thought; it gave that intimate touch which showed that the members themselves if necessary would gladly proceed to gouge holes in the ground for foundation purposes, or would go willingly scampering about bearing planks and kegs of nails.

Both Dr. Craig and Mr. Pettit should know that one man is supposed to operate a scoopshovel. The picture shows them with either a surprised or slightly perplexed look as though they did not know exactly what next to do with the thing. They should follow in person the operations of this very necessary device for several hours and learn exactly how it operates and what it does. They would have the satisfaction of wrestling in person with mother earth and learn with what effort sections of terra firma are dislodged. We believe the deeper they delved into the hole they were making the greater would become the sum total of their knowledge. With knowledge so gained they could speak with persuasion and conviction regarding the joy and worth of erecting a model home. When it is finally brought to completion and gives shelter and comfort to some happy occupant it would be possible for the gentlemen to walk past in the evening and point with pride to evidence of their craftsmanship.

Toronto Not Moved

It seems that people who live in Toronto do not possess any desire to pay for atmosphere. There has been an auction sale going on at Chorley Park, the home for years of our Lieutenant-Governors, and all the goods to be offered for sale were catalogued, and into the catalogue there was brave effort made to write what one could call atmosphere. There was a hat-tree, a mahogany affair, hand carved, and it was disclosed that once the Prince of Wales had hung his hat there, but it went for $10.50. There was a long linen tablecloth and the atmosphere connected with it was that the Duke of Kent had at some time or other eaten off it. But in spite of its length and in defiance of its atmosphere it sold for $8.50.

In the list of things there was an adjustable book rack for those who desire to read without holding the book in the hand, and the atmosphere surrounding this contraption centred in the fact that Lloyd George had made use of it. Some person made bold to bid $2.50 and came into possession.

The Queen of Rumania was said to have slumbered beneath a pink bedspread, or if she were fussy it may have been she turned it down before retiring. (The young lady in the woman's department of this paper says that should be always done.) Such atmosphere as that was counted on to spur the Toronto folk to greater heights, but the bedspread we learn was sold for $3.50.

We fear that Toronto which boasts of being the cultural centre of the province, is slipping. It is being gripped by the gross mercenary spirit of the age which sees value only in an article which has been stripped of the lure of tradition and the atmosphere shed by the notable personalities which have moved near to it in the past. A duke or a prince may have shined his boots on a kitchen chair in Toronto but to the folk at an auction sale it is but another kitchen chair. The material age is weighing down heavily upon our provincial capital.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The fact that lunge are being caught within the city limits is just another example of the fact that Peterborough has something for everybody.

They keep on asking the question—How far can taxation go? The answer seems to be another question—How much has the taxpayer got?

It is all very well to say that Canada's revenues in the last year have been the largest in history. That only means of course the country has paid the largest tax bill on record.

The wind blew so hard in Saskatchewan that it moved a 3000-pound tractor 20 feet. The story would have been more complete had it stated if the tractor went in the direction its owner desired.

Toronto and Baltimore have been tied for the cellar position in the baseball world, but our sports editor likes Toronto so much that he prints Toronto's name first in the humble group.

Now that the question of stalls in the restaurants has become a live issue for the moment it is interesting to note that 20 years ago it was being complained that the bylaw banning stalls was not being enforced.

Toronto Board of Education is still arguing about a ruined pair of trousers. Evidently some of the members are afraid that if they do anything to have the garment repaired or replaced they may be unseated themselves.

Department of Agriculture is looking for 42 carloads of infected Virginia potatoes that have been circulated in Ontario. They presumably want to catch the offending tubers and have them inoculated.

Now that Oshawa's beverage rooms are kept open an hour later to compete with bootleggers the police have declared war on the illegal sellers. If the second step had come first the first might not have been necessary.

The unpaved portion of No. 28 Highway between Peterborough and Apsley needs an application of dust-laying material. We are glad to have visitors and tourists coming in here but our enthusiasm ought not to take the form of greeting them with a cloud of dust.

Dr. Telford, C.C.F. member for Vancouver East, announces he intends to resign to force an expression of public opinion on the Government's attitude toward Vancouver's unemployed. That sounds like the start of a hectic by-election.

NEIGHBOR

(By A. R. K.)

¶ When I was young how well I knew, the life and deeds of Dave McStew, he farmed broad acres there; no man knew more than Dave McStew, folk talked of all the things he'd do, his failures too were rare.

¶ If cows took on a choking spell, then all the folk began to yell, they knew not what to do; then one was sure to ride away, and then you'd hear some person say, he's gone for Dave McStew.

¶ When horses limped or had the heaves, and couldn't pull a load of sheaves, they sent for Dave McStew; he'd fix up blisters for the beast, heaves never bothered him the least, he'd patch them up like new.

¶ When little pigs got spots of brown, and looked like how they got run down, they sent for Dave McStew; and to his sayings they paid heed, when he would doctor up their feed, and they'd recover too.

¶ Dave knew just how to trim a sheep, fixed mower knives so they would reap, knew how to graft a tree; I've seen him on a busy day, when something broke when hauling hay, carve out a whiffletree.

¶ It made things pleasant all around, when Dave McStew came on a bound, for he was strong and thin; it seemed to give him joy indeed, to find the neighbor man in need—then do good turns for him.

His Question Not Answered

(From Parliamentary Debates)

Mr. BLACKMORE: The suggestion of the hon. member for Kootenay East (Mr. Stevens) causes me to point out that in my judgment we shall never get the economic life of this country on a stable basis until we introduce from one end of it clear to the other the principle of the just price.

An hon. MEMBER. HOW?

Mr. BLACKMORE: First of all, go to work on it; realize it has to be done. Then, probably call in those who know how to do it. There has been no evidence so far that anyone has attempted to do it, and the farmer is being destroyed. It is the same in Ontario as in other parts of the country. I do not wish to labour this unduly, but the words of the hon. member for Kootenay East are absolutely true, and this situation ought not to be.

I have come to the point where I should like to ask the Minister of Agriculture three or four questions just to get clearly in mind the point of view of the Department of Agriculture. I am not sure this is the right place to ask these questions, but the first one is this:

What is the purpose of the Department of Agriculture in the Dominion of Canada? Is it here to increase the agricultural output in Canada, or is it here to increase the farmers' prosperity and stability in Canada, or is it here to improve Canada's agricultural possibilities? I believe that if we can definitely answer these three questions to start with, we would be on a basis from which we could go forward.

The next question which ought to be asked, it seems to me, is this: Is our Department of Agriculture primarily concerned with producing Canada's needs or the world's needs?

An hon. MEMBER: Both.

Mr. BLACKMORE: A very sound answer came from the other side of the house—both. That is also my opinion. If that is the case, it helps us to direct our agricultural thinking. I come from an agricultural constituency, and I am deeply interested in these questions, as I know all members are. My province is primarily an agricultural province, and my constituency is an agricultural constituency. I have said several times already in this house that unless something is done to regulate the situation for the farmers in my constituency, then we are destroying the agricultural life of my constituency, which ought not to be. I think everyone will grant that.

I propose to ask several other questions after a while. I do not want to be too truculent, but the time has come when the farmer's voice must be heard, and attention must be paid to it. Otherwise we must frankly acknowledge that in this Dominion of Canada the agricultural industry no longer counts, that it is a secondary consideration. Once that is acknowledged so that everybody knows it, well enough. Then we shall all know how to act; then we shall all know what to do. We shall all know that it is not wise to stay any longer in the western provinces, that we had better move to Ontario and Quebec where the industries are.

Miss MACPHAIL: Mr. Hepburn will look after you.

Mr. BLACKMORE: We shall have to move east. That is how many people from the agricultural areas are feeling. While we do not want to have anything unpleasant, I think probably the time has come when there ought to be a show-down. That is how the farmers are feeling. We are pretty much with our backs to the wall. It is practically impossible for us to move across the line into the United States as tens of thousands of farmers have done, and it is rapidly becoming impossible for us to live on the farm. If we leave the farm and move into the cities, we face a life of misery, and we have much the same situation to face as those boys in Vancouver of whom we were speaking yesterday. While I do not want to precipitate anything unpleasant, I would ask the minister, as man to man—I know he is as deeply interested in the farmers as I am—

An hon. MEMBER: More so.

Mr. BLACKMORE: You must not say more deeply interested. You can think it, and say it if you want to be wrong. But the minister comes from the west and is a westerner with me. He is interested in the west, first, as the west itself. Second, he is interested in it because of the part the west can play in making Canada a great and happy country, and that is the attitude we all have.

I have asked very few questions on the estimates, but if I could get an answer from the minister to the questions I have put, I have several others.

Mr. LENNARD: Ask them.

Mr. BLACKMORE: I have asked several already, and they will take some answering. First, what is the purpose of the department Is it to increase the agricultural output of Canada?

Mr. ILSLEY: If I my be allowed, I move, Mr. Chairman:

That under vote 483, supplementary estimates, subsidies for cold storage warehouses under the Cold Storage Act, there be added: "and special grant to the Temiskaming Producers' Cooperative, New Liskeard, Ontario, $1,050.

• What Is the Cost of This House?

(Ottawa Journal)

THERE WAS AN interesting little discussion on low-cost homes in the House of Commons the other day. Part of it ran this way:

Mr. MASSEY: . . . some thought should be given to the question of obtaining designs for small low-cost standard houses.

Mr. DUNNING: We have that now.

Mr. MASSEY: I know we have that now, but not down to $2,500.

Mr. DUNNING: Oh, yes.

Mr. MASSEY: As low as $2,500?

Mr. DUNNING: Yes. The last competition was specifically for that class, and produced quite remarkable results.

Mr. MASSEY: But I understood there was some question whether or not the houses could be in all parts of this country for the figures estimated.

Mr. DUNNING: That, of course, will always be a debatable question.

Mr. MASSEY: A $2,500 house in Halifax may not be a $2,500 house in Vancouver. The aim was to have a $2,500 house. I fully understand that.

The discussion gives point to the experience of an Ottawa man who became interested in the Government's low-cost housing scheme. He bought the Government design of one of these cheap houses, engaged an architect to prepare working specifications and make an estimate of cost. To reduce that cost some inside work was omitted, a small garage and back steps were added, the type of construction was the cheapest permitted under the Ottawa building bylaws. The estimated cost was not $2,500 but $4,900. If say $300 were deducted as the cost of the garage, and $500 added as the price of a lot, the total would go above $5,000. This one-man housing scheme has fallen by the wayside.

The official explanation is plausible. It is said that the designs of low-cost houses under the Government-assistance plan do not mention or guarantee any cost figure. What was aimed at in the general designs was a series of houses which could be erected in many parts of Canada for about $3,000. But it is agreed that costs vary greatly. Building costs depend on such factors as the local building bylaws, climate, the price of labor and materials. Thus it is clear that the same type of house would cost much more in Ottawa than say in Vancouver Island where heating is a minor problem, insulation is less important, lumber is cheaper.

What the incident illustrates is the extreme difficulty of devising a housing scheme that will operate with reasonable uniformity in a country of such varying economic and climatic conditions. And it is clear we must be cautious in speaking generally of low-cost houses, because the dwelling that can be erected for $2,500 or $3,000 in Victoria or Western Ontario may run into a much higher figure in Toronto or Ottawa.

• Why Hospital Costs Are So Low

(By The Ontario Hospital Association)

IN REGARD to the equity of prevailing hospital rates, some interesting figures recently published in the 68th Annual Report of the Department of Health upon the operations of Ontario hospitals for the year ending September 30th, 1937, throw some light on this question.

The report shows that 172 Public Hospitals and Sanitoria in Ontario during this period spent $14,840,844.03 in providing 4,925,037 hospital days' care for 282,665 patients.

Against this figure, the income from patients amounted to $7,848,691.48, or approximately 53% of the total expenditure.

In other words, Ontario patients over the average paid only 53 cents for every one dollyar's worth of hospital care they received last year.

The average per capita revenue from patients works out at approximately $1.59 against the average per capita cost to the hospitals of $3.01.

$1.42, therefore, or nearly half of every patient's daily hospital account on an average basis, was paid for them through government or other sources.

This was not the only gift to the patients. To it must be added the millions of dollars spent in buildings and expensive equipment, which played a major part in their treatment and for which they were not charged.

The question naturally arises. "Can the public get more service for an equal cost in any other sphere of humanitarian endeavour?"

• Those Who Depend On Relief

(Hamilton Spectator)

FOR THOSE on relief who have exhausted every means of self-support and are genuinely anxious to earn their own living—and these, we are sure, constitute the majority—everything that can be done to help them over their difficulties, and to assist them to re-establish themselves on an independent footing, must be done. But any idea that such relief measures are anything more than expedients to meet temporary emergencies must be discouraged.

That there is a class which regards help of this kind as a permanent right, some of whom are indolent by choice rather than necessity, cannot be denied. The Government must, of necessity, deal with a strong hand with such as these.

The action of the local Welfare Department in bringing destructive relief tenants to time furnishes an example of the necessity for a firm official attitude. Wallpaper torn off, doors ripped from their hinges, houses "so wrecked that no one wants them," what excuse can be made for such ungrateful conduct?

The income provided relief families is little enough, no doubt; but the demand that all such wilful damage should be made good is a reasonable one. Landlords have their rights, and any situation which ignores those rights out of sentimental consideration for people cannot be tolerated by any well-regulated community.

TESTING DRIVERS

(Providence Journal)

IT IS A WELL established fact, for example, that individual drivers differ widely in their capacity to react to typical situations which arise in the course of ordinary driving, such as the necessity to stop suddenly. Machines have been devised to test driver capacity, and they are reasonably accurate. They disclose that some persons react so slowly, or have unsuspected disabilities of such seriousness, that it is unwise to permit them to operate motor vehicles. On the other hand it is often possible to correct certain driving faults which the machine discloses, and make safe drivers out of incompetent ones. It was from a background of knowledge regarding this situation that Commissioner Foote of the Pennsylvania Motor Patrol said the other day that "the answer to traffic accidents is that most people don't know how to drive and don't know it." And he said that three young men with high averages in mental examinations at the Pennsylvania Motor Police Training School are to be dismissed because they failed in tests on the intricate machine that checks their driving ability.

TRY IT ON THE JUDGE

(Winnipeg Tribune)

A RECENT legal decision in the United States has fallen upon jaded sports writers like manna from heaven. It appears that the umpire at a ball game in a West Virginia town called a strike. The batter felt differently about it, made a verbal protest and followed it up with a punch on the nose. The umpire took the case to court.

After hearing the testimony, the judge dismissed the case with the remark, "It is the inalienable right of a baseball player to get mad and have a fight with the umpire".

The judge has had his little day; but we are wondering what his reaction would be if some litigant in his court exercised his inalienable right to get mad at a decision and took a punch at the judge himself. Perhaps it might occur to the umpires' league to make a test case.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

WHEN JESUS therefore perceived that they would come and take him by force, to make him a king, he departed again into a mountain himself alone.

And when even was now come, his disciples went down unto the sea, and entered into a ship, and went over the sea toward Capernaum. And it was now dark, and Jesus was not come to them. And the sea arose by reason of a great wind that blew.

So when they had rowed about five and twenty or thirty furlongs, they see Jesus walking on the sea, and drawing nigh into the ship: and they were afraid.

But he saith unto them, It is I; be not afraid. Then they willingly received him into the ship: and immediately the ship was at land whither they went.—John vi, 15-21.

RADIO VS. NEWSPAPERS

(International Typographical Journal)

DURING THE recent suspension of the three daily newspapers of Portland, Oregon, due to a strike of the mechanical staffs, now amicably settled, many interesting facts were forcibly brought to the attention of both buyers and sellers in that enterprising city. One of the principal ones is that radio news service does not supply a community with the kind of news service it really wants. Newspapers in Portland are more appreciated now than they have been in the past fifty years, and one would think, after listening to comment in public gatherings and on the streets that one of the greatest events in history had happened. It was also brought out, rather conclusively, that radio advertising is not responsible for bringing customers into the metropolitan area stores nor in suburban stores, because during the duration of the strike retail trade suffered a tremendous drop in business and the little merchant who seldom advertises was the one hardest hit. It is apparent that the advertising of the large merchantile establishments brings to the little merchant his customers, and that the little fellow should share his just responsibility in newspaper advertising in the future.

KICKED DOCTOR, STONED CAR MISPLACED LOVE IS BLAMED

Widow Is Given Two Months for "Intolerable Persecution"

IS CALLED MENACE

Chesham, Buckinghamshire. — A 33-year-old widow, Mrs. Lily M. Gunnell, sentenced to two months' imprisonment for persecuting Dr. William Lawrence Johnson, of Chesham, was alleged to have—

Struck him in the face, making his nose bleed; kicked him on the shin; broken a window at his house; and thrown a stone at his car.

Mrs. Gunnell pleaded guilty.

Dr. Johnson's wife alleged that Mrs. Gunnell made a murder threat when she broke the window.

Mrs. Gunnell denied this, saying what she said was that if she was sent to prison, she would get a gun and shoot them.

The chairman of the bench, W. F. Lowndes, described Mrs. Gunnell as a danger to the public. He directed that ehr two children should be looked after.

H. C. Dickens, who appeared for the Medical Defence union, said it was with the greatest reluctance that Dr. Johnson took the proceedings, but there was no other way of stopping the intolerable persecution which had been going on for several months.

He drew attention to a number of letters alleged to have been written by Mrs. Gunnell to the doctor, and said one contained threats, one contained a treasury note, and one contained the phrase, "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned." It was a case of misplaced infatuation.

After Dr. Johnson had given evidence, Mrs. Gunnell tried to go across the court to him, but was restrained.

She exclaimed, "I hope the doctor is provided with a pair of white wings, which I am sure he deserves."

SEEK MINIMUM PAY FOR BAR EMPLOYEES

London — A five-and-a-half-day week and a weekly minimum wage for all public house bar workers in London is one of the points of a program of new conditions which the bar workers' trade committee have issued.

They also want to establish a registration scheme so that workers from other industries shall be "debarred" from entering the industry during periods of unemployment.

LOSES $3,000 YEARLY BY HER MARRIAGE

Second Husband Is Precuniary Advantage, British Court Holds

London—Should a woman, receiving £500 ($3,000) a year from the husband she divorced, continue to receive the same sum when she remarries?

Mr. Justice Bucknill considered this poser in the divorce court—and decided that the answer is "No."

"A second husband is a pecuniary advantage," he ruled.

He was giving reserved judgment in a case in which Hew Brazier Perkins appealed from the dismissal of his application to vary the maintenance of his former wife, Millicent Brenda, whose decree nisi against him was made absolute in February, 1934.

The following March an order was made by consent for the payment to her of £500 per annum by Mr. Perkins, but in November 1934, she married Captain Reginald Bagshot of the Royal Marines, and Mr. Perkins asked the court to reduce his alimony. This the registrar had declined to do.

Mr. Justice Bucknill said there was no rule of the court laying down how her late husband's pocket stood affected when a wife, receiving alimony, married again.

Mr. Perkins had a gross annual income of £3,000 ($15,000), but Mrs. Bagshot was now saved the expense of maintaining a separate establishment.

Making the test that a second husband was a financial asset to his wife, the judge allowed the appeal, and reduced the first husband's payment to £350 ($1,750) per annum free of tax.

NUNS DIG FOR BURIED GOLD UNDER 1,000-YEAR-OLD HOME

Can't Find Treasure Sensed by Diviners, But Locate Menace to Building

ARE BADLY IN NEED

Thames Ditton, Surrey. — Under the cellars of the 10th-century Home of the Compassion of Jesus at Thames Ditton, nuns have been digging for buried treasure.

For a month, often until early morning, they have worked with the sleeves of their robes folded back, breaking through cement floors with pickaxes and digging into the earth with workmen's shovels.

Three diviners "felt" the presence of the treasure, indicated the spot where it should be found.

The Mother Superior and nuns took up floor boards in the hall, worked by the light of bicycle-lamps and candles to dig cavities 15 feet deep.

Weary and with their patients to look after, they decided they could dig no longer.

But the Mother Superior means the search to go on. It will be continued by two gardeners.

"It is a race against time. We need money urgently to keep the home going and this seems our only hope of getting it," she said.

"An Australian woman visitor who has the diviner's gift told me that there was treasure buried here.

"I brought two more diviners. All sensed the treasure and all selected the same spot where it would be found.

"We got a diviner to make a tour of inspection. He told us that he divined gold, silver and bronze lying beneath the flagstones.

"We were all excited at the time, and some of the nuns and I started digging at once. That was last November. We dug until three o'clock in the morning; but we found nothing.

"I found that deathwatch beetles had settled in the old oak beams and threatened the whole building."

The Home of Compassion was mentioned in Domesday.

FISH UP 50 FIREARMS FROM SOMERSET POND

Discovery on Lonely Spot Off Road Presents Police With Puzzle

Bath—Discovery of 50 firearms, well oiled and in perfect condition, in Embrough pond, a lonely spot off the Bath-Wells road, in the Mendip hills, presented Somerset police with a puzzle.

Two anglers, Captain C. Baldwin of Green Park, Bath, and Commander E. G. Hibbisley of Ston Easton Park, owner of the stretch of water, made the find.

"We were fishing for pike in the pond and at lunch time I set a rod and left it. On returning I found that it was fast to the bottom," said Captain Baldwin.

"I could just lift it by getting over it, and inch by inch nursed the object to the surface and, putting my hands down under the water, brought it up.

"We were amazed to find it was a perfectly brand-new rifle. I went on fishing, only to haul up another."

After notifying the police, the commander and Captain Baldwin dragged the pool with a rope and hook and 50 firearms of British and German manufacture were brought up.

'BAD LUCK' STATUE IS SOLD AT LAST

Insurance Agent Parts With It After Forty Years

Blackpool—Declaring that it had brought years of bad luck, Irvin Stead, a Blackpool insurance agent living in Seabourne Ave., South shore, has sold an albaster statue of Buddha, which had been in the family more than 40 years.

The Buddha, which weighs 14 lbs., is believed to have been stolen by soldiers from an Indian temple. "And the story is told," said Mr. Stead to a reporter, "that when a Buddha is stolen the high priests meet and put a curse on all who have anything to do with it.

"We have had a succession of misfortunes. My wife and I have had bad health, relatives have died tragic deaths, and even in our pleasures something has too often happened to spoil them."

The new owner of the Buddha, a Blackpool woman, laughs at the superstition—"I think he'll bring me good luck," she says."

OWL IN LOVERS' LANE ROUTS YOUNG COUPLES

Bird With Three-Foot Wing Spread Attacked Him, Says Musician

Lydney, Gloucestershire—An owl, with a three-foot wing span, has emptied Lydney's lovers' lane of its couples.

Nightly it has attacked young lovers with its great yellowish white wings, talons, and beak.

The particular stretch of lane it haunts is a dead-end between Lydney Cross and the railway station, where the pathway is edged with tall trees and hedges, so that passers-by cannot always see the swooping bird until it is on them.

Russell Jordan, a musician, of Station Rd., Lydney, said: "The owl suddenly flew at me from behind and gashed my neck with its beak and claws."

Ornithologists here have identified the bird as a barn owl. Mr. Macdonald, assistant keeper of the bird room at the Natural History museum, South Kensington, said: "I have never heard of a barn owl attacking people, unless its nest is very close at hand." No nest has been found in Lydney's lovers' lane.

HUSBAND'S POLICE CLUB USED BY WIFE ON 'OTHER WOMAN'

Female Spectators in Gallery Cheer as Court Binds Her Over

DENY INFATUATION

Leighton Buzzard—Reference to a "crime passionelle" with a truncheon when a police officer's wife attacked a woman with whom she thought her husband was infatuated, was made at Leighton Buzzard police court.

Women in the gallery cheered and clapped when the wife, Mrs. Lillie Emeling Turner, of Vandyke Rd., Leighton Buzzard, was bound over on a charge of causing bodily harm to Mrs. Ellen Margaret Moore.

It was stated that Mrs. Turner struck Mrs. Moore with a truncheon belonging to her husband, who had now left the police force.

Mrs. Turner gave evidence of finding her husband and Mrs. Moore together on three occasions. Once, she said, she found him under a bed and Mrs. Moore in a cupboard.

F. W. Lathom (prosecuting): You took the truncheon out for the deliberate purpose of hitting Mrs. Moore? —Certainly.

An association between Mrs. Moore and Mr. Turner was denied.

Mrs. Moore said that Mrs. Turner came up brandishing a truncheon and rained blows on her. She screamed and another woman came up, but did not help her. She had to have medical attention every day for a fortnight.

She denied that Turner was found hiding under a bed and she in a cupboard by Mrs. Turner in March, 1936.

W. G. W. Willis, defending, said that in France a plea would have been entered of "crime passionelle."

What greater provocation could there be, he asked, than Mrs. Turner carrying on for some years under scorn and contumely through her husband's infatuation for another woman.

The nurse, Miss Gwendoline Mary Jones, 20, whose home was at Tan Lon, Ty Croes, Anglesey, recovered consciousness before death and asked: "Are the children all right?"

"This girl gave her life for the children," said Dr. Hodgson, medical superintendent at the City hospital, Fazakerley, Liverpool, where she was employed, at the Liverpool inquest. "Accidental death" was the verdict.

IS JAILED FOR THEFT OF 120-FOOT CHIMNEY

Man Admits Pulling It Down and Selling Bricks

Romford—That a man felled and stole a chimney stack 120 feet high was alleged at Romford when Arthur Joseph Sayers (25), dealer, of Canning Town, was charged with stealing the bricks to the value of £40 ($200) and iron bands forming part of the stack.

He was further charged with obtaining £30 ($150) by false pretences from James Hedges.

Detective-Inspector Baker of Romford, said the stack stood in a disused brickfield in Hall Lane, Upminster, but had disappeared, and Hedges told the police that Sayers had sold him the bricks.

When Sayers was arrested, added the inspector, he admitted that he and another man had pulled the stack down and sold the bricks.

The first discovery that the chimney had disappeared was made by the agent of the owner of the brickfield when he went to collect rents from cottages adjoining the land.

Sayers was sentenced to three months' imprisonment.

SON LEFT ANNUITY TO KEEP TRADITION

Unlikely to Follow Father's Wish He Join Army or Navy

London.—The hope that a family tradition should be carried on by his grandson is contained in the will of Earl of Kitchener of Khartoum, who became second earl when his brother lost his life in H.M.S. Hampshire in 1916. Earl Kitchener died at Hoeys Bridge, Kenya.

He directed that the sum of £10,400 ($50,000) advanced to relieve his son of his marriage agreement, should be paid to Lady Broome, and that the sum of £8,000 ($40,000) should be devoted under his wife's will as therein directed.

The bulk of his property he left to his two younger grandchildren on attaining the age of 25 years, stating: "I hope my younger grandson will go into either the navy or the army. I direct that should he pass for either the navy or Woolwich £100 ($500) a year is to be paid to him."

The grandmother of the Hon. Charles Kitchener said to a reporter: "Charles is still at Winchester, and he is going to join his brother, the present earl, at Trinity college, Cambridge, this autumn.

"I rather think it is too late for him to join the navy now, and it is a question of waiting to see what the young man thinks himself about the army as a career. He is a great strapping boy six feet, three inches tall."

FOUR-CYLINDER NAME HALVED BY NOBLEMAN

Hobart - Hampden - Mercer-Henderson to Become Mercer-Henderson

London. — The Earl of Buckinghamshire has changed his surname by royal license from Hobart-Hampden - Mercer - Henderson to Mercer-Henderson. The change was announced in the London Gazette.

Lord Buckinghamshire, who is 32, succeeded his father, seventh holder of the earldom, in 1930. He is descended from John Hampden, the "Great Patriot" of the civil war, and lives at Hampden House, Great Missenden, Bucks.

He is the licensee of the Hampden Arms, a picturesque inn in the village of Great Hampden, of which his father also held the license for 45 years. Once a year custom has it that he must stand behind the bar and draw beer for the patrons.

In 1903, 15 years after he had married the only daughter of the Hon. Hew Adam Dalrymple Hamilton Haldane-Duncan-Mercer-Henderson the seventh earl assumed by royal license the additional surname of Mercer-Henderson.

He is interested in the Boy Scout movement and in 1933 was among the officers in charge of the British contingent at the world jamboree at Budapest. As a youth he spent two years in Australia, where he studied farming.

THINK JEWEL GANG BROKEN WHEN FIVE ARE ARRESTED

Capture by French Surete Has All Elements of Melodrama

TRAIL LONG ONE

Paris.—Diamonds stolen in London, Southampton, Amsterdam and Antwerp were found in a trunk at Oran, Algeria (French North Africa).

The trunk—in which gold ingots were also found—belonged to Antonio Rodriguez, a South American, and his wife.

They had been arrested in an Oran hotel, charged with stealing a diamond from an Algerian jeweller.

At the same time, French detectives raided a mystery house in Brittany and arrested a dancing girl named Mario Hidalgo, another girl called Joaquina Lopez, and a man named Ortez, who has a police record in Madrid.

All five arrested people are believed to belong to one international gang of jewel thieves — mostly Spaniards or South Americans.

The Brittany raid was on a house at Nantes, which no one visited by day but was often busy at night.

The detectives found there a supply of passports, enabling the gang to move freely around Europe, and —in a place of honor in the main room—a large photograph of Antonio Torres, a gangster at present serving sentence in a French prison.

WOMAN ARGUES CASE BEFORE PRIVY COUNCIL

Noni Horton of Australia Loses Appeal in Land Case

Sydney, N.S.W. — Noni Horton travelled 12,000 miles, from Sydney to London, to argue an appeal to the judicial committee of the privy council but lost her 37th case.

Miss Horton, however, was complimented by the committee for the manner in which she argued that she should benefit, under a promise, from the estate of a wealthy sheep farmer whom she nursed through a protracted illness. The estate was worth £30,000 ($150,000). Her claim was barred under a law of Charles II's reign which provides that all contracts relating to land must be in writing.

She claimed it was a question of whether there was evidence of intention to enter into a binding contract. And after she had been speaking and reading from authorities for two hours a member of the committee, Sir George Rankin, offered to read a judgment for her. When the statement ended Lord Wright said the court was prepared to go through her papers and consider all the points raised. But the judgment was against her.

Widow Pleads Insanity and Blindness—Is Sentenced to Death

GOT INSURANCE

Vienna.—Martha Marek, beautiful Jewish widow, aged 40, with her red hair newly waved, heard a judge in the Vienna criminal court sentence her to death for poisoning her husband, her baby daughter, an aunt and a friend.

During her trial, which had lasted a fortnight, she had claimed she was insane, going blind and becoming paralyzed—though experts certified her sane and healthy.

She appeared in the dock fitting the description the prosecution applied to her — "a woman with a mysterious fascination."

She was carefully groomed. The gay jumper she wore was new.

After hearing the judge tell her that her "satanic career has now come to an end," her comment was: "I look forward to death with composure. I can take with me the comforting knowledge that I have not murdered, but that I have been murdered."

The motive in each case was to obtain insurance money. Her fascination had made it easy for her to persuade her aunt and friend to make wills in her favor.

OSHAWA GM-MEN DEFEAT KINGSTON TO TIE PETES IN C.O.B.L.

Oshawa Wins 11-9 Count In Poor Game

KINGSTON, Ont., June 22. — In an erratic game of ball filled with baseblows and blunders, Oshawa defeated Kingston 11 to 9 at the Fair Grounds last night to tie Peterborough for the leadership of the Central Ontario Senior triangle.

Exactly the reverse from previous scheduled C.O.B.L. games when runs were usually few an dfar between, the teams settled into a slugging, sloppy fielding display, but it supplied plenty of excitement for the fans who like their games wild and with a little bit of everything.

The main thrill as far as Kingston was concerned was when Oshawa entered the last of the ninth with a five-run lead and the Ponies tucked into Turner's pitching for three hits, scored a run, and had two on base when Lefty Biddle was rushed to the rescue, and, although Kingston counted two more, he checked the rally by striking out the last batter with the tying runs on base.

Oshawa practically tucked away the ball game in the fourth, collecting five runs on five hits and an error, but Kingston trimmed three off the lead and made it any team's game, considering the brand of ball. Errors cost the Ponies their best chances, giving Oshawa easy advances around the bases. On the hitting Kingston was only one short of Oshawa for total base blows, but made more progress on extra base blows with a homer, two triples and four doubles to Oshawa's homer and six doubles.

Bob Elliott was the victim of one of his poorest games of his career. The versatile playing coach of the Ponies could not get anything right and was charged with three of his team's six blunders, two as a second baseman and one at third, while he was out of position on other Oshawa hits that might have been cut down. He also struck out on his last three turns at bat. In fact, everything seemed to go wrong for the hard-working Kingston leader, after he was struck by a pitched ball on his first appearance at bat in the first inning.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

HERB RALPH'S local Young Petes play Bowmanville at 6.30 this eve in Riverside Park in a Lakeshore Junior Baseball League game. Ought to be a honey, too, as these young baseballers play a smart game. Lots of dash to their diamond chores, pitching that isn't more than a block behind that of senior ranks and some neat hitting and fielding. Several of the local lads could just about hold their own in the C. O. B. L. right now. Probably McIlmoyle or Clark on the home slab with Hooper or Selmon for the visitors. We'd like to see the juniors get a break from the fans as they can use a lot of support. And Herb Ralph has been sticking i nthere year after year bringing along the young ballsters during the years of diamond famine around here. And now he appears to have a right promising outfit lined up once more.

ABOUT A thousand fans—not as many as officials hoped for—took in the exhibition lacrosse game here last night and saw Orillia Terriers cop a 24-16 victory over the Petes. Fans saw the Terriers turn it on in real championship form for one quarter, the third, when they took a 10-1 edge—but otherwise the Orillia outfit looked stale from overwork in their heavy senior "A" schedule. They looked a bit better than the Petes, but not as much as one would expect. Not for a senior "A" team which won the Ontario title a year ago.. And has often copped the Canadian championship. However, they won and were satisfied, and we don't suppose the customers are kicking. It was a pretty fair tussle for an exhibition game.

* * * * * * *

WHEN THE Terriers really had to step they could travel like a boy leaving a nocturnal apple orchard as the dog barked. Piper Bain unravelled his long legs a couple of times and appeared to have seven-league boots on. And they certainly sparkled when in around the net, outguessing the goalie with ease as they juggled the ball about with lovely stickhandling. Coles ,Brunskill, Cassidy and a couple more of them turned in a swell game and the rest sparkled in spots. Buster Whitton, Don Crowe, Ira Dundas, Norm Worthy and a few more of the Petes played a nice game, and the rest worked hard against superior opposition. Only a couple of penalties in a clean fray.

BUCKO McDONALD is a good hockey player in our book, and that's all. He didn't show a thing here except a rather homely mug. No doubt the great Bucko felt he was doing his duty by putting in an appearance, but the N. H. L. defenceman didn't do a thing after the first quarter. Was in on a couple of neat goals and then coasted. Maybe he was covered pretty closely and possibly he was tired out, but he certainly didn't look like the gee who has been starring in senior "A" games all season with four, five and six goals and some assists each performance. We might inform him we've seen better hockey defenceman in person here before—in fact, we believe, Dit Clapper was in the crowd last eve—and he didn't thrill the throng any by shuffling around aimlessly most of the fracas. He was quite disappointing.

HAD A CHAT with one of the Orillia officials. He said the local club would be wise to get some ground stone (maybe from Lakefield) and mix it with the loose sand at the arena. Then dampen it down before each game and it would be not only extra fast but dustless. That's what they do in Orillia. Also informed us that a number of the Terriers' imports don't work—they just play lacrosse. He recalled Mick Magee and said he was as good as some of the Orillia team and could have played, but there were no job available when he tried out this spring. This guy thought that, with four or five imports, the locals could play senior "A" next year—and be at least as good as Hamilton, Fergus and Brantford are this season.

OSHAWA GM-men climbed into a first place C. O. B. L. tie with the Petes last night when they took an 11-9 win over the Ponies in Kingston. It was a sloppy, wierd sort of scrap, quite different to other Central Loop tilts this season. Paczkowski pitched for the Ponies and Turner went most of the route for the winners with Biddle being rushed to the rescue when he weakened. Foley, Hurst, Rowden and Jubenville got three hits each for the Motor Citizens. And for the Kingstons, McQuaide, Corkey and Bennett banged the ball out safely three times each. Coach Bob Elliott played an awful game for the homesters, we understand, doing everything wrong after he was hit by a pitched ball in the first frame. Punch drunk maybe. Next loop tilt is Saturday when the Ponies come here. The Petes have an exhibition jamboree in Port Hope tomorrow in the twilight.

* * * * * * *

GUNNER WHITEHILL may do much of the pitching for the Petes on the Lakeshore diamond, while Len Wakely and Tommy Pointer will split slab duties for the Hopers. Game is at 6.30 o'clock. The Port Hope crew have a new shortstop named Johnston, recently transferred by the O. B. A. The latter body also okayed Vinnie Utronki's move to Kingston and that of St. Louis to Belleville. The executive still declines to pass Bob Doll of the Petes, and hasn't even been asked to okay several other C. O. B. L. ballsters. It ordered Bowmanville to cut out signing up Oshawa players, and granted a bye into intedmediate "C" playdowns to Roseneath.

JUST FOR THE fun of it, and having no fear of the well-known limb, we'll call Max Schemling to kayo Joe Louis in N'Yawk tonight. Though, at this distance, it can only be a guess. They mix at 10 bells and you can hear 'em whamming each other over WHAM —an ideal station for a fight broadcast, we think. There are a lot of angles to any pro fight but Paul Gallico—noted N'Yawk ring commentator—claims that, while most fights smell funny, championship bouts are generally on the level. As there is too much oughday in them to make it worth while for a pug to do a tank act, Schmeling on form should win, having more ring brains and moxie than Louis, while both are hard hitters. The nigger is favored in betting odds but we like the German to cop it by a K.O.

Smelters Lose Soccer Tilt In Late Play

After a real hard tussle in a league soccer game last night, Deloro went down to defeat with honors to C.G.E. after having two-thirds of the play. They led at half-time by the odd goal, and missed plenty more during the game. The local boys were soundly trimmed until the last ten minutes, when Buchan, at centre, went on a scoring rampage to register the C.G.E.'s three tallies. Jack Hart, Sr., made a favorable impression as a referee, and was ably assisted by two linesmen.

Outplay Locals.

Deloro forced the pace, in the early stages, to find the C.G.E. full backs —Mitchell and Murduff—nullifying their efforts when within the shooting zone. Earl and McPhate tried long shots upon goal to realize that O'Neil was in an unbeatable mood. Within the next minute, Mitchell was well set to score, and picked the under-bar for a rocket drive. The Deloro custodian pulled the ball out of danger to relieve the pressure. After twenty-seven minutes' play, Jack Hart intercepted a C.G.E. attack and carried the ball up the field, to leave Bradley in position, who ended his clever effort by sending a rising shot into rigging, to give local goalie no chance to save. The Electrics endeavored to get the equalizer, but it never materialized before the interval. Half-time: Deloro 1, C.G.E. 0.

Slump In Last Minutes.

On resuming, Deloro was more aggressive, and consolidated themselves to combination that was productive of dangerous raids upon Bolton's charge; in fact, P. Gray sent an ankle-high drive right across the goal to beat the custodian as the ball hit the inside of the upright. Bolton caught the re-bound to fist clear in the nick of time. With only twelve minutes to go, the Electrics re-arranged the attack to gain success when a penalty against a full-back awarded the C.G.E. the equalizer when Buchan converted from the spot. Not long after, Brooks broke away up the field to slip the ball over to Brown. He sent a sizzler into the corner of the upright, where Bolton saved. A. Mitchell transferred the play to the C.G.E. right wing, where Ross was now playing. He worked a throw-in off his opponent to let Earle drive a mid-air shot into goal. Three men went up in the air for the ball, but Buchan stood back and made a feint moved to gather up the ball with a gentle touch that rolled inside the upright. The visitors never gave up and were unfortunate in the remainder of the half. Towards the finish, Ross travelled down the wing to land the ball at the waiting toe of Buchan, who slammed the third counter home. Canadian General 3, Deloro 1.

Goal-scorers: James Buchan (3); Deloro, Bradley.

Deloro: C. O'Neill, goal; J. Townson and T. Cousins, full-backs; W. Hart, J. Hart, Jr., and J. Sproul, halves; A. E. Elliott, E. Bradley, G. Brooks, W. Brown and P. Gray, forwards; subs., Scott and W. Gray.

Canadian General: J. Bolton, goal; J. Mitchell and Stan. Murduff, full-backs; H. Stewart, A. Mitchell and T. McPhate, halves; H. Keith, A. Ross, B. McMaster, J. Buchan and J. Goodhue, forwards; sub., W. Harris.

Referee, J. Hart, Sr.; linesmen, N. Downer and E. Jones.

Expect 80,000 For Schmeling-Louis Fight

NEW YORK, June 22 (AP).—The fight that has overshadowed all else in the fistic world for two years comes true at 10 p.m., E.D.T., when Joe Louis, the 24-year-old Alabama negro, defends his heavyweight championship against Max Schmeling, the 32-year-old German ex-champion, at the Yankee Stadium.

A crowd of 80,000 is expected to be packed into the famous baseball arena when the two gladiators shuffle out to meet each other under the bright, hot lights. The fans will have paid close to $1,000,000 to watch the pair belavor each other for 15 rounds, or less, in the event of a knockout.

Celebrities of every stripe will be there to watch the German try to repeat the knockout he scored over Louis two Junes ago in the same arena, and to witness the efforts of the young champion to remove the one blot from his escutcheon.

Louis remains the 1 to 2 favorite in one of the biggest betting fights of recent years, and is the choice of a majority of several hundred experts who are here from every section of the United States and Europe. The so-called "fight mob" regards Louis as a shoo-in, a virtual cinch, and Promoter Mike Jacobs is hoping fervently that the title remains in the United States.

All Saints Bantams Beat George Street

An 11-run attack in the sixth inning gave All Saints' Bantams the win and a finalist playoff berth last night in the Church Softball League as they trimmed George Street, 22-20, at Prince of Wales School. It was a wide-open affair, with the Anglicans having a little more punch. Lacheur had three homers, while Hotrum and Lacey also batted well. Blackwell made some nice catches. George Street had one big frame, the sixth, when they tallied 10 runs for a temporary lead, but they couldn't hold it. Morrow, Smith and Greatrix were the main hitters, with Stevenson good defensively. The teams:

ORILLIA TERRIERS TAKE 24-16 VICTORY FROM THE LOCAL CLUB

Visitors Pile Up Comfortable Lead In The Third Quarter To Carry Home The Win

Thousand Fans See Neat Exhibition Of Lacrosse Sport . .

Orillia Terriers took a 24-16 victory over the Petes here last night in an exhibition lacrosse game before nearly a thousand fans. After a fairly close first half, the visitors opened up in their championship style in the third quarter and built up a commanding lead to coast home on. The score was 5-4 for the Petes in the first quarter and 11-8 for Orillia at halftime. The visitors outscored the homesters, 10-1, in the third heat, and the Petes had a 7-3 margin in the fourth. It was a good clean exhibition with the Terriers too good for the locals but having to hustle most of the way to show any edge.

The visitors showed plenty of speed afoot when they really bore down, with nice passing and lovely stickwork at close range to baffle the goalie. The Petes didn't look too badly outclassed by the 1937 O.L.A. senior "A" champions and made it a neat game to watch. Only a couple of penalties were earned all the way. Bucko McDonald was watched close and did little, acting more as a decoy than anything else. Coles, Brunskill, Cassidy and Smith went best for Orillia, with the rest just shining in spots; while Whitton, Dundas, Worthy, Crowe and E. Creighton looked best for the locals.

The teams:

Terriers, Goal, Hall; defence, Willson and Steggall; centre, Connell; wings, Smith and McDonald; rover, Snowden alternates, Bain,; Coles, England, Brunskill, W. Curran, Cassidy, Boettger and McArthur.

Petes: Goal, Meyette; defence, J. Creighton and Miller; centre, Dundas; wings, Worthy and Reid; rover, Whitton; alternates, Magee, Crowe, Pammett, Dallin, Chute, Sloan, Bowen, Westonfelt and E. Creighton.

Good Junior Tilt Here This Evening

Bowmanville and the Young Petes tangle tonight (Wednesday) in Riverside Park at 6.30 in a Lakeshore Junior Baseball League contest. It will be a return joust as the Young Petes pulled out a close win in Bowmanville last Saturday afternoon. At present, Herb Ralph's locals are tied for first place in the league standing, and a win tonight will hoist them on top of the ladder. Bowmanville is a serious threat this season, trotting out a big bunch of experienced junior baseballers. Tonight's tussle ought to draw a big crowd of fans, as these teams are well-matched and play smart ball—not very far behind senior calibre. And the boys deserve plenty of support.

McIlmoyle or Clark will likely do the hurling for the homesters tomorrow, while Hooper is expected to start for the visitors—with Lefty Slemon in reserve. Both squads will be at full strength for this game, it being an important fixture in the loop race. Fine ball should be the order, with first-rate flinging likely, some good fielding and a good share of solid hits. The Young Petes shape up as a strong junior contender and stand a good chance of copping league laurels and making a real showing in O.B.A. playdowns.

TRAINER DIES SUDDENLY

LONDON — (CP). — Frank Jefferis, Millwall football club trainer, collapsed and died in the club offices shortly after being presented with a cheque in recognition of his services.

Bears Hang Up 12th Straight

TORONTO, June 22. (CP).—It appears the only way to stop the Bears from winning right now is for the opposing teams to miss the train to Newark.

The International league champions ran their current winning streak to 12 games last night by defeating Montreal Royals 7-2 and stretched their league lead to 8½ games over the idle Buffalo Bisons.

Bob Seeds belted his 28th homer of the season and Jimmy Gleeson smashed out a triple and two singles to lead the bears' nine-hit attack. It was the 13th consecutive game in which Gleeson hit safely.

Behind his teammates' timely hitting, Atley Donald won his sixth game of the season. He was touched for 11 hits.

Jersey City Giants cut the Bisons' second-place margin to five games by nosing out Rochester Red Wings 3-2. The defeat sent the wings down to fifth place as Syracuse Chiefs moved into the first division by taking a double header from Toronto Maple Leafs 7-6 and 4-3.

Hy Vandenberg went the route for each game with Tony Bongy setting effective fashion to gain his fifth straight victory.

The Chiefs rapped out 13 hits in each game with Tony Rongy setting the pace with five blows, three in the opener and two in the windup. Old Johnny Grabowski, who started the first game and was knocked out of the box, relieved Paul Gehrman in the second inning of the 10-inning nightcap, and pitched two-hit ball the rest of the way to gain credit for the win.

NEW YORK, June 22 — (AP) — Contracts for Max Baer vs. Schmelin or Louis match in September were drawn up late yesterday by Mike Jacobs and Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager . . . Barney Ross, who retired after the Armstrong fight, still is getting offers to enter the ring . . . All are being declined . . . "We burned Barney's gloves, trunks and all his other equipment the day after Armstrong beat him," said Art Winch, one of Ross' managers yesterday . . . "He'll never enter the ring again".

Johnny Vander Meer is getting a lot of attention here . . . First bell hops at the McAlpin adopted an agreement not to accept tips from the no-hit star . . . tomorrow afternoon there'll be ceremonies at the home plate at the Polo Grounds where Johnny will be made a colonel on the staff of the governor of Florida and presented with a suitable gift by Frank Winchell, Tampa Hotel tycoon, in whose town Johnny did spring prepping . . .

Up-state gossip has it that Babe Ruth was installed in the Dodger organization by the bankers and soon will be announced as part owner . . . Seabiscuit did a mile in 1:37 at Suffolk the other day, while the best Menow could do over the same distance at Wilmington track the same day was 1:38 3-5.

Just to give you an idea that Barney Ross meant it when he said he was through with boxing, he won't even come down from Ferndale (where he is playing golf) to see Louis and Schmeling tonight.

Well, this is "der tag" . . . We still like Louis in 10, more likely in six.

Ohio Teams Can Get The Jump On Title Series

NEW YORK, June 22 (CP).—Instead of the "subway series" that looked so likely when the big league firing started in April, this fall's big show of baseball may be an all Ohio proposition.

Cleveland Indians, who hammered the Yankees back into third place yesterday 10-5 already are packing American League. Cincinnati Reds, on the strength of the 6-2 battering they handed Carl Hubbell, are just 1½ games behind the National league-leading Giants and can jump that gap by taking the two remaining games of their series with Terry's Terries.

It's not such a long shot, either. The Giants, struggling along minus lead-off man Joe Moore and with a revamped line-up, have dropped their last three starts. The Reds, on the other hand, are riding a streak in which they have lost only three out of 14 games and have zoomed out of the second division into second place.

Hubbell Hit Hard

They weren't fooling when they teed off on Hubbell, either. The southpaw screwballer, making his third unsuccessful attempt for his 200th big league victory, was belted for a pair of homers and three runs in the third, and four hits and three more runs in the seventh. Six of the Reds' seven safeties off the Hub went for extra bases, including a four-bagger by Ival Goodman that hit high up on the right-field upper deck and a triple by the same gent that, just to show his versaltility, went to the bull pen in deep left.

Meanwhile big Jim Weaver was balancing the heavy artillery with some fancy four-hit pitching. When he threatened to lose control of the situation, Rucky Walters took charge and didn't allow a hit the rest of the way.

But the Reds' harsh treatment of Hubbell and the Indians' 14-hit assault on Yankee Red Ruffing wasn't all of the day's fireworks.

In Detroit Frank (Pinky) Higgins wrote a new chapter into baseball's book of big league records and at the same time erased a famous name. The Red Sox third baseman, with four hits in each half of a double-header with the Tigers, ran his streak of successive safeties to 12, bettering by one the previous mark set in 1920 by Tris Speaker.

Riger Rudy York hit a homer in each game to tie Boston's Jimmy Foxx for the lead at 19 each, and the Sox, winning the first by 8-3 and losing the nightcap 5-4 edged into second place again, four points ahead of the Yanks.

It was a big afternoon, too, for Harry Kelley, the veteran Washington right-hander won his first game of the season and made it a good job as he shut out the White Sox 7-0 on five hits. In the other American League game Oral Hildebrand also pitched five-hit ball and the Browns whipped the Athletics 5-2.

Cubs Shade Phillies.

In the National League, the Cubs took advantage of effective relief pitching by Veteran Charley Root to shade the Phillies 4-3; Jim Turner set down the Cardinals with five hits to give the Bees a 3-1 decision, and the Dodgers, playing their second night game at home, were left still needing their first victory under the Ebbets Field arcs, as they bowed to the Pirates, 9-3.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Jim Weaver and Bucky Walters Reds—combined for four-hit pitching job that whipped Giants, 6-2.

Jeff Heath, Indians — drove in four runs with homer and single as Cleveland topped Yankees, 10-5.

Jim Turner, Bees—his five-hit pitching stopped Cardinals, 3-1.

Pinky Higgins, Red Sox, and Rudy York, Tigers—Higgins set Major League record streak of consecutive hits to 12, getting eight, seven singles and double, in doubleheader with Tigers; York hit homer in each game as Red Sox won first, 8-3, and Detroit the nightcap, 5-4.

Charley Root, Cubs — stopped Phillies with two hits in four-inning relief trick as cubs won 4-3.

St. James Bantams Oust Knox 21-11

St. James Bantams of the Church Softball League last night took a 21-11 win over Knox at King Edward school. They play George St. tonight at Queen Mary to decide who enters the final round with All Saints. Steady twirling by Leether and consistent clouting, especially by Murduff, Leether and Wildman, won this important tussle for them last evening. Knox reached the end of their string with this loss. They left a crowd on bases and were weak afield. Gardiner, Hamblin and Gourley led their futile attack. Teams:

Purchase Of Canadian Products By Great Britain Depends On Canada's Buying In Britain

Frank Paterson Reviews Work Being Carried On By Dept. Of Agriculture.

Canadian producers seeking broader markets in Great Britain and ships lying idle in the Mersey for lack of cargoes for Canada represented the extremes of a commercial problem which might be far removed from the ordinary affairs of a county council, Frank C. Paterson, agricultural representative, told the council in a short address Tuesday afternoon, but, he added, it was of primary importance to the farm industry of this country.

Mr. Paterson referred in passing to a speech made by Sir Reginald Hugh Dorman-Smith, K.B., M.P., to the Canadian Club of Ottawa a month ago on his way home from the Empire Producers' Conference at Sydney, Australia, and suggested that every progressive farmer should read that speech because it was an expression of British opinion on the question of trade with the Dominions and with countries outside the Empire. Britain has a large agricultural enterprise of its own to be considered, and also an urgent necessity of finding markets for its manufactured products. The implication was plain that the purchasing of more Canadian products by the British consumer is going to depend to a considerable extent on Canada's purchase of British products. In other words, vessels have to be loaded both ways, according to Sir Dorman-Smith's statement which embodied perhaps the major subject of the deliberations of Empire representatives at Sydney. H. B. Cowan, Sr., one of Canada's representatives at the conference.

Review Of Work Here

Mr. Paterson presented the members with copies of a report of the extensive work carried on by the local office of the Ontario Department of Agriculture as represented by himself and his predecessor, A. D. Runions, during the last fiscal year. Successively they addressed 53 meetings, attended 40 others, and travelled 17,710 miles on Department business. There were also 88 meetings held in the representative's office. Telephone calls, letters and personal visits by farmers totalled 8,178 during the year. Nearly twenty senior extension projects were mentioned, including the field crop competition in connection with a white winter wheat area, assisting growers in securing a market for their registered Dawsons golden chaff wheat for seed purposes. More than 400 bushels were sold out of the county. Two fertilizer demonstration plots were established in 1937; 75,445 trees were distributed for reforestation and wind break planting; assisted in the work of obtaining services for setting up a restricted area for eradicating bovine tuberculosis; commenced soil testing service; addressed nine of the fifteen meetings sponsored by J. J. Duffus in promoting interest in soil testing; assisted field days, breeders associations and so on. Altogether there were 12,737 contacts during the year.

215 Herds Tested

Mr. Paterson said 215 herds have already been tested in the county, and the work was going forward, although Dr. Penfold has had only one assistant. The proposed soil survey was also begun, and men have been in the field since the frost went out of the ground. Peterborough soils are high in lime content, Mr. Paterson said. They are alkaline, and the present test is only the first step in a broad program of soil improvement in Peterborough. The testing for alkalinity is not an easy process, but new methods are being developed, with the prospect that better accomodation may be afforded to farmers in the near future.

"The challenge to the farmers of today for the rehabilitation of their land seems to me greater than that which the pioneers faced in cutting down trees and clearing their farms in the early days of this county," Mr. Paterson said. "You all know a lot of land is worthless. More of it is being farmed out and exhausted by bad methods, and it might be wiser to concentrate on the farms that are not worn out."

Mr. Paterson congratulated the county on their initiative in planning to obtain a large area for reforestation. Progress elsewhere even since early Spring throughout Ontario has been surprising, and sentiment reflected a meeting he recently attended showed that Ontario is becoming aware of its reforestation problem and was applying itself in a business like way to making up for lost time and neglect of such an essential matter as that of reforestation

Reeve Mann commended Mr. Paterson on the work he was doing, with special reference to the calf and foal clubs, and Reeve Gifford requested him to attend a meeting of the agricultural committee Thursday morning.

waited six months to reply to a letter published in the Examiner at the close of 1937 relating to county matters under discussion during the municipal elections. He didn't name the writer, but he said afterwards it was Reeve Anderson. It was published on Friday, and the next day was a holiday, "so I had no opportunity of replying to that letter," Reeve Mann said. "However, the ratepayers of Smith answered it at the polls on election day."

The council was in committee on equalization of assessment when Reeve Mann recalled the incident in regard to which he had patiently bided his time for a reply.

The problem of equalization of assessment brought forward by protests from the three villages and Smith was discussed between hearings of deputations Tuesday afternoon without any appreciable progress beyond the scrutiny of assessment rolls, with Reeve Anderson bearing down on the probing of the alleged grievances. Particular attention was paid to the claim of Lakefield as to its assessment loss caused by the Canada Cement Company selling a large part of its interests in the village to the Hydro-Electric Commission. The council will resume its discussion of assessments today.

After Pneumonia Couldn't Get Strong

After many severe illnesses the patient is often left in an extremely weak and exhausted condition.

To all those convalescents needing a tonic to strengthen and build up their weakened system we would recommend Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills to assist them to recover the full enjoyment of robust health. They help to tone up the nervous system and bring back bodily strength and vigor.

Buy a box and be convinced.

MRS. GEORGE CLARK, Wallace, N.S., writes:—"Some time ago I had a severe attack of pneumonia. I never seemed to get my strength back, and was always in a weak, nervous condition until a friend advised me to take Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills.

After I had taken two boxes I felt as well as ever, so I will recommend them to any one who is suffering as I did, for I could not have taken any medicine that would have done me so much good."

In Praise of Famous Names

The manufacturer of any good product, who advertises it consistently in the daily newspapers can, in the course of time, make his product famous.

Everybody knows and uses products whose names are famous because of the vision, faith, courage and enterprise of the owners of them.

They were not famous in the beginning, but the owners proceeded to make them "household words" by means of persistent advertising in daily newspapers. The goodwill value of these names is fabulous; so much so, indeed, that one or more of the plants in which these products are manufactured could be destroyed with less loss to the owner than the loss of the trade name.

You, too, can build sales and goodwill for your products and services by advertising in the Canadian daily newspapers.

This advertisement was prepared for the Canadian Daily Newspapers Association by Thornton Purkis.

De Valera Scores Victory In Eire Elections

The Fianna Fail government of Premier Eamon De Valera, INSET, was swept back into power in the recent Eire elections, as it crushingly defeated an attempt by William T. Cosgrave, former head of the Irish Free State, to return his party to their former power. A general view of historic College Geen in Dublin during one othe final election meetings is shown ABOVE.

Fascists To Meet In Kingston Instead Of Toronto

Montreal, June 22 (CP). ADRIEN ARCAND, Quebec Fascist leader, said last night the first national Fascist convention will be held at Kingston, Ont., "either July 1 and 2 or 2 and 3."

"I will reach there June 30 and the convention will get under way a day or two later," he said. Definite choice of Kingston as scene of the get-together had now been made, he said, despite an earlier announcement the blue-shirted "legions" would meet at Toronto as a result of protests by Kingston's City Council.

"We will have a one-night meeting in Massey Hall Toronto, July 4, though," he said. "Addresses will be made by officers elected at the Kingston convention."

agreement, negotiated by the last Conservative government, and renewed without material change. He was not surprised since that agreement had brought larger markets with a surplus of exports over imports.

Voted Against Agreements.

"Shall I ever forget that in the final analysis every member of the Liberal party but one rose to his feet in this House and voted against the empire trade agreements? And now the minister of finance boasts of "our trade agreement with the United Kingdom in 1937."

Referring to the lack of tariff changes in the budget and the reasons given, Mr. Lawson doubted if those reasons would "commend themselves to the people of Saskatchewan."

"I am confident," he added, "the people of Saskatchewan will now come to the conclusion to which many honorable members had previously come, that despite the injury which might be done to Canadian business by delay in bringing down the budget, this budget with no tariff changes in it would not be received until after the electors of Saskatchewan had gone to the polls."

With a Conservative convention scheduled for next month Mr. Lawson said he was not at liberty to enunciate a Conservative policy at this time. But he would say the first step to solving Canada's pressing problems involved wiping out "the growing spirit of provincialism and sectionalism and obtain the maximum cooperation between provincial and federal governments."

He alleged federal Liberal government failed to work in harmony with Liberal provincial governments and recalled the declaration of Premier Hepburn of Ontario last year that he was "no longer a Mackenzie King Liberal."

R. J. Deachman (Lib. North Huron) said the Conservative budget critic was consistent in that he presented the traditional Conservative argument that had been repeated down through the years of "more Conservatism, more high tariffs, reliance upon our home markets, development of our home industry—and nothing else."

Mr. Bennett, in 1930, had held up the United States as a country progressing under the policy of "America First." And then, a few months later, the only tune heard across the line "brother can you spare a dime?"

United States had led in the crash that ushered in the depression and then, when general conditions had again approached prosperity United States led in another recession, or depression.

"We have reached a stage in world history when, I venture to say, no longer can any country maintain a high tariff."

John Blackmore, Social Credit leader, said it was "a rich man's budget" depending on taxation and borrowing both of which tended to benefit the rich and place a burden on the poor. There was no new source of money. Mr. Blackmore dealt with an elucidation of Social Credit theories.

During the hour devoted to private bills C. Grant MacNeil (CCF Vancouver North) moved second reading of his bill to establish parliamentary control over the command of Canadian military forces, their compulsory service and their despatch to fields of action outside the Dominion.

Rene Pelletier (S.C., Peace River) seconded the motion and the two speeche soccupied the entire hour leaving the measure little hope of being voted upon at this session.

Speaker Tells Loyalist Move

(Examiner Correspondence.)

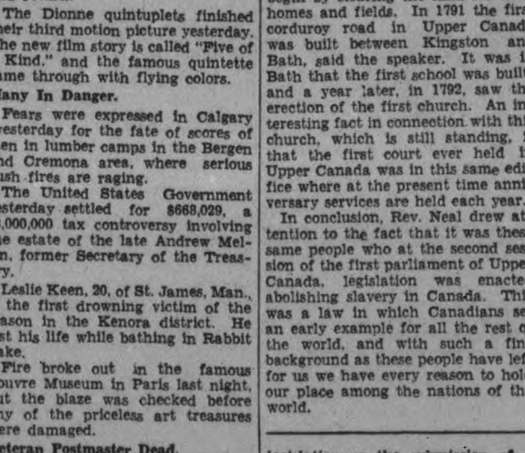
CAMPBELLFORD, June 22.—The anniversary of the United Empire Loyalists to the Bay of Quinte District on June 16, 1784, and the wealth of heritage which these pioneers who left the United States out of sheer loyalty to British principals to settle in a land that had never been turned by a plough was the interesting subject which President-elect Harold B. Neal discussed in an address before members of the Rotary Club on Monday.

Of the British who evacuated Boston on troop ships, 50 thousand came to what is now Canada and settled chiefly in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. However, about 10 thousand of them settled in Quebec and half as many made what was then known as Upper Canada their home. Arriving here, they settled in the Brockville and Kingston area, some coming to Prince Edward County to what is known as the Adolphustown peninsula, where they landed on June 16, after spending the winter on the shores of the St. Lawrence, near Sorell, having left Boston on September of the same year.

It was in the midst of a primeval forest which these first settlers, the United Empire Loyalists, who had left behind the schools, churches, courts of justice and communicating roads, were forced to live and to begin by clearing the land for their homes and fields. In 1791 the first corduroy road in Upper Canada was built between Kingston and Bath, said the speaker. It was in Bath that the first school was built, and a year later, in 1792, saw the erection of the first church. An interesting fact in connection with this church, which is still standing, is that the first court ever held in Upper Canada was in this same edifice where at the present time anniversary services are held each year.

In conclusion, Rev. Neal drew attention to the fact that it was these same people who at the second session of the first parliament of Upper Canada, legislation was enacted abolishing slavery in Canada. This was a law in which Canadians set an early example for all the rest of the world, and with such a fine background as these people have left for us we have every reason to hold our place among the nations of the world.

Famous Banker Held For Ransom



Reports from London state that Baron Louis de Rochschild, RIGHT, head of the Austrian branch of the famous banking family of Europe, is being held prisoner by Nazis in Vienna and that a demand of $10,000,000 "ransom" for his freedom has been made to members of his family. The ransom is termed by the Nazis as compensation for collapse of the Credit Anstalt bank which collapsed in 1931, while Rochschild was president. Two younger brothers of the imprisoned banker, Baron Alphonse and Baron Eugene, LEFT, who was host to the Duke of Windsor during his stay in Austria, are reported to be safe in Paris.

Banker Gives Talk To Millbrook W.I.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, June 22.—Mrs. B. L. Richards extended the hospitality of her home, Centre Street, for the June meeting of the Women's Institute on Saturday at 8 p.m., the president, Mrs. R. J. McKnight, being in the chair and over twenty members and visitors being in attendance.

The roll-call was answered by a new member, or a guest, and after a sing-song, Mrs. George Fallis read a paper on "Your Community and You." The correspondence read by the secretary, Mrs. J. W. Hilton, included a request from the Port Hope Agricultural Society, asking the Institute to make an exhibit at its fair in the fall; a choice of a number of entries was suggested, and the letter was signed by Mrs. W. T. Marvin; also a letter from Alfred W. Sparks, requesting the holding of a "tag day" in the interests of the Canadian Institute for the Blind.

On the suggestion of the president, it was decided to have a question box at each meeting of the branch, with the idea of increasing interest and information on W.I. matters. The address of the evening was given by Mr. H. A. Kerr, manager of the local branch of the Bank of Toronto, who gave a comprehensive history of banking and banking laws, stressing the importance of safety-boxes, and of cheques which are kept on file in the banks for years, and the producing of which has often saved the issuer costly litigation.

Mrs. Alex. Harkness and Mrs. Delbert Olan were appointed the visiting committee for the current season, and the invitation of the former to hold the July meeting at her home was gratefully accepted. On motion, it was decided to invite the Morrish branch to be guests of the local society in the near future, and to ask the donor, Mr. Scott, to have the shuffleboard reserved for the use of the visitors on the evening in question.

Mrs. Olan gave a report of the district W.I. annual held recently at Bailleboro, and the idea of a picnic in August was favorably received.

Mrs. W. H. Armstrong will have charge of the program for the July meeting, and there will likely be a demonstration by the junior girls' club, with a report from the girls who attended the conference at the O.A.C., Guelph. Mrs. Richards was warmly thanked for her hospitality, and Mr. Kerr for his address, before the meeting was dismissed with the National Anthem.

GALT.—Charlie Wing, Chinese cafe owner, was all smiles for he had just served an English customer who ordered his dinner in Chinese. The visitor was Rev. H. O. T. Burkwall, Toronto, who had spent 40 years in China on missionary work. The missionary had spent many years near where Wong was born and he told him much home-town news.

Most Favorable Showing Made By Militia Unit

"Peterborough has set an example to other municipalities in the province in the manner which the citizens and heads of industries are supporting the regiment," Brigadier-General H. F. H. Hertzberg, C.M.G., D.S.O., MC, District Officer Commanding Military District No 3, said last night addressing 275 men and officers of the Prince of Wales Rangers Regiment and spectators at the annual inspection held in front of the Armouries.

"I am indeed pleased to hear that factory managers are co-operating with Colonel Dewart in allowing employees time off work to attend camp, and I hope to see all of you at camp in Ottawa next week," he stated. General Hertzberg added he had been informed the citizens were soliidly behind the officers in making the regiment a first class unit. "This support of the people is what is wanted above all else. The people of the city evidently realize the regiment is theirs, and that is as it should be."

Excellent Showing.

The inspecting officer told the officers and men he had no hesitation in telling them that the showing of the regiment was excellent, and he commented on the remarkable improvement noticed since the amalgamation. "Your ceremonial was particularly good and if you are as proficient in the handling of the weapons, you have nothing to worry about.

At the reviewing stand with General Hertzberg were Hon. Lt. Col. H. A. Morrow; Major Salmon, General Staff Officer from Kingston; Col. H. J. Smith, Officier Commanding 9th Infantry Brigade, and the Brigade Major Howard.

The regiment marched down the parade field, first in column of companies and then in column of fours, and the companies studded with recruits who have had only a few months' training, marched past in perfect unison, and with the swing of veteran soldiers, headed by the regimental band under Captain Perver. Major R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, M.C., is second in command, and the company majors are Major Allan MacNab, Major G. R. Melton, Major James Turnbull, Major H. G. Mason, and Lieut. John Duncan.

The inspection routine included besides the ceremonial, infantry drill by companies, machine gun drill, anti-gas and anti-aircraft drill, signal demonstration and bugle band drill. The bugle band under command of Drum-Major Hugh Davidson, gave a splendid performance.

Regimental Sergt.-Major William Piercy was warmly congratulated by General Hertzberg who stepped over to him and said, "You have every reason to be proud of the showing the regiment has made to-night." then chatted with Piercy about his record, which is indicated by a long service medal.

Colonel Dewarb expressed himself as pleased with the showing of the regiment during inspection and paid tribute to Inspector James F. Reid of the city police force and other officers of the force who kept the parade ground free of spectators. More than five hundred people watched the regiment go through its paces.

No Quarantine For School Pupils

Disappointed pupils in one class at King Edward School are dragging their steps a little slower this week. Not hard-hearted, they are probably sorry their teacher is ill with scarlet fever, but likely take a realistic attitude towards the whole affair and reason that if she's going to be ill with such a contagious disease they should all have a holiday out of it.

But the class will not be quarantined, according to K. S. Wightman, public school inspector. Miss Sarah Leonard, the teacher, is in quarantine at the Queen Mary Isolation Hospital, and classes will continue as usual until the end of the term, under a supply teacher, he said. "Miss Leonard's case was caught soon after she had contracted scarlet fever, and her illness is not serious," he said. "There is no need to quarantine the class as far as I can see."

Belleville Band Assists Service

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, June 22.—Members of the Belleville Salvation Army Band aided the local corps in their open air service on Tuesday evening and the high quality of music attracted so large a number of citizens that police were called upon to keep a lane of traffic open. The band under direction of Bandmaster D. Wardle had visited Warkworth earlier in the evening and stopped in Campbellford to assist in the regular Tuesday service after which ladies of the Home League served lunch at the citadel. Also assisting Captain D. Sharpe with the service were Capt. W. S. Thompson of Trenton and Major H. S. Alderman of Belleville.

Five Moderators Have Failed To Finish Terms

TORONTO, June 22.—Rev. Dr. Donald MacOdrum, who died June 20, after being recently elected Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, was the fifth Moderator since Union in 1925 to fail, either through illness or death, to complete his term of office. He was the third Presbyterian minister to die during Moderatorship.

Rev. Dr. W. Leslie Clay of Victoria, B. C., elected Moderator in 1927, died in hospital in Winnipeg after nine months' service. Rev. Dr. John Buchanan, veteran missionary to India, chosen Moderator in 1928, on the eve of the General Assembly in 1929, over which he was scheduled to preside, suffered a broken leg, which prevented him from rounding out his duties. Rev. Dr. David Perry of Wingham, Moderator in 1929, died at his home four months before the completion of his term. Rev. Dr. H. R. Grant of Fort William, taken ill shortly after being elected Moderator in 1933, was incapacitated practically throughout the period of his office.

Staggered by the blow of Dr. MacOdrum's sudden death, officials of the Presbyterian Church in Canada are unable as yet to say who will assume the duties of Moderator for the remainder of the year. As another Moderator cannot be elected until the next meeting of the General Assembly, 1939, one or several of the ex-Moderators are likely to be asked to act. Officials yesterday expressed themselves as undaunted by the trail of tragedy which has overtaken so many of their Moderators during the last decade.

Deputy Fire Marshal Saville and Provincial Constable David Silvester spent Tuesday investigating the fire which destroyed the sawmill of the Purdy Lumber Company, Limited, in Chandos Township, early on Sunday morning.

Constable Silvester stated to-day that the officials are of the opinion that the fire was deliberately set, but further than that they are not prepared to go at present. It was discovered that a large quantity of gasoline had been taken out of the tanks at the mill on Saturday night, according to Constable Silvester.

Honorary Degree Is Given Rev. P. J. Kelly

At the 90th annual convocation of the University of Ottawa Sunday night, Rev. P. J. Kelly, rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, was one of four Canadians receiving the honorary degree of Doctor of Law. The three others were: Senator Charles Bourgeois, K.C., of Three Rivers, Que., William Perkins Bull, K.C., of Toronto, distinguished writer and historian, and Antonio Prince of Woonsocket, Rhode Island. Prior to the graduation exercises, the rector of the University and the staff tendered a dinner to the four men chosen to receive the University's honors.

Rev. Dr. Vincent Carson, O.M.I., introduced Father Kelly who recalled his days at the University as a very happy memory. He thanked the rector for the honor conferred upon him. Presentation of prizes and the reading of valedictories completed the evening's program.

Sixty types of mice and 14 of rats are to be exhibited at the London Zoo.

Pupils On Trial

When a cameraman is permitted to take pictures of people inside a Canadian court room, that's news. The boys and girls shown in these pictures are on trial all right, but not for any crime. They are children from county rural schools, writing examinations at the Peterborough County court house. At LEFT is a group seated in the jury box. Because they were trying an oral examination at the time they have no books. Front row left to right are Evelyn Tedford, Young's Point; Mabel Manley, S. S. No. 14, Otonabee; Margaret Webster, S. S. 14, Otonabee; Marie Leahy, S. S. No. 3, Douro; Rita Heffernan, S. S. No. 9, Douro; Mary Ryan, S. S. No. 9, Douro. Back row, left to right are Donald Trude, S. S. No. 11, Smith; Donald Milburn, S. Two Are Fined For Speeding

Speeding on No 7 Highway has proven an expensive pastime for A. C. McDermott, Pinewood, Your Mills, Ont., and Allan C. Secord 79 College View Avenue, Toronto for the two were charged on informations laid by Traffic Officer Gordon Broughton in traffic court before Magistrate O. A. Langley K. C. this morning and fined $10 and costs on written pleas of guilty.

The informations alleged that each of the motorists was driving at the rate of 70 miles an hour when seen by the traffic officer.

Two hundred and sixty-three entrance class school children are through school for the year. There will be no examinations in midsummer heat for them. For that number in Peterborough public schools have passed on teachers' recommendations. Between 130 and 140 others will have to try departmental exams, Inspector Wightman said today.

A STOLEN TRUCK.

The local police would like very much to be able to locate the joy-rider who stole a truck from the rear of J. K. Hughes' service station yesterday and did some freakish driving that suggested he had been imbibing not wisely but too well, before abandoning the stolen machine near the corner of Park Hill Road and Park Street. Mr. Hughes had just purchased the truck and there were no license markers on it when it was taken.

Vocal Recital Unusually Fine

Music lovers who attended the vocal recital given by Gladys Hill Groombridge Monday evening in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. were privileged to enjoy something just a little above the average in musical entertainment.

Gladys Hill Groombridge is a pupil of Mrs. W. A. Greenslade, and a promising singer. Her voice is a rich soprano, and she sings with flawless purity and ease. Particularly was her rendition of the well-known "L'amour Toujourns Lamour" by Rudolf Friml', and the audience would not let her got until she had sung it through a second time.

She was accompanied by Mrs. Florence Dallin, A.C.A.M., former pupil of Mrs. W. A. Greenslade and Ernest Seitz, of Toronto.

Mrs. Eveline Foster, one of Peterborough's leading violinists, executed her selections with the usual commendable skill. A special request number "Le Canarie" by the composer Poliakin, a difficult composition of trills, roulades and runs uniting to bring to listeners the joyous, flute-like notes of the canary, brought continued applause, and the artist graciously responded with the encore "Salut D'amour by Edgar.

Accompanists were Mrs. W. A. Greenslade, Mrs. F. Dallin and Mrs. D. Quinlan.

The complete program was as follows: Piano, "Rondo Brillante" (Weber); Vocal, "Je Dis Que Rien Ne Mepouvante" (Micaelas, Song from Carmen), by the composer Georges Bizet was sung entirely in French; Violin, "Hungarian Rhapsody" (Hauser); vocal, "The Wind's in the South" (John Prindle Scott); piano, "Arabesque" (DeBussy); vocal, "With Verdure Clad" (Haydn); violin, "Le Canarie" (Poliakin) and "Salut D'amour" (Edgar); vocal "One Fine Day, Act II Madame Butterfly" (Di. G. Puccini); piano, "Valse Chromatique (Goddard); vocal "A Heart That's Free" (Alfred G. Robyn), and "Lamour Toujours Lamour" (Rudolf Friml').

Release Of Car Forbidden During Appeal

TORONTO, June 22.— Attorney-General Conant yesterday directed that no impounded motor car may be returned from the impounding conviction.

"From a recent case in the York County Magistrate's court and from other jurisdictions," said Mr. Conant, "the question has arisen as to the disposition of impounded motor vehicles pending appeals from the Magistrate's conviction.

"At the 1938 session of the Legislature, the Highway Traffic Act was extended so that the impounding motor vehicles for three months follows conviction in many cases which did not previously involve this additional penalty, It is probably because of this extension that the question has arisen.

"The Highway Traffic Act makes no provision for the release of a motor vehicle pending an appeal. It must follow, therefore, that even though an appeal is entered the motor vehicle must remain impounded until the appeal has been disposed of, or until the expiration of the three months following the original conviction."

The Attorney-General also made it clear that only offenses committed after June 8—the date on which the impounding legislation became operative—involve the impounding penalty.

Wrong Markers On Motorcycle

When a tire on his motorcycle blew out and the machine hurtled off Highway No. 7 into the ditch on Monday evening, giving him and his companion a bad shaking up and halting a journey to Montreal in search of work, bad luck was not through with Edmund Ebert of Lindsay.

Traffic Officer Lloyd McClure investigated the accident, and while doing so discovered that the licence markers on Ebert's machine had not been issued for that particular motorcycle.

As a result the Lindsay youth found himself charged before Magistrate O. A. Langley in Police Court this morning with having the wrong licence markers and he was fined $10.00, and $2.50 costs, when he pleaded guilty.

It was explained that the accused had two machines but only one set of markers.

She decided on this course to obtain money after reading of successful operations in transferring the cornea of one person's eye to another in order to restore the sight to the blind visual organ.

"Some people will probably think I'm crazy, but I know what I'm doing." Mrs. Middleton said.

"I can't see any point in raising a family of undernourished children," she said. "Four-months-old Alice is three and a half pounds underweight. V' just keep slipping back more every day. My husband is a barber by trade but he lost his business."

Trousseau Tea Delightful Affair

Mrs. S. Wood, Princess street, entertained at a delightful trousseau tea in honor of her daughter, Miss Olive Rightmeyer, whose marriage takes place in Toronto Saturday.

Amidst a profusion of stately foxgloves, tall delphiniums and beautiful peonies, Mrs. Wood and her daughter, standing in front of the fireplace in the living room, received their many guests. Mrs. Wood was wearing a toe length dress of black chiffon figured in mauve, blue and rose, with corsage of mauve and pink sweet peas. Miss Rightmeyer was lovely in white chiffon with tucked bodice and bolero jacket. Her corsage was of Supreme roses and white sweet peas.

Little Olive Dianne Cullen made a dainty little door attendant in the afternoon, and her brother Robert was attendant during the evening. They are the niece and nephew of the bride-elect.

Mrs. Morgan Cullen assisted in receiving the guests, and the trousseau linens, shower gifts and wedding presents were shown by Mrs. Herbert Dawson and Misses Lola Leach and Edna Thompson.

One-Third Of World's Total Gold Production Comes From South Africa

Reuters).

SOUTH AFRICA'S total production of gold for 1937 is estimated at the record figure of 11,734,574 fine ounces, one-third of the world's total production, which is estimated at 35,000,000 fine ounces.

The previous production record of 11,558,532 fine ounces was established in 1932. With the exception of 22 fine ounces all the gold produced in South Africa came from the Transvaal, the output of the Witwatersrand Mines being 10,829,341 fine ounces.

The government mining engineer reported: "The significance of this record production lies in the fact that it has been achieved on lower pay limits brought about by the higher currency price of gold."

New Records were also established last year in the number of tons treated, the number of persons employed and salaries and wages paid, and stores consumed.

Cheese Made In Peterboro' Worth $121,000

The twelve cheese factories in Peterborough county made 927,970 pounds of cheese last year worth $121,000 at the average price of thirteen cents a pound, W. J. Moore, dairy instructor, told the county council this morning in asking for a grant to be competed for by the cheesemakers of this section at the Belleville dairy products exhibition late this year.

The request was referred to the finance committee with Reeve Martin Coughlin's proposal that the grant be made large enough to obviate any appeals being made to the township council's for similar support.

Mr. Moore was accompanied by H. B. Wood of the Trent Bridge cheese factory and the Campbellford cheese board, Gilbert McIlmoyle of Selwyn and Chas. McNulty of Asphodel.

Mr. Moore said he hoped the farmers generally appreciated the value to them of the cheese industry. The income of $121,000 from the cheese sold last year was money that came into the county from buyers and consumers in Great Britain, whereas locally made butter is consumed at home.

"Butter money is just circulating among ourselves," Mr. Moore explained. "As a matter of fact the price of butter in the Old Country is higher than on our own markets. It should be realized that the cheese factories receive the surplus of milk which thereby reduces the supply and surplus of butter. One result of that condition was shown last year when butter advanced from around 22 cents a pound to 42 cents and held at a high level all during the winter. That was a direct benefit to the dairy farmers, and a lot of credit should go to the cheese factories that took the surplus milk from our creameries."

Mr. Moore said the factories of this district are making the best cheese in Canada, and "you haven't to go out of this district for it either."

Mr. Wood said his factory is seventy-five yards north of the Northumberland boundary. The proposed grant from the council would be competed for only by the cheesemakers of the county at the Belleville cheese show next December which was being planned on even a bigger scale than the highly successful exhibition of last December.

Mr. McNulty and Mr. McIlmoyle supported the request, and pointed out that Peterborough was the only county in the cheese area that did not contribute prize money for local competition at the last Belleville show.

To Attend Convention

"The cities are organized, they have their association of mayors for example, and if we don't support our rural organizations we're going to lose out," said Warden McDonald in finance committee of the county council this morning in reference to appointing delegates to a summer convention of the association of rural municipalities.

On Reeve A. B. Mann's motion, seconded by Reeve Gifford, Warden McDonald and Reeve J. Russell Thompson, Norwood, were appointed to attend the meeting.

One of the questions on the agenda is "Are you in favor of abolishing county councils" A decisive negative was given to that proposal at the legislative committee's meeting Tuesday afternoon.

A deputation from Victoria County Council was heard this morning on several matters relating to roads and bridges and were invited to be dinners guests at King's Hotel. Warden T. H. Martin of Verulam Township, Reeve Neil Wilson of Somerville, Reeve Guiry and Councillor Fee of Emily and Frank L. Weldon, county clerk, were the visiting neighbors. They were assured that a former agreement to repair the Kinmount bridge would be renewed for work to be done this year, and the assumption as a county road of several miles of the boundary between Smith and Ennismore on the one side and Emily on the other was referred to the roads committee.

Warden McDonald said Peterborough was glad to welcome Warden Martin and his associates, and added that meetings should not be such rare events. Warden Martin informed the council that the Bobcaygeon bridges were going to be taken over by the province, assurance to that effect having been obtained on Tuesday. Peterborough County was interested to the extent of 25 per cent of their cost, and he suggested that a resolution from Peterborough would strengthen the petition that had been presented to the department.

Entranced by the southwest country, and in love with a footloose Texan, Ellen Dale, Hollywood screen star, has just decided to purchase an Arizona ranch and forsake her film career. A few days at the ranch of the wealthy Mexican Montoya family, which extended its hospitality to Ellen and Bill after a lucky parachute jump from Baron's plane during a storm, had given both the young actress and the Texan a new viewpoint on life. At Nogales, where Bill had driven Ellen to return to Hollywood, she makes her new decision and asks him to manage the ranch she plans to buy. He accepts but is hesitant to speak of his love for her because of his position and her wealth. They find the type of ranch they desire in the vast Durango property, 6,000 neglected acres in a beautiful Arizona setting.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 20

BILL BARON and Ellen had left Nogales soon after breakfast, and had enjoyed riding and walking about the Durango property for several hours. They were riding back toward town, peace in their hearts, when Ellen thought to glance at her wrist watch.

"Bill, it's two o'clock," she exclaimed.

"Hunh! That explains it, then!"

"Explains what?"

"My suffering. I was in misery and didn't realize why. You don't happen to have a sandwich in your reticule, do you, ma'am?"

"No," she laughed gaily, "but I'd better get one inside of me pretty soon, or I'll be poor company. Do you see a restaurant?"

The last was asked in jest. For they could see nothing at the moment but rocks and soil and mountains, and occasional stray steers that looked curiously at the automobile.

"We'll have to take a subway," Bill replied, very seriously.

She laughed again, happily.

"Don't you ever get homesick for New York, Ellen? No town like it."

"That's true. But I don't miss it. I didn't have very much there, Bill. I clerked in a store, and had some friends. But I never found——"

She wanted to say "love," but she just stopped.

"I know," he said, understandingly. "Some people can get lost out here in these wild hills. Others can be lost in New York. I mean, lost inside, or—all mixed up and unhappy. You know."

"I know, Bill. I do."

Down the road a mile they curved over a hill and came onto an adobe cottage, occupied evidently by a Mexican family. Bill pulled to a stop in front of it. A Mexican woman looked out.

"Buenos dias," Bill greeted.

"How do you do?" she replied, smiling.

"Um, poor guess. Well, anyway we wondered if we could get a bite to eat, senora, regardless of the language used."

"It is late, senor. But I have some the left-over. Come in?"

Ellen was a trifle diffident about it. This place was no cafe, no roadside inn, bore no signs of any kind. Rather it was a dwelling. Ellen thought they might be taking liberties.

"Maybe I ought to say," Bill read her thoughts, "that it's all right to do this. It is an unwritten law of hospitality out here, to feed the hungry traveler night or day."

The front room was that of a poor family, utilized for sleeping and dining alike, they could tell. The furnishings were scanty. But all of it was clean. Four small children had edged into the room to stare at the visitors, but the mother came soon and shooed them outside.

Presently the lady came from her kitchen with a white cloth. She spread it on an unpainted wooden table.

"What lovely linen!" Ellen exclaimed, and meant it. The hostess smiled in pride.

"I make him," she explained.

"You—made it yourself? It's beautiful!"

"Iss drawn work. Mexican drawn work. My mother show me when I wass girl in Mexico."

It was an incongruous touch, a piece of genuine artistry in an otherwise poverty-ridden home. Bill said nothing, but he watched the two women and listened to their talk with keen interest.

Soon the Mexican woman brought in two bowls and set them down, with spoons.

"Iss beans," she stated, simply.

Ellen smiled warmly, but hesitated. Bill, on the other hand, immediately picked up his spoon and began to use it. The beans were huge dark things in a coupy liquid, heavily peppered. There were flecks of meat, abundant grease. The odor was tempting. Bill went on eating, his eyes turned away to conceal the twinkle he knew to be in them. Hesitantly Ellen Dale, the internationally known movie star, took her cut.

Conversation was missing for the next 10 minutes, but when Bill had cleaned his bowl he sat back expansively and said, "Gracias, senora, muchas gracias!"

"You are welcome," the lady said, kindly.

Ellen's bowl was empty too, surprisingly, even to her. There had bee no bread. No crackers. No drinks. Nothing but an exqusite hand-made linen tablecloth and bowls of plebeian Mexican beans.

"If you will pardon us, senora, we are in something of a hurry and must be going," Bill began. "May the saints bless you for your kindness to us tis day." He had arisen, and he bowed to his hostess now.

Ellen was fumbling tentatively at her purse. Bill quickly caught the motion and—hiding it with his body—placed his hand restrainingly over hers. Then he led her outside.

The children were there again, somewhat dirty but not unattractive. One of them held a tiny doll of woven straw, evidently made by the mother or maybe the father of this family.

"Ho, muchachita!" Bill spoke to the little girl. "Let me see your dolly, eh?"

She held it out to him. He pretended to give it minute inspection, talking, smiling. The children all were charmed. Ellen looked on.

"I need a doll, just like this," Bill announced seriously. "I will pay for this one, muchacha mia. All right?"

He held out a silver dollar, and the deal was consummated at once. He bowed then again to their hostess and took Ellen away.

When they had driven a mile or two, without a word between them, Ellen came out of her thinking.

"It was all the food they had, Bill. Wasn't it? Beans, I mean?"

"Right."

"Its not far back to Nogales. Fifteen minutes or so."

"Yep."

"You wanted to show me something."

"I was hungry," Bill insisted.

"You know a great many things, Bill Baron. I think you are wonderful."

He looked at her then. He could tell that she was not joking. And that she was not flirting either.

"Thanks, it's nothing. You can always get food like that out here. Maybe not appetizers and entrees and delicatessen a la mode, but—food. Cooking sterilizes beans, El-Elen."

She didn't say anything.

They rode on back into town and he dropped her at the hotel. He would be busy with business details, he said, for the afternoon. She admitted the walking and riding had fatigued her a bit; she would rest.

The car Bill drove was rented. When he paid the bill, it amounted to more than $20.

"No percentage in that," he growled to himself, and walked around to an automobile dealer. An unctuous salesman greeted him.

"Did you wish to look at a car?"

"No. I want that sedan," Bill pointed. "Service it, insure it, put on best tires, put an emergency grub box in the trunk with canned grub and water, deliver it tomororw to the hotel."

The salesman was jittery. Sales hadn't been any too good lately. He was yessing all over the place.

"And say—" Bill suddenly jabbed, "glue or bolt a piece of raw cowhide, hair out, to each front door. Brand the hide DD. That's for the Dale-Durango ranch."

"Yes, sir," the salesman nodded. "But—I never heard of the Dale-Durango!"

"You will.'

Bill walked out. He had to contact a lawyer. He wanted to dicker with an architect. He had a lot to do and it kept him busy until after 6 p.m., when he discovered the hunger urge again had gripped him. He thought of Ellen then, fondly. He'd give her an American dinner tonight. Swell girl. If he had enough money, he'd—oh well.

He called her on the telephone, feeling a trifle smug and satisfied.

"Oh, but Bill, I'm so sorry," she apologized, when he had mentioned dinner. "But I have a dinner date now. It's almost seven o'clock, and —Felix Montoya was here waiting to see me."

Read Palms for Fun—Intrigue Your Friends

No Two Palms Are Alike

What personality secrets hide in the palms of your friends?

You can quickly learn to read the most important lines. Let's trace the fascinating possibilities these four hands reveal:

1. Does the Fate Line branch to both first and third fingers, to the Mounts of Jupiter and Apollo? Real artistic ability and lots of ambition make success certain.

2. Does the Heart Line rise on the Mount of Jupiter? Love that is loyal and adoring, able to endure countless tribulations.

3. A star on the Mount of Apollo? Great wealth. A star on any finger tip means good luck through life.

4. Do Head and Life Lines form a sharp angle? A sensitive, intelligent, charming personality.

No two palms in the world are alike! Look at your own. Your left hand shows qualities you were born with; your right hand, what you do to develop them.

Every tiniest line has a meaning—marriage, children, adventure travel. Our 32-page booklet explains them all. Gives diagrams.

DOROTHY DIX

DEAR MISS DIX—Some years ago I was left a widower, since which time I have given my children my undivided devotion, time and all the financial means at my disposal. Now they are all grown and working except one boy, who will soon be 15. I love my children dearly and they have well rewarded all my care and sacrifices, but now they have gone about the business of life for themselves and I am not selfish enough to wish it otherwise. I am nearing 50, have good health and have kept myself young sharing the joys and problems of my family. For a long time I have been curbing the desire for the association and companionship of some woman of my own age, but have refrained from marriage fearing to put a stepmother over the children. Now that they no longer need me, except the boy, would you advise me to marry again and try to fill my last years with understanding companionship, or would it be best for me to continue living with and for my children?

A DEVOTED DADDY.

Answer:

I think you would be very wise to marry, provided you made a suitable choice of a wife. By that I mean if you marry a woman your own age class and who has a virtually similar background to yours and one whom you have known long enough and well enough to be sure of her character and disposition. Any such woman would be a good matrimonial risk, especially if she was a childless widow or an old maid.

I am strong for the marriage of the middle-aged because as we grow older and are less inclined to seek diversion abroad, the more we are compelled to find our happiness in our own homes, the more we need some cheerful and congenial companion to bear us company and to whom we can say, "Don't you remember?"

It is a dreary thing for a man or woman to eat meals with no one to talk to but Fido or the cat, and to spend long solitary evenings killing time reading Idiots' Delight. Yet this is the unhappy fate of numberless widows and wdowers who long for mates, but are kept from remarrying by thinking they are too old, or that their friends will criticize them, or because their children object.

Yet these oldsters need husbands and wives just as much as the young do and have just as good a chance of happiness in marriage. For even if they cannot inspire in each other a passionate and romantic love, they can give each other a beautiful and sustaining friendship, and that is what all happy marriages come to in the end. Moreover, the marriage of an elderly couple serves two good ends that justifies it, if nothing else did.

It enables them to have their own home and live in peace, dignity and independence, instead of being driven by sheer loneliness into being enforced gusts in their children's homes where they have to be either rubber stamps or else firebrands. And it saves the children's homes from the eternal friction that is always engendered by having a mother-in-law or a father-in-law in them.

It is folly to talk about children and parents sufficing each other for companionship, no matter how devoted they are to each other. They belong to different generations and that space of time even love doesn't bridge when it comes to mutual understanding. The children are bored with Father's and Mother's reminiscences and with their references to people and places and amusements of which they have never heard. And Father and Mother find their children's conversation about things of which they know nothing and in which they take no interest equally dull. So the two soon talk out.

It is only the people of our own age with whom we are really companionable, and that is why it is a good thing for the elderly to remarry.

* * * * * *

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am a business woman, 42 years old. In the cafe where I have eaten my lunches for the last four years a good-looking, dignified, middle-aged man has also eaten his at a table near mine. Naturally we have noticed each other and nodded a greeting as we passed. Finally he mustered up the courage to ask me if he might eat at my table. I consented and we have become fine manly in every way, and we have drifted into going to the friends. He is good company, has nice manners, is gentle-movies or somewhere once or twice a week. I enjoy his society and I presume he enjoys mine, but my sister, with whom I live, thinks I have disgraced the whole family by having met this man without a proper introduction. What do you think?

FORTY-TWO.

Answer:

I think your sister's ideas on the subject sound as if they had been brought down from the hair trunk in the attic. She is evidently twin sister to the punctilious lady who refused to be saved when she was drowning because she had not been introduced to the man who was trying to pull her out of the water.

A pick-up is one thing, so is a masher, but getting acquainted with a middle-aged gentleman with whom you have practically eaten lunch for four year is something else yet again, and it would have been silly prudishness to have stood on a mere formality and denied yourself the pleasure of an agreeable acquaintanceship because you met the man in a restaurant instead of a drawing room and he was not presented to you a la Emily Post.

Certainly a business woman of 42 should know her onions where men are concerned, and be in no danger from passing strangers, so you can assure your sister that she is needlessly alarmed on your account.

DOROTHY DIX.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

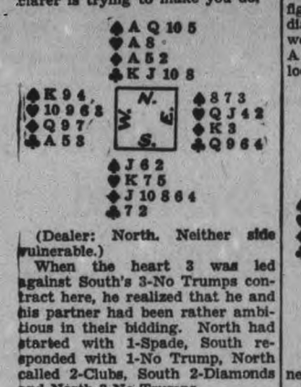
"The Authority on Authorities"

FOOLISH COVERING

"COVER AN honor with an honor" is a useful rule for people who cannot think. But if you can figure out the probable location of other honors and secondary cards in the suit, as you often can, you will sometimes see that covering an honor is the worst possible play, just exactly what the declarer is trying to make you do.



(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

When the heart 3 was led against South's 3-No Trumps contract here, he realized that he and his partner had been rather ambitious in their bidding. North had started with 1-Spade, South responded with 1-No Trump, North called 2-Clubs, South 2-Diamonds and North 3-No Trumps.

Declarer won the first trick in the dummy to preserve his only possible entry to his hand. Then in an endeavor to cash a few diamonds, he led the 2 from dummy, which East captured with the K. The return of the heart Q was taken with the K and the diamond J offered. West handed the contract to declarer by covering this with his Q. The diamond A won and the small diamond enabled South to get back to his hand to run the remaining diamonds and finesse the spades.

West should have been able to figure that if he had allowed the diamond J to hold, the next round would have had to be won with the A and declarer would have been locked in the dummy.

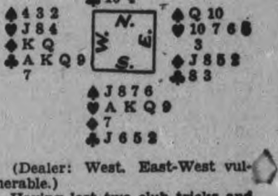
Tomorrow's Prob:



(Dealer: West. East-West vulnerable.)

Having lost two club tricks and an over-ruffed club, and a heart then being led, how should North plan the balance of his play at 4-Spades?

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

"Well," said Mr. Punch, smiling at Knarf and Hanid, "a lot of things happened next. The cat kept on playing the fiddle faster and faster, and Susie, the cow, kicked up her heels and jumped higher and higher. That was her way of dancing. It was very curious to watch her. She danced a jig with one foot, and a hornpipe with another, and a fandango with a third, and with her fourth leg she just hopped."

"And didn't the cat finally stop playing the fiddle?" Hanid asked.
